A covenant is a compact between two or more persons. The covenants of the Bible are between God and His people. Inasmuch as God is so superior to man the covenants between Him and man resolve themselves into conditional promises. God makes a promise to man upon certain conditions. Man accepts the promise and agrees to fulfill the conditions. This is the character of the covenants between God and man. After they are made it is man's place to fulfill the conditions and God's place to keep the promise attached to the conditions. This He always does.

In the history of the human race God has made many conditional promises to mankind, but two of these stand out pre-eminently above all others as God's covenant with His people.

1. The covenant of works. This is the covenant of the Old Testament dispensation. By this covenant God promised man eternal life upon condition of perfect obedience to His law. This covenant was reiterated to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and the other leaders of Israel. God's people accepted this covenant. They agreed to the conditions. Upon their part they agreed to obey God's law. At Mount Sinai, when Moses had received the law from God, "he told the people all the words of the Lord and all the judgments, and all the people answered with one voice and said, All the words which the Lord hath said will we do." When sprinkled blood Moses solemnized their ratification of the covenant. But alas for the frailty of human nature! Swift to promise, it is slow to pay. Israel did not here nor at any other time keep its covenant vows, and a new and better covenant became necessary.

2. The covenant of grace. The covenant of works having failed to save man, God made the covenant of grace with which people to-day and their salvation might be assured. By this new and better covenant, which was prophesied even in the Old Testament (Jer. xxxi, 31-34), God promised to save His people upon their acceptance of the sacrifice of His Son in their stead. Those who refused the law to be saved were condemned. Christ was to keep the law and by His death pay the penalty for the broken law. Acceptance of Christ and His work under the new covenant were to bring salvation. This is the covenant of grace, and it is in operation today and should be accepted by all men everywhere. It seems incredible that such a blessing as eternal salvation could be so easily obtained. So incredible does it appear that many have doubted or rejected it. Christ crucified has been a stumbling block to the Jews and foolishness to the Greeks. But we need not doubt the covenant of grace. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation. It is God's covenant, and He will be faithful to it.

Our covenant with God should be as inviolable as His covenant with us. If we have accepted the covenant of grace, we should be strong in Christian faith and in Christian endeavor. "He is faithful who hath promised." Let us be faithful who have accepted the promise with its accompanying conditions.

Endeavor In Unexpected Places.

In an appendix to her husband's book, "Training the Church of the Future," a manual of the Christian Endeavor movement published by Funk & Wagnalls company, New York, Mrs. Francis E. Clark says: Christian Endeavor has found its way into many unexpected places. In 1890 a society was formed in a Wisconsin state prison, and the chaplain found it a real help in his work among the prisoners. Because of the good work done in that society other societies have been organized in other prisons, notably in Kentucky, where a splendid work has been done. Flourishing prison societies are found in Indiana, Iowa, New Mexico, New York and several other states. Societies have also been formed in schools and in hospitals among the nurses and among policemen and among traveling men, in the army and in many other places where no one would have thought of finding them, but their object is always the same, to help their members to be better Christians.

LOCAL YOUNG FOLK JOINED IN WEDLOCK

Marriage of Miss Elizabeth R. Adams to Samuel B. Beekman October 29.

AT THE GROOM'S HOME

THE MEMBERS OF THE BRIDAL PARTY WERE PRETTILY GOWNED.

Ceremony Was Performed by Rev. John MacMurray—Couple Will Take Up Their Residence in This City—A Pretty Ceremony.

In a prettily decorated corner of the library at the home of the groom's mother on Clinton avenue, Miss Elizabeth Rosalia Adams, of this city, was made the wife of Samuel Bloomfield Beekman, at 7:30 October 29. Rev. John MacMurray, of the Monroe Avenue church, was the officiating clergyman and guests from many places witnessed the event.

Miss Edith Hutton, of Nanuet, N. Y., was maid of honor, while Edward H. Beekman, a brother of the groom, and Clifford Manning, acted as ushers. The bridal party took its position while the "Lohengrin" wedding march was rendered by Miss Etta Randolph, piano, and Miss Laura Hutton, violin. Miss Adams was attired in a pretty gown of white mulle and carried a bouquet of bride roses and chrysanthemums. Blue organdie with trimmings formed the gown of the maid of honor. She carried chrysanthemums. In addition to potted plants and ferns, chrysanthemums also were prominent in the decorations of parlor and library.

Following the ceremony a reception was held and supper was served to the assembled guests. Late in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Beekman left on a wedding tour, the destination of which was carefully guarded. On returning they will reside in this city.

Both young people were handsomely remembered with gifts of a useful and ornamental nature and various little tokens were exchanged in the bridal party. The groom's gift to the bride was a jewelled locket and to the ushers, pearl pins. The maid of honor received a pretty jewel from the bride.

THEATRICAL.

At the Academy of Music, New York, "The Ninety and Nine," Ramsay Morris's new drama, has made the biggest sensation of any play presented in the metropolis for years. Aside from the story of the play which is absorbingly dramatic and appealing, the production which has been given to it by Frank McKee is on a marvelous scale of magnitude and elaborateness. Referring to the opening performance the New York World says: "The author with one mighty stroke of mechanical ingenuity, combined with theatrical illusion, has set a mark far and away above any of his competitors." In regard to the sensational effect referred to The World says: "Steam piled up to a terrible catastrophe. A little Indiana hamlet was supposed to be encircled by a raging prairie and forest fire, and its three thousand people were threatened with a horrible death. On the platform of the little station of Cleves, thirty miles away, were scores of excited people waiting as the telegraph slowly ticked the story of their peril. In the throng was the drunken hero and the woman who was trying to save him. There was also the villain the cur. The railroad official, whose special train and its powerful engine were standing in the railroad yard. The engineer was absent and the craven young millionaire, who himself knew all about the engine, had refused to take the risk of making the dash through the fire-swept country, on the mission of rescue. The unsteady drink-racked hero sprang forward to take his place. Darkness, a moment of suspense and then the curtain rose again, upon a lurid exciting scene. The big stage was literally covered with fire. Flames licked the tree trunks and withered the leaves. Telegraph poles blazed and the wires snapped and curled in the fierce heat. Sharp tongues of fire swept through the dry grass and mounted higher and higher and swept on blazing fiercely, and then dimmed in the rolling smoke. In the midst of it all was the massive locomotive, full sized and such as draw the modern express trains, almost hidden from view in the steam and smoke. Its big drive wheels spun on the track and it rocked and swayed as if driven at topmost speed. In the cab was the engineer, smoke-grimed and seared while the fireman dashed pails of water over him to protect him from the flying embers." The play is on for a long run at the Academy.

MISS LONG WINNER OF THE HOOLEY CUP

LAST PLAY FOR CUP

OTHER CONTESTS MARKED THE CONCLUDING DAY OF THE SEASON.

Miss Lydie E. Loiseaux Won the Driving Contest—Miss Long and Allan B. Laing Won Approaching and Putting Contest.

As far as the women of the Park Golf Club are concerned, the active season at the club came to an end Saturday afternoon. It was the time set for the final weekly competition for the Hooley cup, women's handicap, but as Miss Laura G. Long could not possibly be beaten no matter the result of the day's play, the competition was given up and the time devoted to the other events arranged for the occasion.

Early in May the play for the Hooley cup, a handsome silver trophy offered by E. S. Hooley, was started and since that time Miss Long has been the most successful in scoring points for it. Miss May S. Shreve, who won the Hooley cup last year, was second. The standing is as follows:

Miss Laura G. Long	23
Miss May Shreve	17
Miss Lydie Loiseaux	16
Miss Mabel Van Deventer	10½
Mrs. C. L. Goodrich	7½
Miss Harriet Shreve	4½
Miss Edna L. French	4½
Miss Elizabeth Curtis	3½
Miss Florence L. Townsend	1½

A driving contest, for a silver trophy offered by a friend of the club, was the first event of the afternoon. Which was divided. Lydie E. Loiseaux, whose three drives averaged 149 yards, 2 feet. Miss May Shreve was second and Miss Mabel Van Deventer third. The others who competed were Miss Laura G. Long, Miss Miss F. F. Clark and Miss Mary Wells.

Eight couples turned out for the approaching and putting contest which completed the afternoon's programme. First honors and suitable prizes were awarded to Miss Laura G. Long and Allan B. Laing, with a score of 11. Miss Mabel Van Deventer and Willard R. Faber were second. The others were Miss Lydie E. Loiseaux and Roberts deS. Newhall, Miss May Shreve and Charles B. Morse, Miss Jackson and Robert A. Suffren, Miss Nellie Valiant and Miss Edna French, Miss Mary Wells and Rev. J. O. McKelvey, Miss F. F. Clark and Rev. C. L. Goodrich.

An informal reception was held in the clubhouse where coffee and light refreshments were served. Mrs. Augustus Van Deventer presided at the table and was assisted in serving by some of the young women of the club. There were a number of guests present who divided their time between the chilly post of observation on the piazzas and the warm hearth stone before the roaring open fire. According to schedule, this closing reception should have been held Tuesday but it was postponed by the golf committee as the rain of the morning had tended to keep many away.

NEW CITY HIGH SCHOOL APPROVED BY COUNCIL

Chief Business Done at Monday Night's Meeting of the Common Council.

THE ROUTINE BUSINESS

STREET COMMITTEE FAILED TO GET TROLLEY COMPANY TO CHANGE.

Company Refused to Alter Its Present Method of Giving Transfers —Progress of the Suit Against the City—Other Matters.

The November meeting of the Common Council held Monday evening was taken up with the transaction of a considerable amount of routine business. In the absence of President Coriell, Councilman vanIerwerden occupied the chair, and George B. Wear acted as clerk pro tem. Councilmen Mellick, Pray and Beckle, in addition to Mr. Coriell, were also absent.

The meeting was a lengthy one by reason of the fact that the new rules and regulations for the fire department were presented by Mr. Lee and had to be read. In all there are ninety-nine sections. They were read and approved. Another matter that consumed much time was that in reference to the new Plainfield High School. The matter was presented to the Council by the Board of School Estimate through Mr. vanHerwerden, a member. The action of the board, taken upon the advice of the Board of Education, in designating $135,000 as the necessary amount for land and a new High School, was approved and the matter was referred to the finance committee of the Council for further consideration. Accompanying the report was a statement from the Board of Education explaining the present school accommodation and the need of increased room.

A petition was received from property-owners on Watchung avenue near Front street, calling the attention of the Council to the fact that Watchung avenue has not been widened as agreed to and the property-owners either want the work done or their money refunded. The matter was referred. Petitions for two electric lights on Westervelt avenue, between East Front street and the brook, one on the southwesterly side of Sherman avenue, between Grant and Monroe avenues, and one on Kensington avenue, between Watchung and Putnam avenues, were granted. The Plainfield Electric Light Company reported that all lights, five in number, have been located as ordered by the Council.

The Davis Realty Company asked the Council to cancel taxes assessed on Clinton avenue property for 1899 as the same had been paid. The matter was referred, as was also the petition of Manning & Runyon, who claimed that they were assessed for 309 feet of land adjoining their property on the east side of Berkely avenue, which they do not own. Mayor Jenkins appointed J. P. Clark a full paid member of the fire department. He has been a call-man for some time past. The appointment was confirmed.

Corporation Counsel Marsh reported several matters to the Council. In the suit of the American Sewage Disposal Company against the City of Plainfield, he stated that the case is now being prepared for argument. Regarding the case of Edward Marcellus, Jr., by his next best friend, Edward Marcellus, Sr., against the city, Mr. Marsh stated that the Supreme Court had decided that the sentence in the case was illegal and that with the reversal of the city court's decision the case was omitted. Mr. Marsh in explaining the matter stated that the city court's action was perfectly proper and that no authority is given for other procedure. In the case of L. M. Dunavan against the city, Mr. Marsh reported that a writ of certiorari had been granted the defendant and it was not opposed by the city, but he had not yet learned that the writ had been served. Mr. Marsh also reported that the provisions of the law in the appointment of three commissioners to assess benefits and damages for the permanent improvement of streets have been followed and the clerk will now serve notices on such property-owners who are affected.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that during the month of October 34 building permits were granted.

Mr. Daniel, acting for Mr. Mellick, chairman of the finance committee, reported back the matter of H. E. Gayle, wherein he had been assessed in error, and on his recommendation Mr. Gayle was relieved from the assessment. The same action was taken in the case of Edward L. Mack, who had paid $31.27 taxes in error. This sum was ordered returned to him. On a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel, the assessment for taxes against Chas. H. Graham, was cancelled it having been found to be in error.

On a motion by Mr. Lee two new fire hydrants were ordered. One on West Second street between Liberty street and Plainfield avenue and the other at the corner of Union street and Arlington avenue. Both were petitioned for. Mr. Lee stated further that fire alarm box No. 39 would be moved from the corner of West Sixth street and Lee place to Monroe avenue and West Sixth street, and a new box, No. 84, would be located at West Fourth street and Grant avenue. This action was taken in response to urgent need.

Mr. Tolles stated for the benefit of the Council and so that a record might be made of it, that after a determined effort, the street committee had failed to get the trolley company to change its present method of issuing transfers. The company took exception to the committee's interference, believing that it should conduct its own affairs without dictation in this matter.

Mr. Daniel offered a resolution which provided for the borrowing of $600 for the additional improvement of the sanitary sewer system, the same to be secured by notes. The same member also offered an ordinance, for Mr Mellick, which provides for the changing of the name of LaGrande avenue to East Seventh street. The ordinance was adopted on two readings and ordered advertised. This concluded the business of the evening and the Council adjourned for one week.

CENTRAL PLANS COAL YARD OF ITS OWN

Is Trying to Secure Certain Property Along Railroad With That End in View.

TO STORE COAL THERE

HAS MADE OFFER FOR CERTAIN TRACT IN PLAINFIELD.

General Plan for Railroad Company to Establish Yards All Along Its Line and Sell Coal Direct to the Local Consumers.

That there is likely to be a change in the method of selling coal to the consumers in Plainfield is evidenced by the fact that the New Jersey Central has been endeavoring to get control of certain property along the railroad with a view to establishing coal yards of their own in the near future. Already the company has made an offer for the property in question and an answer is awaited. In case the offer should be accepted it would mean that several families would have to move elsewhere. The property needed for the purpose mentioned comprises nearly the whole of one side of a block. This would give sufficient room to carry the necessary amount of coal.

As has already been stated in The Daily Press there has been a plan on foot for the New Jersey Central to establish its own yards along the line of the road, so that if any difficulty arises similar to the recent strike in the mining region the company can make provisions for it by storing coal along the line.

It was recently stated by the operators that they would not stand for any fancy prices in the price of coal, that is, the local dealers must let the consumers have coal at a reasonable figure or they would be barred from receiving a supply. It is no doubt for this reason that the railroad desires to protect itself and have places along the line where coal can be deposited.

It has been said that if this plan should be followed out the consumer would have to pay more money than heretofore to the local dealer. This, it is said, would not be true, as the company would sell direct and there would be no middleman's profit to figure in the deal.

Happy Hallowe'en.

One of the happy Hallowe'en parties held Friday evening was at the home of the Misses Minnie and Lydia Wyman, of East Front street. It was arranged by these young women and the affair was one of the good old-fashioned kind. There were thirty guests present and festivities continued until a late hour. The house was prettily decorated with fruits, vegetables, etc., and all kinds of games were played.

Miss Nettie Wilson, of Craig place, will sail Wednesday for Scotland, in company with Dr. John Wilson and two sisters, of Glasgow, who have been visiting here for the past week.

The annual meeting of the Organized Aid Association will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church Tuesday evening, November 11, at 8 o'clock for the purpose of listening to the reports of the year's work and electing officers of the association; also for the purpose of amending the by-laws. SKIRT WAS TOO SHORT.

Abbreviated Bathing Suit in Red, Green and Blue Leads to Breaking of Engagement.

A matter of three inches on a bathing suit that really would not be voluminous if it had 13 inches added to it has been the cause of a broken engagement.

The insidious suit, which steeled the heart of a man and put a proud girl on her mettle, is owned by Miss Sallie Kerstris, of Upper Roxborough, N. Y. The suit is made of red, green and blue cloth, and from the description would be an admirable thing for flagging trains.

A few nights ago, says the Chicago Tribune, Miss Kerstris and Wesley Kinlamb, her affianced husband, attended a small reception at the home of a mutual friend in Denver, according to the Post of that city. Miss Kerstris and her friend had ordered bathing suits together, and they were looking them over in the women's wraproom. Some one dared Miss Kerstris to don her suit and ask Kinlamb to inspect it. It was no sooner said than done, but when Kinlamb learned the nature of the summons he refused to go.

SKIRT WAS TOO SHORT.
(Dotted Line Shows How Her Fiance Wanted Suit Lengthened.)

Thereupon Miss Kerstris and her friends repaired to the room where the lover was. One glance was enough to tell him that the skirt was too inconspicuous. He turned away blushing. Everybody else in the room seemed to be delighted with the garb.

"How do you like it, Wesley?" asked Miss Kerstris.

"It's awful," he replied, ungallantly. "You can't wear that thing at Glenwood Springs."

"Well, I intend to wear it," said Miss Kerstris, with an angry stamp of her foot.

"You are not going to Glenwood Springs with me unless you have that skirt made at least three inches longer."

"Then I won't go to Glenwood Springs with you. I won't speak to you."

"Very well. Good-night," and Kinlamb left the house.

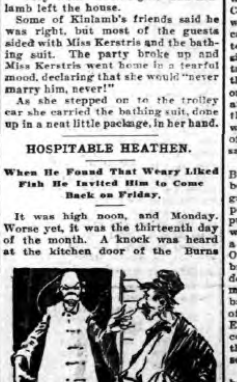
Some of Kinlamb's friends said he was right, but most of the guests sided with Miss Kerstris and the bathing suit. The party broke up and Miss Kerstris went home in a tearful mood, declaring that she would "never marry him, never!"

As she stepped on to the trolley car she carried the bathing suit, done up in a neat little package, in her hand.

HOSPITABLE HEATHEN.

When He Found That Weary Liked Fish He Invited Him to Come Back on Friday.

It was high noon, and Monday. Worse yet, it was the thirteenth day of the month. A knock was heard at the kitchen door of the Burns mansion. The Chinese servant opened the door. A tramp of long and varied experience accosted him, says the New York Times.



"YOU LIKEE FLISH?"

"I've been traveling and have played in mighty hard luck," observed the tramp. "I lost all my money in an attempt to corner oats, and now I'm hungry; very, very hungry. Can't you please give me a little bite of something to eat?"

The Chinaman comprehended the situation at once. A benevolent, placid smile spread itself over his entire countenance.

"You likee flish?" he asked of the tramp.

"Yes, I like fish first-rate. That will do as well as anything."

"Come Friday," said the hospitable heathen.

LASH FOR INDOLENCE

Georgia Negroes Form Unique and Determined Society.

To Whip Those of Their Own Race Who Fail to Provide for Their Families—Much Good Already Accomplished.

Negroes living in the neighborhood of New Providence church, a few miles from Dublin, Ga., have distinguished themselves by forming a society which for originality probably has no equal in the whole country. The society is, of course, composed entirely of negroes and has for its object the betterment of the race, the inculcation of right principles and right living in the negroes, especially those who are members of the society, and the making of better citizens of those who live in the neighborhood of the headquarters of the society.

The plan of the society is to inquire into the mode of living of its members and to correct, if possible, any defects found in the character of those who belong to the society. To that end any erring brother who fails to right any wrong he has been guilty of is, on conviction, soundly thrashed in the presence of the other members of the society.

As soon as charges are preferred against a member he is at once notified. If he corrects the evil complained of by the next regular meeting all well and good. If he fails or refuses to correct his faults as seen by members of the society, if not of all men, he is tried by court-martial. A court is formed, evidence is taken and his guilt or innocence established. The one under charge is allowed to procure counsel from among the members and is given every opportunity to prove his innocence. If proven guilty the punishment is always a whipping, which the erring one submits to with the best possible grace.

Since the formation of the society a few weeks ago three of the members have been guilty of failing to prove themselves good citizens and provident husbands and have been whipped. It was reported to the society that Mark Cadwell's wife was badly in need of a wash pot. He was ordered to show cause why he had not provided his better half with this most necessary utensil. He failed to buy a pot before the trial came off or to show when tried that his wife could manage without one, and still not be put to any great amount of inconvenience. Conviction therefore, resulted and Mark was whipped. The fact that he is a brother of the secretary of the society did not save his hide.

MARK WAS WHIPPED.

In riding past the home of Early Burch it was seen by one of the members of the society that his front gate had fallen down. From all appearances he had made no effort to put it up, although to swing it again would require but little work and but a small outlay of money for hinges. On the trial of Early the facts were brought out that the gate had been down some weeks and that his wife had made repeated efforts to get her husband to take more pride in the care of his home. Conviction followed and Early will remember a long time the corporal punishment he received at the hands of the other members of the society.

The next meeting of the society will be held at an early date and it is said that at that time several members will be tried if previously they do not correct the things complained of. One of the members, Lewis Burch by name, has been summoned to show cause why he has not provided a tackle for his well so that his wife can draw water with more ease and not present. It is said that the society is doing a world of good in the neighborhood where it has headquarters. It is making better citizens of the blacks who are members.

Even those who have not joined have caught the spirit of the thing and are trying to live the lives of more useful citizens and to take better care of their homes and their families. The white people living near New Providence church in no way interfere with the workings of the society. They are well-wishers in the object of the society and hope that its results will be far-reaching. They are watching with much interest the results, but are offering no suggestions, preferring that the negroes work out their own salvation in this unique way if that is their purpose and intention. The existence of this strange society, says the Chicago Chronicle, is vouched for by James Roach and other reputable white men living near New Providence church.

PROMINENT MEN AT MR. PERKINS' BIER

Impressive Funeral Service at Holy Cross Church Sunday Afternoon.

CHURCHMEN IN CHARGE

BRIEF SERVICE HELD AT THE HOME BEFORE CHURCH SERVICE.

Well-Known Legal Lights From New York Were at Church—An Impressive Service Was Held—The Honorary Pallbearers.

Distinguished members of the New York and New Jersey bar, high officials in the Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches, relatives and neighbors, gathered, Sunday afternoon, at the bier of the late Edward C. Perkins, over whose remains the last sad rites were performed. Holy Cross church was filled to the doors by sorrowing mourners, while the funeral cortege was one of the largest ever seen in the city, the carriages extending for many blocks.

Preceding the obsequies at the church, a short service was held at his late home for the family and near relatives. It was in charge of Rt. Rev. William Crosswell Doane, bishop of Albany, one of the most distinguished prelates of the Episcopal church of the United States, assisted by his brother, Mgr. Doane, of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Newark. It was very brief but none the less impressive.

When the casket bearing the remains was rested at the chancel in the church, the edifice was filled to overflowing, yet a solemn hush pervaded while Rev. William Montgomery Downey, the rector, conducted the final service. The regular vested choir was in attendance and rendered the customary hymns. At the close the casket was removed to the North Avenue station to commence a long journey to Windsor, Vt., where the remains will be consigned to their final resting place.

As honorary pall bearers there walked the following prominent men who had been associates in business and neighbors of Mr. Perkins for many years: Charles H. Tweed, William E. Stiger and William C. Hornblower, all members of the New York bar and residents of New York City; William Minot, Boston lawyer; M. W. Tyler, Charles W. Beebe, Leonard Waldo and Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, all of this city. Noticeable also were the vast amount of beautiful flowers which were sent by sorrowing friends. They consisted of scores of pillows, garlands and wreaths of roses, lilies of the valley and carnations, among them being a large contribution from the New York lawyers.

Included in the distinguished mourners who were in the cortege were Judge John C. Gray, a former partner of Mr. Perkins now of the New York Court of Appeals, Judge Frederick Adams, of the New Jersey Court of Errors, William R. Wilder, Gordon Gordon, John Brooks Leavitt, Edward Jackson, partner of Mr. Perkins at the time of his death, and Messrs. Larkin, Brewster, Willis and Hement, all counsellors in New York, Isaac L. Miller, J. E. Tracy, H. C. Tracy, A. H. Atterbary, Archibald Cox, William Tyler, S. St. J. McCutchen and Samuel Huntington, New York lawyers whose homes are in this city, and State Treasurer P. C. Briggs and Carl Roebling, of the Roebling bridge building firm, both of Trenton.

NEEDLEWORK GUILD HAS AN IMPORTANT WORK

Was Described by Mrs. J. W. Stuart, One of Prominent Factors in That Movement.

AT ANNUAL MEETING

PLAINFIELD BRANCH OF THE NEEDLEWORK GUILD MET TUESDAY.

A Thousand Garments Made by Members During the Year—300 More Than Last Year—The Officers Were Elected.

Evidence of greatly increased interest in the Plainfield branch of the Needlework Guild, within the past year, was apparent at the annual meeting of the organization, held Tuesday afternoon in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church. The attendance was extremely large while 300 more articles than were collected last year, or 1,000 in all, were presented by the members. An exhibition of the garments was afterward held which displayed somewhat the amount of work necessary to bring them to completion.

Previous to the exhibition and following the business session, the Guild listened to an excellent address given by Mrs. John W. Stuart, of Glen Ridge, who organized the first Guild in the United States and has since been identified as a leading factor in the movement. It dealt in the main with a complete review of the organization as a whole, its origin, scope, needs and extension. The speaker explained minutely the great work being done throughout the country and the blessing it has proved to the needy poor, supplying them with warm garments where they would otherwise be lacking.

One of the latest methods of distribution taken up by the Guild and which was referred to by Mrs. Stuart, is by presenting articles of apparel to outgoing patients from hospitals. This is a need that has long been recognized as, in nine cases out of ten, patients leaving an institution must don the same clothes they possessed when entering and these are inadequate in their weakened condition. Hospital authorities as a rule are barely able to meet the demands for clothing for use in the wards and thus the Guild relieves them of the responsibility.

Another thing made plain by the speaker is the method adopted in sudden collections, that is, securing a great number of articles at almost a moment's notice. So complete is the system as it exists at present that where a sudden fire or flood spreads suffering in a community an ample supply of clothing can be rushed to the scene to relieve the most pressing demands. Mrs. Stuart's talk lasted nearly an hour and was greatly enjoyed.

The articles collected yesterday, will be held and distributed in the course of the year at the discretion of the officers. Every garment is well made of the best material.

During the business session of the meeting officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. J. Parker Mason; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. J. E. Corliss; vice president, Mrs. E. E. Ryder.

GIFT TO LIBRARY.

George LaMonte and Family Have Given Bound Brook's a Home.

At a meeting of the directors of the Public Library at Bound Brook, a few days ago, George LaMonte announced that his wife, his daughter and his son's wife would present to the library association the corner lot at High and Hamilton streets with the large dwelling now on it, making a gift of 100 feet front on Hamilton street by 150 on High street. The library will probably be moved from its present quarters in the Bank building to its new home, April 1.

It is proposed in connection with this generous deed of the LaMonte family to raise an endowment fund of at least $10,000, the interest of which can be used to help defray the running expenses of the library.

MANY KNEW ACCIDENT VICTIM

HIS GRANDPARENTS WERE MUSICIANS OF NOTE IN THIS VICINITY.

This Was His First Hunting Trip—He Lived With His Mother at South Bound Brook.

Bound Brook, Nov. 13—The tragic death of Harvey Garretson, the fourteen-year-old boy who lost his life as the result of the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of a friend while out hunting Monday afternoon, near Middlebush, has cast a gloom over South Bound Brook where the lad was very well known and also over Middlebush where the boy's grandparents lived. The boy was well liked by those who knew him and Monday was the first day he had ever ventured away from home with a gun on a hunting trip.

The boy lived at South Bound Brook where his mother is a music teacher. The lad's grandparents were musicians of note. His grandmother was a famous harpist and at the time of Queen Victoria's coronation she, with her husband, played the harp at that ceremony. When Mrs. Toulman and her husband returned to this country they settled in New York and resided there for a number of years where Mr. Toulman was the chime ringer in Trinity church for over fifty years. Later they moved to Middlebush where they lived for many years afterwards moving to Bound Brook where Mrs. Garretson now resides.

PARTOOK OF PUMPKIN PIE

SOCIAL GIVEN BY LADIES' AID SOCIETY OF HOPE CHAPEL.

After a Literary Programme, the Guests Were Treated to That Famous Delicacy.

New England's favorite delicacy, pumpkin pie, was king at Hope chapel, last Tuesday, when the Ladies' Aid Society gave a social in its honor. Honor may not be exactly the proper term as many of the best specimens were brought to view only to be admired and then be disposed of. The attendance was so large that the demand almost exceeded the supply.

A conspicuous part of the affair was the decorations that were in keeping with the occasion. Shocks of corn with ears peeping out and grinning Jack-o'-lanterns were to be seen everywhere making a very pretty effect. Paper lanterns of many colors suspended from the ceiling shed a softening glow on the surroundings.

During the evening a literary programme was rendered consisting of piano selections and vocal solos by Miss Lydia Edgar, of Westfield, recitations by Miss Clara Weber, Miss Try Mattox and John Manley and vocal selections by Madame Menzelli-Bartlett.

Mrs. Margaret Sweeney acted as chairman for the entire affair while she was assisted by the following committees: Cake, Mrs. W. G. Gray, Mrs. Fred Wharton, Mrs. John Rittenhouse, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. J. B. Higgins, Mrs. Henry Hoffman, Mrs. F. A. Weber, Mrs. John Johnson; pies, Mrs. Thomas Wallace; coffee, Mrs. Henry Mowinkle, Mrs. David Bowden, and Mrs. O. F. Pearson; entertainment, Mrs. John Turner, Mrs. Zachariah Kinsey and Mrs. Harry Corliss; decorating, Mrs. William Gray, Mrs. Thomas Chamberlain, Mrs. Samuel Smith, Mrs. Ravinia Rushton; ice cream, Mrs. George Radford, Mrs. Joseph Brown.

PUBLIC LIBRARY AFFAIRS

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE WERE PASSED ON DEATH OF E. C. PERKINS.

Routine Matters Looked After by Directors of the City Public Library.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Library was held last Tuesday. There were present Mason W. Tyler, Alex. Gilbert, J. H. Case, J. W. Yates and W. H. Larrabee. After the reading of the treasurer's report, which was ordered placed on file, the president offered the following resolution:

"Whereas God in His providence has taken from us our friend and associate, Edward C. Perkins, in sorrow and with reverence we enter upon our minutes this note of our appreciation of the loss we have suffered. Mr. Perkin's death marks the too early close of a life of unusual attractions and of rich promise. In public and in private life he was greatly respected as a gentleman of rare culture and fine gifts. His connection with our Board of Directors was brief, but he has already put his impress upon our work and given promise of much larger usefulness. In his professional life he had the respect of the judges, was admired and beloved by his associates and implicitly trusted by a large and important body of clients. In social and domestic life he had a charming personality.

"Taken from us in the prime of life we mourn his death as a serious loss to the State, to the community in which he lived and to a large circle of friends and associates. We tender to his family our sincerest sympathy in this hour of their bereavement."

It was ordered that the foregoing resolution be entered in the minute book and a copy be engrossed and transmitted to the family.

The request of the president of the Stillman High School for a meeting place for the pupils at the library was granted. The librarian was authorized to purchase coal as needed.

The purchase of bound sets of Cornhill and Longman's, and of second hand books of Macie of London was referred to the library committee with power. The librarian was authorized to have 5,000 "cut" slips printed. The matter of replacing the wood top to the case of birds with glass was referred to the art committee. The treasurer reported bids for painting Babcock buildings, and this matter of painting was referred to him with power to make contract. The board then adjourned.

RETURNED THE VISIT.

Independent Fife and Drum Corps Guest of Elizabeth's Crack Corps.

The Independent Fife and Drum Corps went in a body to Elizabeth, Tuesday, to attend the dance of the Liberty Fife and Drum Corps, of that city, which was held in Turn Hall. Among the guests who went down with the drum corps was Councilman William L. Gloak. The musicians went down to return the visit of the Liberty boys who attended the fair of the local drum corps held here last month. The return trip to this city was made early this morning.

Remembered the Sheriff.

James Morrison and a few friends of Sheriff-elect B. Frank Coriell, presented the latter with a large and handsome basket of roses and other flowers, yesterday, when Mr. Coriell assumed his position. The basket of flowers was arranged and made up by Stanley, the North avenue florist, and was a masterpiece. Mr. Morrison took the gift to Elizabeth this morning and made the presentation, which was responded to in a happy vein.

Getting Coal.

During the past few day the local coal dealers have been receiving supplies of fresh mined coal in the various sizes. The nut size seems to be the hardest to get, but other sizes close to it are obtainable in good quantities.

Invitation Dance.

An invitation dance will be given in the I. C. T. rooms, this evening, under the auspices of Harry DeMesa and Harry Blimm. The attendance promises to be very large and a successful outcome is already assured.

Mrs. Walter Reinhart, of Cranford, has been visiting relatives in Plainfield for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Talford, who were recently married at Whitehall, N. Y., have returned to Plainfield, where for the present they are stopping on East Fourth street. Later they expect to go to Washington for a visit.

CHARITY WORK IN PLAINFIELD

Year's Work of the Charity Organized Aid Association Reviewed at Its Meeting.

HELD LAST EVENING

Reports of Officers and Committees Presented—Thanks to Generosity of Agent, Miss VanBoskerck, There is Balance in Treasury—Address by Hugh Fox.

The annual meeting of the Charity Organized Aid Association was held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last evening, when a goodly numbers of the members were present to hear of the progress made by the association during the past year.

President H. M. Maxson occupied the chair and called for the various reports, the first of which was that of the treasurer, Boardman Wright. He stated that his report this year would include all items between October 1, 1901, and October 1 1902, and with the permission of the chairman of the finance committee he would recommend that hereafter the report include that time in comprising the year's work. This recommendation was adopted

Mr. Wright stated that at the last report the balance was $49.76, and the receipts for the year amounted to $737.07, which included $620 received as dues from members. The disbursements amounted to the same, and a deficit of a trifle over $100 had been liquidated by the generosity of the agent, Miss Jean VanBoskerck, who had given her three months' salary for that purpose. The present balance is something over $7.

The secretary, W. S. Tyler, reported that during the past year four meet*ings of the executive committee* were held with an average attendance of eight. He spoke of the part that Plainfield had in securing the appointment of Mrs. Emily Williamson, of Elizabeth, as probation officer for Union county and of the recent dis*tribution* of coal to the small wage earner in this city. The sale of this coal commenced on October 27, and 119 families had been supplied with 100 pounds or less. The first car of coal lasted eight days and the second car is now being distributed.

Mrs. Tiffany, chairman of the committee on co-operation, reported that there are nineteen representatives of churches and twelve from various societies in the Charity Organized Aid Association, and she referred to the very helpful conferences held during the year whereby much success was obtained through the proper administration of charity.

Isaac L. Miller, chairman of the legal committee, reported on the case of the three children who were put into the custody of Charles Place, of the borough, by Judge VanSickel, through the influence of Rev. A. C. Nickerson and Dr. W. H. Murray. The mother was unable to properly care for them.

H. C. Tracy, chairman of the committee on printing and publication, reported that five hundred copies of the year book, comprising the work of the association for the past three years, were printed and distributed.

E. H. Ladd, Jr., as chairman of the finance committee, reported that the books of the treasurer had been approved. He also reported that forty-six members were added to the roll during the past year, an increase of 40 per cent. In all there are 161 members, seventy-seven being added during the past fourteen months.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson, chairman of the district committee, gave a brief report of the work of his committee and he took occasion to praise C. A. Marsh, legal advisor; Overseer of the Poor Ayers and Miss VanBoskerck, agent, for their earnest work in behalf of the association.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson, chairman of the district committee, gave a brief report of the work of his committee and he took occasion to praise C. A. Marsh, legal advisor; Overseer of the Poor Ayers and Miss VanBoskerck, agent, for their earnest work in behalf of the association.

Possibly the most interesting report was that of Miss VanBoskerck, who is the agent or general secretary for the association. It showed, among other things, that during the past year there were 704 applications for aid, representing 234 individual families. Among these applications there were seventy-seven new ones. Sixty-six persons received advice and loans were made to eleven persons. Miss VanBoskerck made 1,510 calls during the year and she received 989 calls at her office. Of those who applied for aid eighty-four were Americans and the rest for-

SOMERVILLE MERCHANTS KICK

FIGHTING AGAINST THE MACADAMIZING OF LINE ROAD.

Residents Along Road Between Franklin Park and New Brunswick Urged It.

Somerville, Nov. 12—The Somerset County Board of Freeholders, at its regular meeting in the Court House here yesterday, was kept very busy, although very little important business was transacted.

Residents along the line road between Franklin Park and New Brunswick, which has been applied for to be improved under the State Aid act, were out in force and used every plea imaginable to have the board listen to their tale of woe. Speeches were made by Rev. Clifford P. Case, pastor of the Franklin Park Reformed church, former candidate for Assembly Irving Hoagland, Justice George Logan, Howard Schureman and other prominent residents of that section. Their remarks were pregnant with the great benefits this would be not only to that section but to the county at large.

Freeholder DeHart, of Middlesex county, was on hand and he was in favor of the improvement of the road. He invited the Somerset board to meet with the Middlesex Freeholders Wednesday of next week to inquire more deeply into the matter. The Somerset board accepted the invitation and the matter was dropped for the time being.

The merchants of Somerville are quite indignant about the improvement as they believe it will be the means of taking some of their best customers to New Brunswick.

Counsel Frech was authorized to petition Judge Schenck for the appointment of commissioners to assess the ten per cent. from the residents along the Pluckemin, Skillman and Wood's Tavern roads.

The County Collector was given leave to borrow $10,000 in anticipation of taxes.

HIGH SCHOOL PAPER.

The First Issue is Expected to Appear December 3.

The first issue of the new City High School paper will appear Wednesday, December 3. Great interest is being shown by the pupils in the selection of a name for the publication and the board of editors will doubtless adopt one from the list suggested by the school within a few days. The different editorial departments are working hard and there is every reason to suppose that the paper will be a success as a bright, newsy publication.

Big Boom at Dewey Park.

As it is a settled fact that the Aluminum Plate Works, of Plainfield, is to locate at Dewey Park, and is to erect a very plant there, comprising several large modern brick buildings, and the first of which will commence to do the grading for the buildings at once, it is a rare opportunity for conservative investors to purchase a few lots at the low prices that are now offered. Dewey Park has the advantage of 5-cent trolley fare to Plainfield or Bound Brook, also 12-inch water main with artesian water and other advantages. Drop a line or call at S. D. Drake's office, Lincoln, for prices of lots, etc.

Half Yearly Meeting.

The half-yearly meeting of Friends of the New York and Shrewsbury meeting will be held today and Friday in the meeting house on Washington avenue. The meeting house has been thoroughly cleaned and renovated and a new carpet laid, presenting an attractive and inviting appearance. The meetings will be of special interest and will no doubt be largely attended.

Taken by Surprise.

A happy surprise party was given to Miss Laura Wikoff, of Richmond street, Monday evening, by a number of her relatives and friends. They all called at Miss Wikoff's home about 8 o'clock and took her completely by surprise. The evening was spent in playing games, after which refreshments were served.

Men Will Do It.

A supper and entertainment will be given this evening in the First Presbyterian church by the men of the congregation to help defray the expenses of the new kitchen recently erected. Tickets may be secured at Hodge's drug store or at Woodhull & Martin's carpet department.

Learned of Father's Death.

John Slover, of this city, received word yesterday of the death of his father, William Slover, an old-time resident of Asbury Park, who has resided there for the past fifty years.

GAME CAUGHT BY HAND

BOROUGH CITIZENS HAD UNUSUAL HUNTING EXPERIENCE.

Shot Some Game and Captured One Squirrel by Hand—Now a Game Supper.

A. J. Leader, W. H. Kirch, Peter Voorbees and John Ross, all good citizens of the borough, visited the farm of Mr. Kirch's father near Martinsville, on Monday, to hunt game. That they were successful will be shown by the fact that they shot twenty-two rabbits, three quail, one woodcock, three mud hens, one grey squirrel and one red squirrel.

With the exception of the grey squirrel, the rest of the game was shot. In the case of the latter, there was a lively experience. The little grey fellow ran up a tree into a hole, and at the suggestion of the hunters a fire was built with some leaves. Then the squirrel was smoked out. As he ran down the tree, Mr. Leader caught him and with a quick turn of the wrist threw him on the ground. He believed that the animal was dead and at his suggestion the squirrel was placed in his game bag.

An hour later, Mr. Leader had a queer feeling about his back and calling to some of his companions asked them to investigate. They then found the squirrel trying to make his escape over Mr. Leader's shoulder. A few sharp raps soon put the squirrel out of business and this ended the trouble.

WANT THE LAWS REPEALED

SOMERVILLE REPUBLICANS APPEAR AGAINST GREATER CITY MEASURES.

Urged Governor Murphy to Secure Repeal of Bills Passed Last Winter.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Nov. 12—A delegation of Somerset county Republicans called on Governor Murphy, yesterday afternoon and urged that he give his aid in securing the early repeal of the North Plainfield annexation bills. In the delegation were former Chancery Clerk Lewis A. Thompson, Postmaster George Cooper, of Somerville, and former Assemblyman P. V. D. VanDoren, of Millstone, who was defeated for surrogate Tuesday.

The Somerset men told the executive that while the defeat of the bills at the recent special election seemed to have settled the question, and there was no chance of the proposition being again submitted under the same acts, they were anxious to get the measure off the statute books.

"The annexation acts are regarded as Republican measures," said Thompson, after the interview with the Governor. "The Democrats charge the party with responsibility for them and we want them wiped out. While the laws remain in existence they are a menace to the Republican organization in the county."

BROTHERS SEPARATE.

The Firm of Love Brothers Has Dissolved; Robert Love Retiring.

By mutual consent the partnership heretofore existing between Robert Love and James L. Love, grocers, on West Front street, was dissolved Tuesday. The business will be continued by James L. Love, who will receive and pay all bills. For the present Robert Love will take a much needed rest and it is likely that later on he will engage in evangelistic work. L. Love has special talent in this direction and he has been very successful in his previous efforts. The firm of Love Brothers was formed seven years ago and a successful business has been conducted.

Valued Pet Died.

Jack, the dog owned by John Powers the druggist, which was operated upon a few days ago for a cancer in the leg died last evening. The dog was a Boston terrier and was valued highly by the druggist who did everything possible to save the animal's life.

First Conference.

The first charity conference of members of the Charity Organized Aid Association, under the auspices of the co-operation committee, will be held Friday afternoon, when a noted worker in the College Settlement, New York, will be present and speak.

BASKET BALL SEASON BEGINS NEXT WEEK

Three Clubs in the Local League Are Getting Into Condition for the Contests.

ALL ARE PRACTICING

Y. M. C. A. HAS THE ADVANTAGE OF HAVING TEAM ALREADY ORGANIZED.

But Teams of Alis A. A. and Hope Y. M. A. Are Fast Developing a Good Game—The Season Starts Next Week.

*With the opening game in the Plain*field Amateur Basket Ball League less than a week away, the local basket ball teams are gradually rounding into condition for the contests. It was not such a difficult matter for the Y. M. C. A., which has had a five playing for several years, to decide on the men. Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood has known practically for almost a month just how his team would line up. With the other two clubs in the league, the Hope Y. M. A. and the Alis A. A. it is a difficult thing as neither club has had a team before.

Since the physical work department of the Y. M. C. A. opened, the candidates for the association team have been practicing. They will be in condition to play a strong game when the season commences. The candidates for the Alis A. A. turned out for the first time Monday night when they gathered at the Fanwood clubhouse for practice. They will practice there regularly and play such games as are not included in the league there. Hope Y. M. A. boys have been turning out regularly for practice at the gymnaium but the fact that the game is new to most of their players will handicap them somewhat at the start.

A meeting of the executive committee of the league will be held Friday night when the managers of the three teams will present the lists of players from which the teams may be drawn. Each club has the privilege of sending in fifteen names. After the first announcement, no extra players can be antilized by any of the teams and their choice must be confined to those of the original fifteen.

TALK OF REPAIRS.

Citizens and School Board Confer on the School Problem at Somerville.

Somerville, Nov. 12—The citizens' meeting in the Court House, Monday night, to hear the report of the committee appointed to confer with the Board of Education and discuss better means for the increasing number of scholars, was well attended. Various suggestions were made.

Many people seemed to be in favor of fixing up the old building and erecting an eight-room addition. Those in favor of the new building thought that this would do all right for a year or two, but in the future a new structure would surely be needed and believed it should be erected now.

The report of the committee, which favored a new building, was received and another meeting will be called by the chairman, Joseph W. Ballantine.

Funeral of C. Howard Lance.

The funeral of C. Howard Lance, who passed away early Monday morning took place yesterday from his late residence at 2:30 o'clock. The funeral was largely attended and a delegation from Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., of which the deceased was a member, was present to pay their respects to the memory of their departed brother. The interment was in the Methodist cemetery.

Is Building of Brick.

John M. Schorb, Jr., is building a large brick barn on the property in the rear of Charles Tallman's grocery store. The owner wanted to erect a wooden barn on the premises but objection was raised in the Borough Council so the structure was built of brick.

Paid Fine and Departed.

John Stroppard, of New York, who was arrested in the Somerset Hotel, Saturday night, was released by Recorder Doud, in his court, Monday morning, on payment of a fine of $6. He left at once for New York, where he lives.

A CHAIN of WOMEN'S HOTELS and SCHOOLS

THE beseeching cry for hotel accommodations for women has been heard. No longer need the feminine sex be agitated because antediluvian, curmudgeon man hotel keepers refuse lodging to ladies arriving alone in a city at night. Hotels for women, not charity homes or yet female prisons for the time being, but real hostelries, where a woman is as free as a

a man, are rising here and there, and the number will soon be adequate for all the need. They are places where woman is not asked by old tabbies in black mitts where she has been when she stays out later than 10 at night. Nay; she is not even asked how old she is and what church she belongs to. Woman's world does indeed move.

Without fuss and feathers or blare of trumpets, one organization of women has established throughout this Union a series of hotels for their sister women. That organization is the Young Women's Christian association, though more old women than young ones are active in its deliberations. Briefly, when two or three small Y. W. C. A. boarding houses were opened twenty-five years ago as an experiment they were conducted still on the old timey female seminary plan. It was taken for granted that a girl was a weak and depraved creature who only wanted an opportunity to break out and do something dreadful: therefore she must be kept under and every movement spied on and noised into lest she bring trouble. Those were likewise always at hand ancient tables ready to perform this task of nosing and repression with peculiar zest.

At first, too, the general impression of these Y. W. C. A. homes was that they were to be lived in only by poor working girls of the "lower classes." Even the ladies who managed the homes sometimes looked down from the throne of their own social state upon the women that lived in the homes.

But a beginning had been made of women's work for their own sex. After that the work itself did the rest. The spirit of love and kindliness from women to women, of understanding and consequently of tolerance and liberality grew apace. At the same time the old idea of a theological charity dropped away year by year. The Y. W. C. A. homes were transformed into business enterprises, philanthropic still, but in no sense suggestive of almsgiving. Boarders' affairs ceased to be nosed into, women found they could trust women to the utmost, and the boarders began to have liberty. This naturally drew to the homes a more intelligent class of self supporting women, who could pay good prices for food and lodging.

Today there is a chain of real hotels for women from one end of this land to the other, well kept and successfully managed under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. They are real hotels because they admit, at least tratsiently, all women who behave themselves. The manager of the new and handsome house in Worcester, Mass., said to me:

"I never turn a woman away unless she is intoxicated."

Respectable women traveling alone should know that in any large city in which they arrive they have only to inquire for the Y. W. C. A. boarding house or hotel to find a place where they can be comfortably accommodated for the time provided the establishment is not already full to overflowing. The grand women of this society have in many cases started schools, which are connected with the hotels. The home in Boston conducts with great success a school of domestic service, where green girls are instructed in cookery and all other branches of housekeeping. A commercial school is also maintained. In New York and many other cities the organization conducts instruction classes.

THE WINTER'S FURS.

Siberian Squirrel Very Popular—New Capes and Coats.

Poor little squirrels! Lovely woman has suddenly decided that she wants your pretty skins for her own adornment, and therefore you must try to be philosophical and think yourselves lucky, like the kid who gave up his life for Lockyer's Geraldine that she might have dainty boots. Cloaks for automobiling and for all sorts of other uses are to be made entirely of the soft skins of the little gray squirrel. The fur of squirrels has always been used to a certain extent for children's wear and for linings to other furs, but never before has this particular fur been employed for the whole outside of a long or short coat. The Siberian is the only kind exactly suitable for this purpose, as the skins all seem to have precisely the same markings and tint. The center of the back is slightly shaded with black, and at the end of each there is a shade darker, so that the line of demarcation is very distinct. This gives the garment the appearance of being made in layers or flounces. Full sets, consisting of a three-quarter coat, with full sleeves, high storm collar and wide revers, cap and muff, are ready.

Chinchilla is still considered very desirable, especially for revers and collars and also for the pretty neck pieces. I saw one stole made of picked skins, so that down the center there was a line of irregularly shaped diamonds produced by the dark shade of the fur. Chinchilla is the most easily injured of all furs, and to have rain or snow fall on it is to have it virtually ruined.

Seal, like sable, is always fashionable, but, unfortunately for those who love this rich and beautiful fur, it has grown very costly during the last few years, so that now a seal garment with a border of pointed and dyed beaver is one of the most expensive garments, aside from Russian crown sable. Seal is made most often in cape form. Squirrel coats, with facings and collar of ermine, are smart and much affected. The revers are immense, and the storm collar is quite as high as it was last year.

Nearly all the coats, jackets and even blouses are made with deep shoulders and wide sleeves, generally finished in bishop shape. The long, sloping shoulder is like the ungainly form of the coat wraps this season. They may be stylish, but they are certainly not pretty.

One baby lamb blouse jacket of white-with-the-yellow-in means cream colored—is brought in at the waist without any perceptible belt, but it is pointed at the front. The sleeves are open, but not what one might call flowing, and at the neck there is a turndown collar of glossy black bear fur. The effect of this garment is very striking and beautiful.

The stylish blouse coat illustrated here shows a short basque below the belt, full bishop sleeves, a high collar and with medium sized revers. So many turbans and hat trimmings are made of fur that it is impossible to enumerate them. But some of the soft, woolly beaver hats with a small shaded brown animal curled around the top are simply beautiful, and this in spite of the fact that we would scarcely expect to find such an animal asleep on the tops of our hats.

In one place I found a superb dark blue velvet dress made with a blouse of the same, with a short basque below the belt. There was a wide sailor collar of ivory satin of the richest quality, and this was bound with a roll of mink, and around the sleeves at the elbows and wrists were other bands of the same fur. The skirt had a deep and full shaped flounce, headed with two rolls of mink fur all around. A fancy muff with a double ruffle at each end and a bow of ribbon in the middle completed the whole save the hat, which was of dark blue velvet trimmed with a band of the fur, through and around which was intwined a piece of fine lace, and this and one tall hung slightly in the back.

Bands of fur, generally mink or something of that order, are now around the lower portion of the skirts about six inches from the bottom. When this is done, it is to be expected that the rest of the costume will be similarly trimmed.

After all, if the animals could know how very desirable women find their furs and how pretty they make the women look they might find some consolation in the loss of their skins.

Boundary Dispute Settled.

CHILI, classed as the bully of South America, has effected a peaceful settlement of her boundary troubles with Argentina. The contention over the boundary lines between these two nations at one time threatened to result in war, and while both countries maintain that they have upheld the dignity of their positions, yet it is probably due to the fact that Argentina, in a diplomatic way, concurred in the claims of Chili, that war was averted.

The boundaries between the two nations was defined by the treaty of 1878 as the snowy summit of the Cordillera of the Andes. Until recently settlement had not advanced sufficiently near to this line from either side to cause the exact location to be brought into question. Within the past year or two, however, Chili, in the more progressive than her neighbors, began the building of roads through the mountains and the policing of the country, and advanced into what Argentina claimed as her territory. She demanded an explanation of the so-called invasion in the usual South American way, and by so doing came near bringing on a war in answer to her brusqueness.

Diplomacy, however, came to the rescue in time, and now Argentina withdraws her claims under the guise of a misunderstanding of previous treaties, and Chili has won.

The territory in dispute is of but little value unless minerals should be discovered. It lies almost in the summits of the Andes mountains, and offers no inducements whatever to the agricultural settler.

Iron Mines in Siberia.

THE industrial development of Siberia is largely dependent upon her production of coal and iron, especially the latter, and the following data from an official report show that Russia's huge northern provinces do not lack rich deposits of this metal.

Of the numerous iron ore mines in the Urals, the largest are, first, the Komaroff mine, containing 1,500,000,000 tons of 50 per cent. brown hematite; and second, the Magnithaya Gora mine, which has not yet been fully developed, but is claimed to be the largest mass of magnetite in Russia, if not in the world. Among other rich mines in the southern Urals are the Baikal mines, which are believed to contain 5,000,000 tons of ore in the portions belonging to the government, and 16,000,000 tons in that owned by the Simsky works; and the Elnitchi mines, near Baikal, in which about 1,000,000 tons of ore have been discovered. It is claimed that the latter group of mines, lying to the south of the Tcheflabinsk-Ufa branch of the Siberian railway, will yield 2,400,000,000 tons of iron ore. The Vyssokaya Gora, Mount Blagodat, and Sindresky mines are to the north of the same railway. Engineers report that the first contains 16,000,000 tons; the ore in the second was estimated at 6,400,000 tons when first examined, but upon reexamination was found to amount to 13,000,000 tons. No definite estimate was made concerning the last mine, as it abounds in pockets which sometimes come to an abrupt termination. It is claimed that the Ural mines are capable of producing 24,000,000 tons of ore, or about 10,000,000 tons of pig iron, per annum for the next century; but as this quantity of ore can scarcely be worked, even with the additional coal from the Ekibaz-Tuza and Sudjenka mines, the more conservative engineers reckon the output at 5,000,000 tons a year as the safest rate the ore in sight will last 200 years.

SOME interesting figures have been collected regarding the wine production of the world during the year 1901, and are given here by continents:

Europe.—The French crop is given at 1,330,325,200 gallons, showing a diminution of 247,860,500 gallons, compared with 1900. The production of 1901 is 475,200,000 gallons above the average for the ten preceding years.

There has been an increase in the area devoted to viticulture of 12,093 acres in the past year, which gives a total area of 4,288,327 acres.

After France, the great producers of wine in the world are Italy with 1,013,760,000 gallons in 1901; Spain, with 220,880,600 gallons, and Portugal, with 153,750,000 gallons. In Austria the crop was so heavy, at 156,420,000 gallons, and several places are in full bearing. According to a French consul, the grapes are large and numerous, but they rot when the rains come and ripen too fast when the sun shines. The wine, he says, is inferior, and must be mixed with that of Europe before being fit to drink.

There is a general crisis for wine growers, because of an overproduction in the entire world.

The Forests of Russia.

THE gradual deforestation of Russia is attracting increased attention throughout the empire, and the Forestry society, as well as the forestry department of the ministry of agriculture and domains, are discussing means for regulating the consumption of timber and for propagation. "Wooden Russia," as it is familiarly called, does not appear to be in any immediate danger, as a recent official report states that forests in this country now cover a gross area of 464,548,000 acres. Among European countries, Sweden comes next, with 44,478,000 acres of forest. In Russia the forests cover 36 per cent. of the whole imperial area. The Swedish forests occupy 44 per cent. of the total area, and the Austro-Hungarian 32 per cent. of the territory of the dual monarchy. Reckoned by the population, there are 4.9 acres of forest to each inhabitant in Russia, 9.5 acres in Sweden, 10.4 acres in Norway, and 0.69 acre per head in Germany.

The forests have a greater importance for Russians than for people of west European countries, as villages and country houses are largely built of wood; stone and brick houses being almost unknown, and the forests furnish the main sources of fuel supply. While the imperial committee complains that it is private owners who are recklessly devastating the forests and urging that adequate laws and regulations be enacted to prevent this, the Forestry society calls attention to the fact that, according to the official report of the forestry department of the ministry of agriculture and domains, the crown forests furnished a revenue of $9,064,000 in 1899 and $24,720,000 in 1899. It is claimed that this enormous advance in nine years could not be due to the increased value of timber growth, and it is urged that the government set an example in moderation.

The Boy and the Dime.

Capital does not necessarily mean wealth. As illustrative of its powers, the head of a great manufacturing establishment in Philadelphia recently cited this incident: "About a year ago a little fellow stopped me on the street and asked me for a cent to help him buy two papers, so he could start as a newsboy. I gave him a dime. The other day a neat little fellow caught hold of my hand on the street and said: 'Don't you remember me, mister?' I did not, and said so. He seemed surprised. 'I'm the boy you gave a dime to buy some papers, mister, and I've had money ever since,' he said. The incident touched me deeply, and I believe it conveys a valuable lesson."

AFTERNOON TEA.

A Function Which May Be Either Simple or Elaborate.

Afternoon tea is one of the most charming features of modern hospitality. It can be a practice both of the rich and of those in extremely modest circumstances, in fact what more simple than the cup of tea handed with the dainty cracker or sandwich?

The tea table should be kept in one corner of the drawing room. It is a rather low and broad table, with a little shelf under it for extra cups, spoons, etc. It should be covered with a pretty doily, and on it should be placed a brass teakettle over a little alcohol burner, a teapot, creamer and sugar bowl, a couple of little cut glass dishes for the salted almonds or bonbons and the tiny cups and saucers.

Have the maid, who is dressed in a black wool gown and spotless white cap and linen collar and cuffs, bring in the kettle freshly filled, light the alcohol lamp and talk to your guests while the water is boiling. Put into the teapot a spoonful of tea for each guest and one for the pot, cover this with the water as soon as it boils and let stand for a few minutes. Then fill the teapot with boiling water and pour at once.

Place the lumps of sugar in the bottom of the cup, then the cream and last the tea. Slices of lemon thinly cut should be at hand for those who prefer their tea Russian fashion. As each cup is poured the maid takes it and passes it to the guest, and when all are served she retires from the room, but stays within call. At an informal afternoon affair sandwiches, little cakes, salted peanuts and the lighter forms of bonbons can be served. When these afternoon teas become more pretentious affairs, with engraved cards sent out a week beforehand, the table may be larger, decked with flowers, and on it besides the tea things there may be several chafing dishes of silver filled with creamed oysters, crab meat, hot bouillon, etc. Besides tea, chocolate and coffee with whipped cream may be served, together with ices or salads. Sometimes the hostess is assisted by her friends in pouring, or the daughter of the house and two or three pretty girls do the honors. At larger affairs the refreshments are simply passed around by two or three well trained servants, whose duty it is to move noiselessly and see that every one is served. Music forms a pleasing accompaniment.

WINDOW SHADES.

They Are Made Elaborate With Embroidery and Lace.

The accompanying illustration shows the newest styles in window shades. The time is past when these were considered necessary evils. They are now as daintily fashioned as the fluffy lace curtains themselves.

The largest shade shown is of white satin, with three lines of openwork and a wide border of renaissance lace.

THREE NEW WINDOW SHADE MODELS.

The most elaborate is of dotted muslin, with a wide scroll of net above the full frill. This scroll is of open net, with bunches of flowers and their leaves worked on it in narrow satin ribbon.

The third and cheapest is of casement cloth, with two lines of openwork done in flat braid and a wide scalloped hem, with three diamond shaped openwork figures in the flat braid also.

R. DE LA BAUME.

Two Women.

The character of the woman who is sweet tempered and who does favors to all around her as she goes along is like a house adorned with beautiful flowers in and around it. The character of the woman of the opposite sort is like a house bare and unsightly.

A MOTHER'S DUTY.

She Generally Neglects the One She Owes to Herself.

"I'll tell your papa on you when he comes home; see if I don't!"

The voice was harsh and irritating, and it turned to look at the woman to whom it belonged. Her hair had not been combed that day and her jaws were tied up because of toothache. Her teeth had gone to pieces because she never brushed them or put them in care of a dentist. Her shoes were unlaced and untied and run over at the heel, her stockings wrinkled down about her ankles, and her gown and torn apron—my, how dirty they were! Three little children were about her feet, two of them twins. (I wonder why it is that women the least fitted for controlling and training children always have the most of them?) The infant she was trying to discipline was a puny thing of three years. She could have made it obey with a very little patience and firmness, but she was absolutely too good for nothing to attempt to exercise them. It would not be the truth to call her weak, for plenty of power was there; she simply would not bestir herself mentally.

Come to think of it, isn't it a wonder that the human race is as well off as it is with so many mothers like this one?

I looked ahead a little into the woman's future, and my prophetic soul read her finish. I saw a female creature old before her time. Her husband never appeared in public with her if he could help himself. Her children despised, defied and neglected her. She was a mere beast of burden for her family.

In my mind's eye I see her now going on an outing with her young ones. They are "dressed to kill" except that they are not overclean. The little girls are belaced, beribboned and beruffled. She herself wears a rumpled old hat, a cheap black skirt with grease and mud stains upon it, and it gapes horribly at the placket hole behind. (I wonder again why this style of mother always has her dress skirt bulging and gaping open behind?) The habit of leaving her stockings loose and slovenly and her shoes untied or buttonless has grown on her till now when she "dresses up" she goes away from home with them in the same condition. Her hair is gummy and not properly combed, and the habit of slovenliness has reached the point where she merely throws a black skirt on outside of her unclean everyday gown, and the bedraggled facing shows below.

Fine picture she makes, does she not?

Yet she thinks she is a devoted mother because she never cleans herself up and because she never has anything decent to wear. She really has picked herself to the bone to clothe her offspring in the present overdressed, ostentatious fashion for children. She calls that self sacrifice!

Suppose now that she had had some respect for the dignity of womanhood and motherhood. She would have known that for a mother to display weakness before a child is to make the child despise her. She would have known, too, that the greatest mistake a mother can make is to sacrifice herself to her family in all that makes life worth living. Such sacrifice is never appreciated. On the contrary, those for whom it is made come to regard it as only their due, and they can never get enough of it to satisfy them. Suppose that this slattern mother had always dressed her children cleanly, but very plainly, and had put the time she gave to fashioning them up on keeping her own person neat and tidy, likewise devoting a sufficient amount of it to gently but firmly making them obey her when it was necessary to give them a command. It is not often really necessary if a mother has good sense. Children are extremely sensitive to outside appearances, and they adore a mother who keeps herself clean, neat and pretty.

"I'LL TELL YOUR PAPA ON YOU!"

There, too, is the dignity of wifehood. The slatternly, picked to the bone mother's husband married a woman who seemed to him a pretty, tidy girl, one whom he chose from all the world to make his and her home. She cannot preserve his respect—how can she?—unless she always strives to look well in his eyes after marriage, unless she shows him she has the strength to control her children and manage the household. He may help with the family discipline when called on, but his respect intellectually for the wife who thus calls on him will cease from that day forward.

KATE SHARP.

THE NEW WOMAN HERE AND THERE

A WOMAN suffrage argument that ought to convince even Dr. Lyman Abbott has been made by Alice Stone Blackwell in the Woman's Journal. She simply sums up the results of full suffrage in the states in which it has been granted to the feminine sex, marshals the facts and leaves them without note or comment to speak for themselves. Women enjoy full suffrage in four states of the Union—Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Idaho. In Wyoming and Idaho woman suffrage has abolished the licensing of gambling houses, and in all four of the states it has raised the age of protection for girls to eighteen. In Wyoming it has enacted a law that all men and women in the state employ shall receive equal pay for equal grades of work, and this includes public school teachers. In Utah public school teachers having the same grade of certificate receive by law the same rate of pay, irrespective of sex. Colorado owes much to her women, among other measures the laws for founding a state industrial school for girls and a state home for dependent children, making mothers natural and legal guardians of children, enlarging women's property rights, preserving forest trees and establishing the indeterminate prison sentence. Denver has been particularly cleaned up because of woman suffrage. In the city expectoration in public places is forbidden, drinking fountains are in the streets, and smoke consuming chimneys must be attached to large buildings. In all four of the states one result has been to enlarge the property rights of women and increase the pay of those earning wages. Woman suffrage has also wrought powerfully in favor of increased educational facilities and of good moral character in candidates for office.

Facts cannot be blinked and the results of equal suffrage show enlightened and progressive legislation in every state where it has been tried.

The most ingeniously and vivaciously advertised show since P. T. Barnum passed away was the Woman's Professional Exhibition in Madison Square Garden. It was projected to raise funds for the organization. At first the newspapers declared it was wicked, oh, so wicked, that it curdled the blood of those estimable ladies who elect themselves guardians of other folks' morals. Then of course all the town rushed to see what had outraged the sensitive feelings of high toned moral propriety. The night after the announcement was made that the show was running female ropewalkers whose lives were in danger every time they performed and that there were exhibition booths which powerfully suggested Midway plaisances and the like, that some of the uniformed lady policemen employed in the building were tall enough, powerful enough and nervy enough to throw an average man outdoors at need—this night the great Garden was so crammed the box office had to be closed on late comers. And the spectacle was not so very bad after all, visitors found. Every device that stopped at the line of mere notoriety, but went quite up to it, was resorted to, and the result was a financial success the plucky, clever and independent women who planned and conducted the affair may well be proud of.

The success of the Professional Woman's league exhibition in New York proves that women make unsurpassed advertising and advance press agents.

The expression "a person of strong likes and dislikes" means generally an individual with strong dislikes and no likes to speak of.

You have seen the sentence "Eat some air" going the rounds through advertisements and mental science literature. Seems as if it deserved at least a credit or reference to the gifted author of it, who is Eleanor Kirk, editor of Eleanor Kirk's Idea. How people will steal, even respectable people! And all Eleanor Kirk, the generous and sweet tempered victim of this highway robbery, ever said about it was that she was glad she had furnished so useful an expression to her fellow men and women.

The Goddess of Liberty, now much smooched with soft coal smoke, still stands in New York harbor enlightening the world. Seeing what sort of a tangle men have made of affairs in this country the past six months, isn't it about time liberty was enlightening the nations on the woman question?

Queer things are man made divorce laws. Where a married couple are dying to get away from each other and both want a divorce more than they want anything else in this life, our perspicacious divorce law says they shall not have it because there is collusion, so they must stay together and instead of collusion have constant collision. On the other hand, if one of the married firm wants a divorce and the other is strongly against it, the member who wants it can generally get it without trouble. The gaps in the masculine intellectual equipment begin to show with painful frequency.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

Hedgehog Worsted Viper.

M. Guiguet, a French scientist, contributes an account of a fight which he recently witnessed between a hedgehog and a viper. The two enemies knew very well at first sight who was who and eyed each other as if they knew a moment's inattention would be fatal. The viper was the first to get tired of gazing and it began to glide away. Just then the hedgehog rushed for the viper's tail, and having nailed it fast with its teeth it rolled itself up. The hedgehog was very careful, however, not to let the tail off. The viper curled back and delivered furious assaults on its aggressor, wrestling and rolling with the curled-up hedgehog all over the place. At length the snake, wounded in a hundred places, died. The hedgehog began its repast on the tail of its victim and was careful not to eat the head.—Nature.

The Sultan and the Beans.

If the report can be believed the new sultan of Zanzibar is fond of Boston baked beans, but whether this indicates esthetic longings or merely a low grade of simianlike imitation, it is impossible at this distance to say. Probably there are Boston scientists who will study the developments of the sultan's character as a ruler, and if it proves creditable we can rest assured that the bean pot will receive full credit.

The noble sultan of Zanzibar is calling again for his beans. His clamor is echoing near and far with a terrible rumble and rumpus and jar, as back on his throne he leans.

The noble sultan of Zanzibar is calling again for them hot. The silence of night gets a terrible scar. His howl rises up to a shuddering star—and down goes the entire lot!—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Traveling in West Africa.

The absence of horses and of other beasts of burden, combined with the density of the tropical jungles and forests, renders locomotion, at all events for Europeans, especially difficult on the west coast of Africa, writes a correspondent. No roads from the coast exist through the forest and swamps; only narrow paths, like sheepwalks, which the natives traverse in single file. "We mount," adds the correspondent, "on a very light trap, drawn by six negroes, and accompanied by others. In this way we traverse all the open country when this terminates we leave the trap, and are carried in hammocks, four men carrying each hammock, and when the bush becomes too thick for this method of transit we get out and walk!"—Golden Penny.

What a Horse-Power Is.

A horse power is the force required to lift a dead weight of 33,000 pounds one foot a minute. To find the horse power of an engine multiply the area of the piston in inches by the average steam pressure in pounds per square inch. Multiply the product by the travel of the piston in feet per minute and divide that product by 33,000. If an engine is rated at 75-horse power it will raise 75,000 pounds one foot 75 times in one minute.—Industrial Journal.

TWO DEAD SHOTS.

Returned Soldiers from the Philippines Play Havoc with a Shooting Gallery's Targets.

A wiry-looking bronzed youth in a khaki uniform walked into a Philadelphia shooting gallery the other day and, picking up a rifle, began to make things hum, says the Philadelphia Press. There were four stationary bulls-eye targets, representing men and animals, at the rear of the gallery, and on these the marksman rapped out a series of clangs that resembled realistic rendition of the anvil chorus. Then he took a fresh rifle and beat a tattoo on a pair of swinging targets. A row of several scores of clay pipes next received his attention, and the proprietor of the place spent a bad five minutes figuring out the time and money it would require to replace the dudeens that were snapped off. Several glass targets in motion were pie for the young soldier to "burn. The only thing breakable remaining was a glass ball supported by a dancing water jet. This the marksman failed to smash, though he spent half an hour and considerable ready money in an endeavor before leaving. "Darn those fellows from the Philippines!" exclaimed the shooting gallery man. "That's the second one to clean me out to-day. If it hadn't been for that glass ball on the water I'd have come out to the bad both times."

NATIONALITY IN FEET.

Peculiarities of the Pedal Extremities of Some Races of the Old World.

National characteristics are many and varied and scientists are always discovering new things in which we differ from our neighbors on the continent. The latest of these is feet, says London Answers.

The French foot is narrow and long. The Spanish foot is small and elegantly curved—thanks to its Moorish blood —corresponding to the Castilian's pride of being "high in the instep." The Arab's foot is proverbial for its high arch. The Koran says that a stream of water can run under the true Arab's foot without touching it. The foot of the Scotch is high and thick; that of the Irish, flat and square; the English, short and fleshy.

When Athens was in her zenith, the Grecian foot was the most perfectly formed and exactly proportioned of that of any of the human race. Swedes, Norwegians, and Germans have the largest feet. Americans the smallest. Russian toes are "webbed" to the first joint. Tartarian toes are all the same length.

BAR BIG BANANAS.

The Large Fruit Is Nearly Always Selected by Purchasers, But It Is the Poorest.

It comes natural to everyone to get "as much as he can for his money," but in endeavoring to do so he is often led astray. The biggest is not always the best, and this applies even to such a common thing as the fruit sold in shops and streets, says London Answers.

A London dealer who has handled tons of fruit said recently: "It is often amusing to see men, women and children picking out, as they believe, the choicest fruit in the shop and off barrows. If there are half a dozen big oranges within sight, they will have them, even if it is necessary to overturn all other varieties that are sold by the piece or dozen.

"They invariably take the poorest specimens of the whole lot, and yet are not aware of it. It is only rarely you find a person who is a good judge, and he will at once size up the heaviest oranges, lemons or bananas, regardless of size, and get the choicest fruit."

TROUBLES OF MAN-MAKING.

Although Government Has Been Engaged in the Work 20 Years, It Is Uncompleted.

The geological survey of the United States has just issued a report showing that although 20 years has been devoted to mapping out the country the larger part of it is still unsurveyed. In some of the western sections the work is attended with the greatest difficulties and dangers. Recently a party sent to map northern Montana was obliged by the severity of the weather to climb Calf mountain no fewer than eight times—the last 1,400 feet on foot—before an opportunity was presented to get a photograph of the surrounding country. The photographic method is employed in all such wild regions. When the negatives were finally secured it was after waiting all day in a driving snowstorm. Then there was a shout of joy, seconds during which six snapshots were made. During the other seven days the snow was unremitting.

FANCIES OF FASHION

Best Summer Styles Are Charmingly Neat and Dressy.

Lace Gowns Vie in Popularity with Dainty Muslin Frocks — The Blouse Continues to Hold Its Own.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

IT IS in the first month of summer—the month of roses—that fashion is considered to be at its brightest and best. The most chic modes have all been loudly proclaimed, and all the striking and really undesirable features which obtruded themselves earlier in the season have been wisely and carefully eliminated. The summer wardrobe may therefore be ordered, without fear of any radical changes taking place in the world of fashion, for some time at least.

For the fortunate girl who has plenty of money to spend the planning of a vacation outfit will prove an altogether pleasant task, but I predict a melancholy period for the one burdened with a conscience and whose dress allowance is small. She will be led by the great beauty of fashions into all manner of extravagances, unless she keeps her wits about her.

In spite of the craze for new fabrics we have returned to glace or taffeta silk. After all, there is something particularly fascinating about a black or dark-colored taffeta gown, especially when accompanied by one of the large collars of handsome old lace. The big lace collar is another fashion, by the way, which absolutely refuses to be downed.

Now to describe to you some of the charming glace gowns which are being turned out this now by a well modified on one of the fashionable South side avenues: A few are trimmed with bewitching applique work done in mirror velvet, which gives the necessary dressy touch to what would otherwise be a simple taffeta frock.

Others are decorated with little silk cords; that is to say, the plain skirt laces down the front and sides with silk cords, finished with fancy pompons of silk; these, of course, being treated in a similar manner. Tags, tassels and fandangles of all kinds and descriptions are features of some of these taffeta gowns, but trimming of this sort is never seen at its best unless put on by the skilled fingers of the master hand. There is a growing tendency, particularly noticeable in the new taffeta skirts, to trim the hips, yet at the same time to keep plain lines; and right here the individual taste of the wearer can be seen to the best advantage.

Among the new summer dress materials is one known in the world of fashion as "printed collenne," which closely resembles foulard, but is much handsomer in appearance. Gowns fashioned of this delightful fabric in black and white, dark blue or the popular golden brown shades trimmed with ecru guipure lace and softened with chiffon of a corresponding tone, make ideal summer gowns, suitable for almost every occasion, and though smart, will not be too smart. Always bear in mind that if you are over smart you are not smart at all. This sounds somewhat like a hopeless conundrum, but the woman who thoroughly understands fashion will be able to guess at once exactly what my meaning is.

Simplicity of effect is the predominating note in the prettiest summer gowns seen thus far, although the amount of elaboration and detail which goes to make up the ideal simple muslin frock surpasses all imagination.

To my mind muslin dresses, whether white or colored, should be as delightfully sheer and soft looking as possible, and trimmed daintily with much fine lace and ribbon. Innumerable frills are an absolute necessity on the average muslin frock, to prevent any limpness showing about the knees of feet, but they must be light, and edged with lace, to give the required airy-fairy appearance. The bodice of a muslin frock is prettiest when made with a slightly pouched front and finished with a fichu or large collar of lace, or a deep yoke of net trimmed with insertions of lace, and the inevitable bow of knotted velvet ribbon.

Fashions may come and fashions may go, but seemingly the blouse goes on forever, in spite of the fact that its speedy downfall has been predicted many times by those wise ones who were supposed to know all about such important matters.

The new summer models in this much beloved garment are simply irresistible, whether made of lace, crepe de chine, oriental satin or the more useful pongee silk. Crepe de chine of the new washable variety and oriental, which can also safely be intrusted to the laundress, are favorite materials for the smarter blouses and are really better wear than the cheaper muslin ones, which are not infrequently trimmed with lace of a rather cheap variety that will neither wash nor wear well. Dots, figures and rings on spot silk net is always beautiful, but never cheap, for it takes an almost endless amount of the material which can in turn be manipulated only by the clever fingers of the artistic, high-priced modiste, and to look its very best it should be worn over an exquisitely fitted underbodice fashioned of handsome duchess satin; and this same, let me tell you, cannot be bought for the proverbial song by any manner of means.

The finishing of the neck of the summer blouse presents many difficulties rather hard to overcome. There are few women endowed by nature with shapely white throats, who do well to leave them bare, but when one has left the twenties far in the rear this is apt to prove a dangerous fashion. It may perchance be for this reason that many of the newest and prettiest blouses are finished with a little round collar made of plaited net and lace, in place of the stiff, high collar which somehow seems to have fallen on evil days.

On the new pique shirts the chief feature is the collar, but of very different style from those I have been describing. They are large and of the very coarsest lace. Now do not imagine that this means a common lace; quite the contrary, I assure you. By coarse lace I mean one of the thick makes in such general vogue at the present moment, and resembling as nearly as possible the rather expensive Irish crochet lace. The real smartness, however, of all the latest shirts and blouses depends upon the manner in which they are worn, and the importance of the waistband in this connection cannot be overestimated. Nowadays there are so many really beautiful belts, from silver to elastic, which can be procured at a small outlay. However, one should not allow a fancy for glitter and novelty to run away with their idea of the general fitness of things. Charming as the fancy filigree belt may be in itself, it is not appropriate to wear with a pique shirt, and even if it were it does not become every style of figure; the stout sister, if she be wise in her day and generation, will flee from it as she would from the plague. The new mode of fashion is to shorten the waist in the back, and to lengthen it somewhat out of proportion in front. Those who really love dress invariably adopt the latest kinks almost without knowing it, yet it is not at all necessary to exaggerate fashion, for the styles of the hour are very beautiful and the best of them are certainly not eccentric.

No matter what the vagaries of fashion may be, she ever remains faithful to the principles of the little black hat, and just now the most sought after models are in this somber tone. Later on, however, it will be replaced by the all-white hat—in fact, within the week I have seen a few models of this description that were simply ravishing.

Most Powerful Explosive.

Maximite, the most remarkable explosive ever known, has recently received its final test. It has the greatest destructive power of any known explosive and is safer to handle than any other. Its composition is of course a government secret, though it was invented by Hudson Maxim, after whom it is called Maximite.

A Believer in Matrimony.

Townsend Miller, a Montauk halfbreed, living at Jamaica, L. I., who claims to be 104 years old, has just been married for the fourth time.

Big Increase in Cremation.

Cremation is one of the oldest forms of disposal of the dead, yet it is a form that lapsed from use for centuries. It appears to be in process of restoration. True, it has made but little headway against the custom of burial, yet there is an increase every year in such proportion that we may look for a wide adoption of it within the next quarter century. There are in this country but 26 crematories, yet Japan is only but two 18 years ago, and the number of cremations is 2,500 or more a year. When statistics were have so ceased to be an occasion of comment that an impression may have been created which is contrary to the fact of growth, but the truth that about 14,000 incinerations have occurred in the United States, which, added to the large number in Europe, certainly indicates an increase.

How He Stated It.

When Representative Tompkins, of Ohio, was a young lawyer in the state, and was winning his spurs, he occasionally found it profitable to accept a case in a justice's court in the country. He tells the following story of the argument made by a rural barrister before such a magistrate. The case was one in which the plaintiff sought to recover damages from a railroad company for the killing of a cow. During the course of his argument the country lawyer used this expressive sentence: "If the train had been run as it should have been run, or if the whistle had been rung as it should have been rang, or if the whistle had been blown as it should have been blew, both of which they did neither, the cow would not have been injured when she was killed."—Richmond Dispatch.

When Hands Grow Old.

According to Sir James Crichton Browne the hand begins to lose its suppleness when the individual is about 40 years of age. The scale of wages in the button trade, for example, is a good indication of this tendency of the hand to grow old so early in life. At his very best, in his prime, a skillful buttonmaker can make 6,240 ivory buttons a day on his lathe. For this he receives 45 shillings a week. When the workman is 55 years of age he can seldom make more than 90 shillings—this revealing that he still enjoys sound health.—Baltimore American.

A prominent feature of concern of Paris, which is closely connected with the General Electric company, of New York, is now securing all the water power available in the department of the Alpes Maritimes, with the object of supplying light and power to towns on the southeastern coast of France. The company also hopes to supply power for the electric locomotives which the Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean railway proposes to operate on the Cannes-Monaco railway during the winter.

"Didn't I tell you I had only a quarter left? I wanted to keep that for myself."—Baltimore News.

Trees and Temperature.

We are in the habit of seeking the shade of a tree as a means of getting cool, but that is not the only power it has of reducing the temperature. On the same principle that a lump of ice will cool a glass of water a tree will cool the air around it, because its own temperature is uniformly about 45 degrees; that is to say, the temperature of the tree as a body. This is little understood, perhaps, but it is a recognized scientific fact, and it adds much force to the argument in favor of planting trees in cities. A clump of trees is capable of making a material reduction in temperature. The woods, therefore, are cool, not only because they are shady, but because the trees are constantly fighting off the heat.—Science.

Birds in Winter.

To see all our birds in their winter homes we should have to travel from the middle states down to the Argentine Republic. We could see a great many, though, by making a midwinter trip to the gulf states. In Florida, for instance, we should find enormous flocks of robins whirling through the trees and alighting here and there to feed upon the berries of the china-tree and holly. Many birds we should find only along the coast, and many others we should have to search for in the silent cypress swamps of Louisiana and Mississippi. The herons love the solitude of these swamps, where in the numerous springs and streams they find the fish and frogs on which they feed.—Woman's Home Companion.

Insulted Her.

"Why," asked Mrs. Justgotrich of the courteous waiter at the summer resort, "why do you fold the napkin in such a queer shape?"

"To demonstrate, madam," replied the waiter, who was a sophomore from Yell college, "that in an isosceles triangle the sum of the square of the base and perpendicular is equal to the square of the hypotenuse."

Here Mrs. Justgotrich called all her new-found dignity to her aid.

"Young man," she snapped, "just because I have been kind to you, you need not be so presumptuous. I have told you twice already that I wanted you to give me the English names of the dishes, and not call them off in French."—Baltimore American.

Origin of the Cannon.

It is a curious fact that the first cannon was made in Venice. It was called a "bombard," and was invented and employed by Gen. Pisani in a war against the Genoese. The original bombard, which bears the date of 1380, is still preserved, and stands at the foot of Pisani's statue at the arsenal. The bombard threw a stone 100 pounds in weight; another Venetian general, Francisco Barde, improved it until he was able to handle a charge of rock and bowlders weighing 2,000 pounds. It proved disastrous to him, however, for one day during the siege of Zara, while he was operating his terrible engine, he was hurled by it over the walls and instantly killed.—Detroit Free Press.

No Suicides Among Negroes.

It is interesting to note that when confined on board a slaver the negroes sought relief in suicide, against which the crew were most vigilant; but when landed, fed and established in cabins, they abandoned all idea of self-destruction. Their native cheerfulness asserted itself and they soon sang at their toil, ready to laugh at trifles or dance after the day's work. So rare is suicide among American negroes that it is doubtful if a well-authenticated case can be shown. — Leslie's Monthly.

PROGRESS OF JAPAN.

Due Primarily to the Influence of the United States.

There Is No Reason Why We Should Not Control the Lion's Share of the Asiatic Empire's Foreign Trade.

Within 50 years just passed in the history of Japan, the self-erected barriers of centuries gone were broken down by the official visit of Commodore Perry, of the United States navy.

Then following for a period of 20 years, intercourse was grudgingly permitted by the Japanese government, until at last the spirit of commercialism and advancement had its birth in the brains of these clever people and now, at the present time, they are a recognized power and power with the so-called civilized nations.

When it is considered that within the last 25 years these people have overcome the customs and traditions of centuries their rise is among the wonders of the present day.

We learn that the census of 1898 gives them a population of forty-three and three-quarter millions of people, and that there is not the poverty and suffering existing among them as with other nations. Simple in tastes, cleanly in their homes and habits, they are uniformly a happy race, filled with a dominant pride of country that has helped them to win the place they now occupy and hold among other peoples.

Mr. Otani Kai, president of the Yokohama Japanese chamber of commerce, who is a very strong friend of the United States, said in one of his recent addresses, among other things:

"While there have been many contributory causes, the most direct and powerful factor in bringing about the present prosperous condition of Japan has been the impartiality and good feeling shown by the government and people of the United States, who have at all times given every encouragement and assistance in and to the introduction of modern civilization."

ROBERT MITCHELL FLOYD.
(Noted Boston Publicist and Authority on Trade Topics.)

So the opening of the twentieth century shows a welding of friend*ship between one of the oldest and* most exclusive of nations with the youngest and most cosmopolitan of countries.

Names of seaports and commercial towns in Japan were formerly an unknown quantity to us, but Tokio, with its ivory, silver and inlaid works and bronze vases, with cloisonne and lacquer ware, Osaka, with cotton yarns, rugs, fabrics, glassware; Kobe, with rice, bamboo, screens, mattings, straw-braids; Nagasaki, with fishery products and noted as being the first port opened for foreign trade in Japan; Nagoya, with porcelain clocks and paper; Shidzuoka, with tea, mushrooms and artistic creations in bamboo; Ashikaga and Kiriu, with their silk fabrics, which have been in existence as manufactures centuries since a very ancient period—are now commonly known to the business world.

Of course there are many other large cities that are constantly referred to, such as Mojl, a port through which all the coal passes from the numerous mines in that vicinity; and the Mecca of all travelers, Yokohama.

This port is the great commercial city of Japan, for here the traders meet to buy the products of the country, which are concentrated at this point. Besides the native dealers, business houses from every section of the world have their representatives, and the tongues that are heard on the thoroughfares are as numerous as leaves upon a tea plant.

There is a growing sale for the Japanese teas in the markets of the United States and Canada, and there seems no doubt, writes Robert Mitchell Floyd, in Trade Press List, that the abrogation of duties by the states will increase the consumption, and be of great assistance to the tea-raisers of Japan.

Our Latest Nomad Spirit.

In our work we get further and further away from the earliest types of civilization, but in our play we come at times very near to prehistoric life, says the People's Friend. Our picnics are an attempt to satisfy our latent nomad instinct, our games and races are a symbol of the fierce struggle for existence which was a very real literal conflict in those far-off days, but has been modernized under the name of trade competition. And our love of shooting and fishing and hunting has no doubt been inherited from those who long ago hunted, not for pleasure, but for dinner.

SOMERSET'S SITUATION.

North Plainfield has very plainly demonstrated that it is an important factor in county Somerset affairs. From a fairly safe Republican county, it has transformed it into an enthusiastic Democratic one and with such ease as to stagger those who thought they knew what the county was doing. Whether it will continue along its present lines seems to depend largely on the future. And the future is a rather uncertain quantity.

There is no secrecy as to why this remarkable change came over North Plainfield. It was the outcome of the factional troubles and the defeat of the annexation project. It is confidently believed by the annexationists, and with much reason, that although the project was defeated fairly enough, the decision was made on other than the real merits of the question and that the influences at Somerville were brought to bear against it. When the news of this overwhelming defeat came to the Somerville leaders, it may be that they wished that North Plainfield had been allowed to depart in peace.—Its departure would have certainly resulted in the complete victory of the Republicans in Somerset.

Hard as it may be to admit it, the Somerville Republicans will have to concede that North Plainfield holds the balance of power in Somerset county. Of course, the Thompson faction may continue to hold aloof but to continue such a course means sure defeat and is suicidal to the interests of its party. It is clearly up to that faction to approach this end of the county with some project of conciliation if it intends to secure harmony for the future. How the borough Republicans will receive any such overtures remains to be seen but it is certain that they will not, under the present circumstances, take the initiative.

CHANGING ITS NAME.

One great trouble which strangers have in making their way through the eastern part of the city is due to the fact that the streets have the most unaccountable way of changing their names without any particular reason for it. While it is certainly true that it would be a rather peculiar state of affairs if East Ninth street should cross East Seventh, that difficulty could be remedied without changing the names of both of them. Councilman George P. Mellick is now agitating a movement which aims to change the name of LaGrande avenue to East Seventh street as it was originally.

There is an East Seventh street but it only runs from Park avenue to Watchung avenue and the same thoroughfare, east of Watchung avenue, passes under the title of LaGrande avenue. East Ninth street circles around and crosses this thoroughfare, but before that comes to pass it has changed its name to Franklin place. What would be Tenth street and its neighbors have been changed to Richmond street and a series of avenues and places. The return to the title of East Seventh street would, therefore, not complicate matters in that way and would simplify things by extending the general scheme on which the rest of the city is laid out.

Mr. Mellick believes that the change would be an improvement and would be of decided benefit to those who happen to be strangers here and want to find that street. East Seventh street would mean something and give a direct clue to its location while LaGrande avenue would suggest nothing. There are a number of residents of that thoroughfare who favor this change. It is probable that the subject will be brought to the attention of the Common Council, probably by petition, and that an effort will be made to have the name officially changed and LaGrande avenue wiped off the map.

Very apropos was the comment of the Newark News on the recent election in Somerset. It was: "Senator Charles A. Reed stuck his head out of his political grave on Tuesday just long enough to chuckle over the stab in the back inflicted on Lew Thompson. Now is the time to screw down the coffin lid to prevent another such grewsome spectacle."

Next week will see the opening of the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League. This triangular league promises to arouse more interest than ever in that popular sport. Unfortunately, neither of the local gymnasiums, where the games will be played, are prepared to accommodate any great crowd.

MISS COOLEY MARRIES CAPTAIN OF ENGINEERS

Wedding of Miss Grace Webster Cooley to Captain Mason Mathews Patrick.

HELD AT GLENORAN

CAPTAIN AND MRS. PATRICK WILL MAKE THEIR HOME AT WASHINGTON.

Ceremony Performed by Dr. Taylor, President of Vassar College, at 1:30 o'Clock This Afternoon at Home of the Bride's Parents.

The wedding of Miss Grace Webster Cooley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, to Captain Mason Mathews Patrick, of the Engineers Corps U. S. A., took place this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the home of the bride, Glenoran. Dr. James M. Taylor, president of Vassar College, of which the bride is a graduate, performed the marriage service.

At 1:20 the bridal party descended the broad staircase to the library and from thence to the parlors where they passed down an aisle formed of white ribbons held by the Misses Helen Martin, Blossom Fitz-Randolph, Marie Honeycutt and Eleanor Lusk, to the alcove where the minister stood waiting to tie the nuptial knot.

In the bridal procession were the maid-of-honor, Miss Annie H. Gilman, of Newton, Mass., and the best man, Captain Frederick P. Reynolds, of the Medical Corps, U. S. A., now stationed at Washington. The bride's gown was of Brussels net over white satin with trimmings of point lace applique which was worn by her mother on her wedding gown. At the head a long white veil was caught which hung in graceful folds about her while in her hand she carried an handsome bouquet of lilies of the valley. The maid-of-honor's gown was of white China crepe. Mrs. Cooley wore a handsome gown of gray satin with embroidery trimmings.

After the ceremony had been performed the bride and groom received the guests and following the reception a wedding luncheon was served.

At 2 o'clock Captain and Mrs. Patrick left the house for the depot where they boarded a train for the south where they will spend three weeks on a wedding tour. On their return they will reside at the Malborough Hotel at Washington where they have very handsomely furnished apartments awaiting them.

The decorations at the home were very handsome. They were of smilax, chrysanthemums and roses. The array of presents received were very handsome and included many sets of silverware, cut glass and pieces of furniture.

TO CALL PASTOR.

Marcounier Chapel Decides to Extend Call to H. J. Tuipt, Student at Rutgers College.

A congregational meeting was held at Marcounier chapel last Sunday, for the purpose of making arrangements for the winter's work and also to secure a pastor for the chapel. Robert Clark, Jr., and George L. VanKleeburgh, of Trinity Reformed church, were in charge of the meeting, which was largely attended. It was unanimously decided to extend a call to H. J. Tuipt, a student in the Theological Seminary at Rutgers College, to become the pastor. He will be communicated with and a favorable reply is anticipated.

It was also decided that during the winter the Sunday-school will meet at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and instead of holding an evening preaching service, to hold it after the Sun*day-school in the* afternoon. This was considered wise in view of the bad weather usually accompanying the winter months.

AT HORSE SHOWS.

T. S. Wheeler Won a Number of Prizes in New York State.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Wheeler, of Park avenue, are home after an absence of several months from the city. After leaving their houseboat and yacht at Alexandria Bay, they spent two weeks at Mr. Wheeler's place in the Berkshire hills and then attended the horse shows at Lenox, Mass., Millbrook, Poughkeepsie and Goshen, N. Y. They exhibited three road horses and secured four blue ribbons, five reds and one yellow. They afterward drove home to Plainfield.

Chance to Say Good-Bye.

The Royal Blue Line train carrying Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. It gave the relatives of the departing ones a good opportunity to have a chat and say good-bye.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Way, of Plainfield, have been visiting Bound Brook relatives.

ALIS BEAT ROSELLE BY SINGLE TOUCHDOWN

With a Sadly Crippled Team, the Alis Eleven Managed to Hold Roselle Down.

PLAYED AT ROSELLE

GAME WAS SOMETHING OF A DISAPPOINTMENT TO THE CROWD.

The Odds Were Against Alis Which Scored at the Start of the Game —Then the Ball Seesawed Up and Down the Gridiron.

The football game, between the Alis A. A. and the Roselles at Roselle Saturday afternoon, was played under conditions which were anything but conducive to victory for the local team and, while the Alis team came out victorious, the game was in a way a disappointment to the local football enthusiasts which went down to witness the battle. The score was 5 to 0 in favor of the Alis but the game was not finished owing to the darkness.

The odds were decidedly against the Alis as nearly all of the best men on the team were either disabled before the game or were hurt during the playing and the game was really won by substitutes secured from the Cranford football team. Besides this the Roselles outweighed the local players and the fact of their losing the game was because of their inferior team work.

In the first half the Roselles kicked to Alis and the ball was caught by Radford who is familiar. The ball was recovered and carried back to Roselle's ten yard line and then brought over the line, the Alis scoring a touchdown. Phillips failed to kick the goal making the score 5 to 0. The balance of the first half was composed mostly of see-saw playing in which neither side had the advantage. Shortly before the end of the first half Phillips was obliged to retire from the game. From that time the local team had its troubles. That the Alis did not lose the points gained was directly traceable to Waring's fine work.

When the second half opened the Alis worked the ball down the field slowly when Wilson sustained his ankle and was obliged to retire. James Hulm, of the Roselles, made one good run but was crowded out of the side lines by the Alis tackles. Nearly all the gains during the rest of the second half were by short plays. Owing to the darkness the game was called leaving the score 5 to 0.

ONE OF WORCESTER'S PROMINENT MEN DEAD

Jeremiah Evarts Greene Died at Home of His Sister, Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, Saturday.

HE WAS POSTMASTER

CAME TO PLAINFIELD TO STAY WITH HER THREE WEEKS AGO.

Remains Removed to Worcester, Mass., Sunday, Where Funeral Was Held Monday—He Had An Eventful Career.

Jeremiah Evarts Greene, who for many years was postmaster at Worcester, Mass., died Saturday afternoon at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, of West Eighth street, where he had been for the last three weeks. He was taken ill prior to that time and Mrs. Tracy went to Worcester to assist in the care of him. As soon as he was strong enough to travel he came to Plainfield with his sister. During the last few days of his illness he failed rapidly. The remains were taken to Worcester, Sunday, where the funeral services were held Monday. The interment was at New Haven, Conn.

Mr. Greene was born in Boston, Mass., November 27, 1834, and was graduated at Yale College in the class of '53. Later he taught in a seminary and spent three years surveying in Kansas. Afterwards he studied law in the office of Lewis H. Bostell in Worcester and after three months' study was admitted to the bar there. He practiced in North Brookfield, Mass.

He enlisted in the Civil War in 1861 for three years as first lieutenant in Company F, Fifteenth Massachusetts Volunteers, Col. (afterwards) Brig.-Gen. Charles Devens, Jr. He was in the battle of Ball's Bluff, taken prisoner, carried to Richmond, and after four months was released on parole. He received a captain's commission but, not being exchanged for a long time, he resigned and resumed the practice of the law. Later he retired from practice and became editor of the Worcester Spy and so continued for a long series of years.

During President Harrison's first term, Mr. Greene was appointed postmaster at Worcester and continued in office up to the time of his death. When President Cleveland was elected he told Senator Hoar, a cousin to Mr. Greene, that the latter need not worry about his position as he would be con*tinued as postmaster. He was a man* of marked ability and he conducted the office at Worcester in a highly efficient manner.

Mr. Greene leaves no family. His wife died several years ago. He is, however, survived by four brothers and four sisters. The brothers are Hon. Roger Sherman Greene and Samuel Greene, of the State of Washington; Rev. Daniel Crosby Greene, a missionary in Japan, and Henry Hill Greene, of New York. The sisters are Mrs. Henry Loomis, of Yokohama, Japan; Mrs. L. H. Bostell, of Washington; Mrs. S. W. Boardman, of Bloomfield, N. J.; and Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, of this city. In all there were twelve children, four having died some years ago.

MRS. JOS. M. MYERS PASSED AWAY SUNDAY

Originator of Local Chinese Sunday-School Succumbed to Fatal Illness.

SHE WAS WELL-KNOWN

HAD LONG BEEN AN INDEFATIGABLE CHRISTIAN WORKER.

But Her Special Interest Was the Chinese Sunday-School With Which She Labored to the Last —Leaves Two Children.

The death of Mrs. Joseph M. Myers occurred Sunday at her home, 317 East Front street, following an illness of one week. Of late she had not been at all well and during her last illness, her condition was such that her death was not unexpected.

There is probably no Christian worker in this city who will be missed more than Mrs. Myers. She was a very active force in charity enterprises and Christian effort, and especially in a Chinese Sunday-school, which she organized in this city several years ago, did she labor with indefatigable zeal and energy. She conducted this work with much success and a number of Chinamen in this city have learned to love and esteem her for her interest in their behalf. When her death became know this morning the members of the Sunday-school expressed their profound regret and gave sincere testimony to her Christian character and devotion. In other ways Mrs. Myers assisted in works of charity and there are many who have received help from her.

Mrs. Myers was the widow of Joseph M. Myers who was the first cashier of the City National Bank. He died a number of years ago. She had lived in Plainfield a great many years and she made a host of friends. She was an earnest member of the Crescent Avenue church and devoted a portion of her time to the various departments of the work there. Her last effort was a week ago Sunday when she taught her Chinese Sunday school class. Last Sunday, while too ill to attend to this duty, she had the class in remembrance.

During her last illness, she had the constant care and attention of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Lee Scribner, wife of Prof. Scribner. Besides a daughter, Mrs. Myers leaves a son, Joseph L. Myers, who is engaged in business in New York.

MISS STONE SPOKE.

Addressed the Christian Endeavor Meeting at the Congregational Church Last Evening.

Miss Ellen Stone, the American missionary who was captured by Macedonian brigands and who lectured on her experiences at the Casino Saturday evening, was the guest over Sunday of Rev. and Mrs. Charles L. Goodrich at the parsonage on West Seventh street. Sunday evening she addressed the Christian Endeavor meeting at the Congregational church. Although that fact had not been publicly announced until yesterday morning, the congregation grew to such proportions that the service had to be held in the main auditorium which was not large enough to accommodate all.

While Miss Stone did not attempt to tell the whole story of her captivity, she related many incidents which were related to with great interest. Most impressive was her word picture of the final release and the great happiness of the captives when they were free once more. After the service many crowded to the front of the church to get an opportunity of meeting her personally and hearing something more of her remarkable adventures.

Wedded a Decade.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wikoff, of Richmond street, celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary Friday evening at their home. Guests were present from New York, Westfield, Cranford, Rahway and Red Bank. The celebrants received many handsome presents to mark the event as one of the most pleasant in their married life.

Letters from Women

Cured by the use of Kodol are received daily. Their troubles nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder.

If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices secreted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to transform the nutrient properties of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the amount of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the delicate organs gradually grows weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. That of treating the diseased organ. The best doctors in the land make this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that rich, red blood is sent coursing through the veins and strength to every muscle, tissue and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full strength and vigor is soon restored to each. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders.

I have taken Kodol for nearly two months after each meal and it is the only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pains I endured. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy, I seldom need it, as it has cured me. Mrs. J. W. Goodnight, Mills Corner, N. Y.

SHOT FRIEND BY ACCIDENT

First Fatality of Hunting Season Occurred Near Bound Brook Monday.

DIED AT HOSPITAL HERE

Harvey Garretson Fatally Injured by Load of Shot From Gun Carried by Friend, Albert Ord—He Tripped and Accidentally Discharged Gun—Brought Here.

The first fatal accident of the local hunting season was reported Tuesday morning when Harvey Garretson, a young man eighteen years of age died in the Muhlenberg Hospital as a result of injuries received by the accidental discharge of a shot gun.

Harvey Garretson, the son of Howard Garretson, a well-known citizen of South Bound Brook, in company with Albert Ord, a neighbor's son, went hunting Monday afternoon for rabbits near Middlebush armed with two heavy shot guns. When near Middlebush they both spied a litter of young rabbits and started across the field in pursuit of them. The field was littered with broken corn stalks and young Garretson, who had the lightest gun, ran ahead of Ord. Suddenly Ord tripped on one of the stalks and the gun went off.

The next instant there was a piercing scream from Garretson and young Ord was horror stricken to see his companion fall to the ground with the blood streaming from his leg. Lewis Carr, who had joined the two lads a few minutes before and who had taken a round about detour of the field to head off the rabbits, heard the shot and the piercing scream and ran over to see what the trouble was.

The two companions of the injured boy saw at once that their friend was seriously injured and while Ord started out to run the two miles to the home of Dr. Cooper at Middlebush, Carr with presence of mind tore up his handkerchief and tied it about the injured member just above the injury to stop the flow of blood.

The injured boy was brought to this city where he was taken to the home of Dr. Ellis W. Hedges who ordered his removal to the hospital where the leg was amputated just above the knee. The young man gradually weakened and Tuesday a. m. in spite of careful nursing the patient died.

The accident was purely accidental and the father of the dead boy absolves young Ord from any blame.

THEATRICAL

The bill at Keith's Theatre, New York, will be headed by Eddie Girard and Jessie Gardner, who will present a comedy sketch. Mr. Girard is best known to the theatre going public as the star of "Natural Gas." Tom Ryan and Mary Richfield appear in a sketch by Will M. Cressy entitled "Mag Haggerty's Father." The Andersen Brothers, acrobats, are about the best in their line of work, and Edward Latell, with his musical specialties, needs no introduction to the patrons of the better class of vaudeville houses. Bruno and Russell, have a dancing act, and Simmons and White have a very laughable blackface skit. Fyne and Dandy, barrel jumpers and acrobats, supply no small measure of the comedy. Clarice Vance, who bills herself as the "The Southern Singer," and who is probably the best known singer of coon songs in America; Sailor and Barberetto, vocalists; the Leanders jugglers; Howley and Leslie, singers and dancers; Pauline Saxon, the originator of "Sis Perkins Girl," an unique type of rural character, has also some very clever straight comedy work; Pelot, the joggler, and seventeen other strong turns.

ANOTHER DOCTOR.

Dr. Hughes is to Take Up His Residence on Somerset Street.

North Plainfield is soon to have another doctor to attend to the ailments of the people across the brook. The new physician is Dr. Hughes, who for the past five years has been connected with the staff of a large metropolitan hospital.

Dr. Hughes will occupy the house at 56 Somerset street, directly opposite the office of Dr. Dundon. The entire front of the house will be renovated and the interior will be papered and repainted and the front rooms fitted up for a reception room for patients.

Dr. Hughes expects to be in his new office before the first of December.

THEY CLOSE THIS MONTH

E. T. NEWKIRK TAKES THE LEAD FOR THE GOLF COMMITTEE CUP.

Newkirk Won First Honors and Now is in the Fore by a Six-to-a-Point—H. deP. Wright Stands Second.

There were only three contestants for the Boys' cup in the weekly competition on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course, Saturday, Arthur L. Wills won first honors and W. T. Gleaney, who leads for the trophy, finished second, while Arthur Peterson won the one remaining point. W. T. Gleaney is still in first position, while Arthur Peterson is second. CHARITY WORK IN PLAINFIELD eigners or foreign-born. Miss Van Boskerck's report also treated of the work in her department of caring for children and helping not only them but their parents and placing the children where they will receive the best care, where the parents are not able to look after them. The report was received with hearty applause.

The annual election of officers took place at this time and resulted as follows: President, H. M. Maxson; vice presidents, Charles W. McCutchen, John Doull Miller and Mrs. J. K. Myers; secretary, W. S. Tyler; treasurer, Boardman Wright.

By a unanimous vote the constitution was amended to provide for the corporate seal a circle with the name of the association therein and the seal in the centre. Resolutions presented by Miss Tweedy expressing the sincere regret of the death of Mrs. Henry Opdyke, a former zealous member of the association. She was one of the charter members of the association.

Mr. Maxson stated that on Saturday there would be on exhibition of books at the Public Library of special interest to all charity workers, and he urged all persons interested to accept this opportunity of attending the exhibity.

There was no other business and the president introduced Hugh Fox, president of the State Board of Children's Guardians, who gave a short but interesting talk on "Child Saving in New Jersey." At the outset Mr. Fox gave a number of statistics regarding the population of the State. He said that only about 5 per cent. are illiterate and of the 14,000 colored population one half are illiterate.

Mr. Fox said that there is no excuse to build additional institutions for children, the present number being considered sufficient to care for them. He said that the work of the State Board is to make families independent and to keep the alms houses empty. He said that the board is required to recognize the faith of children where it exists and another important duty is that which gives the board the power to revise commitments. In this way children are assisted and properly cared for. Nearly all of the dependent children found last year were properly placed with relatives or with others who would care for them. Mr. Fox also spoke of the general practice parents have of deserting their children. In this respect the law does not step in and deter parents from doing this cruel act.

The speaker spoke strongly in favor of physical training for school children so that they may be sent to school for their health instead of being taken out of school for that purpose. Some thought was given to child labor and the incompetency of a majority of the factory inspectors in New Jersey. Some reforms, Mr. Fox said, are being planned along this line. He said that what is needed is a business-like co-operation on the part of the people and this would accomplish immense good in the cause of charity in the whole State.

UNION COUNTY COUNT IS FINALLY COMPLETED

Union County Board of Election Finished Its Labors Yesterday Afternoon.

THE RETURNS DELAYED

THE TOTAL VOTE IN THIS COUNTY NUMBERED 21,367.

Total Vote for All the Candidates Who Ran for Office in Union County—The Board Has Made Its Official Announcement.

Elizabeth, Nov. 11—The County Board of Election completed its official canvass of Union county's vote polled last Tuesday, late yesterday afternoon. Not in many years have the returns been in such a muddle and it was only by working early and late that the officers completed the count just ahead of the day when several of the officers must take office.

Following is the total vote for the various offices: For Congress—Charles E. Fowler, R., 10,723; Flanagan, D., 9,881; Beeman, S., 351; Grieb, S. L., 168; VanOrden, C., 191. Senator—Cross, R., 10,717; Martine, D., 9,532; Pollak, S., 358; May, S. L., 194; Massett, P., 185. Sheriff — Coriell, R., 10,385; Moore, D., 10,054; Winkler, S., 343; Kesmer, S. L., 190; Brandt, S. L., 198; Maeder, S. L., 195; Runyon, P., 184; Fletcher, P., 189; King, P., 184. Coroner—Sheriffs, R., 10,962; McCullion, D., 9,816; Wister, S., 354; Samer, S. L., 192; Myles, P., 177.

The total vote in the county was 21,367 and in addition there were 133 rejected ballots.

Saturday should have seen the completion of the count but even at that time returns were missing from Elizabeth, Rahway and Plainfield. The tally sheets of the Second district of the First ward and the Second district of the Third ward in Plainfield failed to give any figure for sheriff, surrogate or coroner. It is the opinion of all the officers that another method of getting the count should be arrived at.

NEARLY LOST LEG.

James O'Keefe Injured While Working on a Planer at Pond's.

James O'Keefe, a planer in the employ of the Pond Tool Works, was the victim of a serious accident Friday afternoon while at work at the factory. He was engaged in placing a heavy piece of iron on the machine and had just started the machine in operation when the rachet bob on the lathe flew out and caught in the leg of the workman, tearing out a large quanity of the muscles of the leg leaving the bone exposed. He was removed to his home on West Second street where he is reported as rapidly recovering.

Appointed Steward.

Mayor N. B. Smalley has appointed George E. Steward, the son of the wheelwright of North Plainfield, to the stewardship of the Warren Engine Company to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of the former steward of that company. The new appointee had been a steward of the engine house for many years before and always gave satisfaction. Mr. Stewart entered upon his new duties Saturday night.

Lump of Coal Broke Leg.

Patrick Honan, the seven-year-old son of Michael Honan, of South Second street, was admitted to Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday, suffering from a fracture of the bones of the right leg. He was standing along the railroad bank, near Plainfield avenue, when a companion threw a large block of coal off a car. It struck him just above the ankle inflicting the break.

LAND OWNERS OBJECT TO STREET WIDENING

So Proposed Improvements to Sycamore Avenue Not to be Made at Present.

REPORT TO THE COUNCIL

ADJOURNED MEETING OF COMMON COUNCIL HELD MONDAY NIGHT.

Little Routine Business and Report of the Street Committee Came Before the Meeting—To Accept Evergreen Avenue.

There was little business of much importance considered at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last Monday. All the members except Councilmen Mellick and Murphy were present. F. A. Barnaby, of Plainfield avenue, petitioned the Council for additional electric lights on that avenue between Stelle and Pemberton avenues, and later in the evening, the members granted the petition, by giving an extra light and moving another one to a more desired spot.

E. G. Wilson and others petitioned for three electric lights, at Park and Moffett avenues, Moffett and Marion avenues and Marion and South End avenues. The matter was referred to the proper committee. Residents of Clinton avenue asked the Council to improve that avenue, between Third and Fourth street, with flagging, curbing, electric light, etc. In reply to this Mr. Tolles stated that these improvements are now underway and will be completed before winter sets in.

Mr. Tolles reported back the petition of G. S. Alpaugh regarding the widening of Sycamore street, and stated that nothing could be done in this matter at present. Some of the property-owners would not consent to the improvement and Mr. Tolles said that the only way the widening could be accomplished would be to have commissioners appointed.

Mr. Tolles also presented a communication from the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, signed by the president, C. J. Flak, in which the Board asked the Council to grade and repair Randolph road near the new hospital grounds. The matter was referred to the street committee.

In accordance with the request of property-owners on Evergreen avenue, between Hillside and Woodland avenues, an ordinance to accept the avenue as a public street, was adopted on its first and second readings, and ordered advertised. There being no further business the Council adjourned, after which the street committee held a meting to consider several matters coming under its jurisdiction.

Sawed His Thumb.

W. D. Williams, of Woodhull & Martin's store, nearly put his right hand out of business, Saturday. He was sawing some wood at his home, when the instrument of many teeth jumped from the wood to his thumb, penetrating the flesh to a considerable depth. It required a number of stitches to close up the laceration.

Secured Good Talent.

The Ladies' Guild Society of the Mission of the Heavenly Rest has secured the Rutgers Mandolin and Glee Club for its entertainment in the Parish house, Friday evening. In addition excellent local talent will contribute to the programme.

Made Favorable Impression.

Prof. Thomas G. Hall, of Union Theological Seminary, who is at present occupying the pulpit at the Crescent Avenue church, has made a favorable impression. He will continue to occupy the pulpit the rest of this month.

Short Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

In the Wethersfield notes of the Hartford Courant, October 25, there appears an item of interest to Plainfield concerning Mrs. Jane Davis, mother of Mrs. Mary A. Mulford, now of Chicago, but for some years a resident of Plainfield. The item is as follows:

"On Saturday evening Mrs. Jane Davis, the much honored mother of Mrs. Mary A. Mulford, of Chicago, Ill., celebrated her ninetieth birthday in Wethersfield at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin M. Haven, the latter being one of the several nieces who, with the nephews and their families, were present. Mrs. Davis was remembered with gifts and expressions of endearment from these and also from her relatives in California, Chicago, Newport, Fall River, Norwich, etc. A supper was an enjoyable feature and the event was full of interest. Mrs. Davis is in perfect health and her gentleness of manner, her meekness of spirit is surely a high example for her children to follow."

As a result of special religious meeting recently held at Lowell, Mass., recently, Rev. Asa R. Dills, formerly of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and Prof. Stont, the singing evangelist, who are great friends, happened to meet. They were boyhood playmates and close friends. In the early days young Stont would often sing to his friend as even that talent manifested itself. The two as of the two separated and only occasionally did they hear anything of each other. A few months since they were providentially brought into correspondence, resulting in association together in special services. In other days they enthusiastically played baseball together on the home team and one as a pitcher and the other as catcher made a strong combination. As they are now associated they prove to be true yoke-fellows, one as a speaker, the other as singer, each doing well his own part. Many Plainfielders will remember Mr. Dills as one of the best ball players in this city at one time.

HOW SOMERSET REALLY WENT

The Pluralities of the Various County Candidates Who Were Elected Tuesday.

DEMOND RAN THE BEST

He Had Plurality of 508—Childs Was Next With 394—Swackhamer Was Elected by 185 Plurality—The Democrats As Well As Republicans Surprised.

Somerville, Nov. 6—There is dismay in the camp of the Republican hosts, old Somerset having gone over to the enemy. Democrats and Republicans alike are wondering how it was done. The former were as much surprised as the latter at the result.

Senator Thompson, the Republican leader, was dazed when realized the result, and the North Plainfield vote was an astounder to the "'boss." There is now no doubt that North Plainfield is still a very important factor in any political battle.

After having two conventions, so to speak, and undergoing no end of weddinging the Democrats have achieved a remarkable victory.

The only dark cloud to mar the rejoicing of the victorious host is the result on Congress, but even had Persine received as large a majority here as the man who ran the highest on the Democratic ticket he could not have been elected, Mercer giving his opponent such a rousing majority.

As the election boards are always slow in getting the returns in to the County Clerk even yet it is impossible to secure the total vote. The figures given below are the majorities received in each voting precinct and these are as correct as it is possible to obtain at the present writing. It is believed that the majorities of all the winners will be somewhat reduced when the official vote is obtainable.

Here are the figures on Congress. Those give Lanning 322 plurality:

Feed for Wild Beasts.

On a large farm near Greensboro, N. C., John S. Sparks, the owner, conducts a queer industry—that of raising Angora goats as food for lions and tigers. The farm is mostly mountain land, and the 200 goats imported by Sparks have been turned loose to clear the mountain slopes of shrubbery and noxious growth so that it can be turned into pasture land for herbivorous animals. Lions, tigers, camels, elephants and other animals will graze on this land. After the goats have properly fitted the farm for this purpose they will be turned into food for the beasts. Since the goats have been placed on the farm they have increased very fast, and show such wonderful industry in clearing land that the owner expects excellent results in his breeding of wild animals. The young kids are sold in large quantities for food to the inhabitants of the neighborhood, and quite a revenue is also derived from the fleece of the goats, which is long and as fine as silk.

London Dines at Noon.

Except in certain circles, from the upper middle class or lower upper classes upward, among whom the custom of evening dinner prevails, the respectable English custom is to serve dinner at noon, the evening meal ranging all the way from the workman's repast of tea with winkles, blosters, or jam, to the heavy supper of game and pastry for the rich. To this custom the restaurants cater, but to the large floating colonies of foreigners to whom a late dinner is a necessity they pay no heed. They continue complacently to serve "dinners from 12 to 3," after which hour one may whistle in vain, for no dinner will he get. As a natural result, an army of French and Italian restaurants are doing a brisk business and amassing fortunes, not only in catering for their own people, but in bringing comfort to many an English bachelor emancipated from tea and jam. Not only in the matter of service, but also in the menu, does the village restaurant cling faithfully to old custom.—Outlook.

Stopped for Once.

A citizen from the frontier, who never had been in Washington before, was visiting a friend in the nation's capital, and was taken one day to the gallery of the senate while an important measure was under discussion.

A senator was delivering a long, prosy and apparently aimless speech, and the visitor soon grew tired of it.

"Why doesn't he say somethin' worth listening to?" he whispered to his friend.

"Oh, he's merely talking against time."

"What's the good of that?" asked the other, aghast. "Time goes on just the same, doesn't it?"

"I suppose it does," replied his friend, looking at his watch and yawning; "but it doesn't seem to."—Youth's Companion.

Her Ingenious Scheme.

"Maggie," said the housewife, severely, "you don't seem to have breakfast on time any more."

"No, mum," replied the girl. "'Tis hard to wake up, but if you'd call me, mum, I'd make it on time."

"But it's not my place to call you. I want to be called myself."

"Yis, mum," answered the girl, solemnly; "I know it, an' if you'll call me, mum, then I'll get up an' call you."—Chicago Post.

No Water.

Clerk—This is the real Panama, made in South America and woven under the sea.

Col. Booze (from Kentucky)—Well, sah, all I have to say, sah, is that that may be all right for South Amerikey, but we wouldn't weave them that way in Kentucky, sah.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

Fa Knew.

"Pa, what does 'absent-minded' mean?"

"My boy, that's easy. Did you ever stop to think?"

"Yes."

"And your thoughts ran on?"

"Yes."

"Well—that's it." — Indianapolis News.

Very Likely.

Diggs—Gabriel won't be the only trumpet-sounder at the final roundup.

Biggs—Why do you think he won't?

"Because every self-made man will insist on blowing his own horn."—Chicago Daily News.

The Mule.

If you lie awake nights, and there is a mule in your neighborhood, you will often hear him give a kick that would seem to send out half the side of a barn.. We envy the mule; he can kick as hard as he wants to. Others can't.—Atchison Globe.

Coronations Are Expensive.

Mrs. Richmond—A coronation must be a dreadfully expensive affair.

Mrs. Bronxborough—Yes, indeed! Why, the dentist charged me ten dollars just for crowning one tooth. —Smart Set.

Distressing Gaiety.

Clara—Do you suffer from insomnia? Alice—Yes; it's awfully mean to be kept awake half the night by another girl having a beaux on the porch next door.—Detroit Free Press.

Tell Short Stories.

Never tell a story that is so long that people will get restless waiting for the point.—Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

Whitechilled Sam.

"I heah you put up Sam Johnson at de Darktown club. Did he get in?"

"Nope; dey white-balled him."—N. Y. Journal.

LITERARY.

The best detective story that has been written for a long time, and one on quite different lines from the Sherlock Holmes variety, appears over the well known signature of Anna Katherine Green, in the November number of Leslie's Monthly. William Winter, the foremost dramatic critic in the country, contributes an authoritative and masterly criticism on Richard Mansfield, probably the foremost actor on the American stage. Another theatrical article on "The Making of a Play," from the stage manager's point of view, is illustrated by a unique series of remarkable photographs by Byron, the well-known dramatic photographer. Agnes C. Last, who in "Lords of the gorth," proved herself an authority on the Hudson Bay regions, has an article in this number on the greatest fur company of the world, a vivid and accurate account of one of the greatest companies that has ever existed. The last installment of "The Autobiography of a Thief" and one or two bright bits of fiction and verse, complete the number.

The strenuous life is the key of the November Everybody's. The magazine is brimming with movement, incident and doing. It represents the most diverse phases of living and working and has not a dull page.

The frontispiece is a portrait of the President's mother. The number begins with the first installment of Justus Miles Forman's novelette, "Journeys End," which will be found charming, readable and entertaining. Mrs. Bessie VanVorst in "The Woman That Toils" tells of life in the knitting mills at Perry. "The Round Table at Dodge City," is an exciting recital of the deeds of the bad men who flourished there during the pioneer period of western life. An intelligent and penetrating study of the career of David B. Hill, by David Graham Phillips, is a feature of timely interest. G. W. Ogden's Mississippi River stories, in which he tells about the pirates and desperadoes, who in early days infested the great waterways, is an excellent feature. In strong contrast is Mary Manner's description of the life of an athlete girl at Newport. There is another of the excellent series by Booker T. Washington on "Working With the Hands."

The November McClure's, which appears with a permanent addition of seven pages of reading matter, is a striking and memorable number. Undoubtedly the most important magazine article of the month is the first instalment of Ida M. Tarbell's long announced "History of the Standard Oil Company," which it is safe to wager will be the most widely-read serial of the year. In the "Birth of an Industry" Miss Tarbell outlines what had been accomplished in the oil regions before the Standard Oil was born. It is a story that finds its parallel only in the history of the discovery of gold in California. It is better reading than a novel. Following Miss Tarbell comes a tale by Conan Doyle, seductively baited with the title "The Leather Funnel," and with gorgeous illustrations by A. Castaigne. And the story is a tip-top one, too. George W. Smalley's reminiscences always make delightful reading. This time he writes of literary persons, their habits of work and talk as he has known them. His sketches range all the way from Browning and Arnold to Anthony Hope and the authoress of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden." There are two finely sympathetic tributes to the late George Douglas Brown. The writers, Robert Barr and C. Whibley, were among the few men who knew the author of "The House with the Green Shutters" intimately. Two thoughtful discussions of pressing national questions are Professor J. W. Jenks's "Two Philippine Problems," written immediately after the author's return from the far east.

Notable in interest among the illustrated articles which appear in the current magazine number of The Outlook are: the first installment of a series of twelve papers by Hon. John D. Long, ex-secretary of the navy, under the general title, "The New American Navy;" "The Russian and Polish Jew in New York," by Edward A. Steiner, with original photographs—one of a series of articles in which the author is tracing the life and career of immigrants of different races after they are settled in America; "An Artist's Impressions of Malta," by E. C. Peixotto, accompanied by several drawings by this artist, whose work is comparable only to that of Mr. Pennell and one or two other of the very best "black-and-white men;" "The Earl of Aberdeen," by Justin McCarthy, one of a series on living British statesmen by author of "A History of Our Own Times," which is appearing from week to week in The Outlook; an article by Clifton Johnson on Tuskegee, considered as a typical Alabama town, with many pictures full of human interest from photographs by Mr. Johnson; a charmingly illustrated article on "The Growth of the Oak," by J. Horace McFarland, one of his series of tree biographies; and a paper on Tschaikowsky by D. G. Mason.

FISHES' FACES DECEIVING.

One Cannot Always Tell by Their Expression What Their Characters Are.

"Fish are a good deal like people," said Superintendent Spencer, of the New York aquarium. "You can't always tell by their countenances what to expect of them. Look at that fellow there, now!"

He pointed to a tiger fish which was butting its nose against the glass of its tank. No more villainous face of the pugnacious sort could be found in a day's search in the haunts of the third-rate pugilists.

"Looks as if he would fight at the wriggle of a fin, doesn't he?" the superintendent continued. "See those jaws! Had eye, too. Well, sir, that is the most gentle fish in the aquarium—one of the clinging kind, that seeks affection and kindness. Now over there is a lady fish. Just observe those brilliant colors, and that dear, innocent face, and notice the coaxing, graceful movements of its tail. You'd think it would eat out of your hand, and droop if you scolded it.

"On the contrary, it's the most unladylike fish in this collection; its temper is shrewish, and its habits are bad, and if you give it a chance it would bite you like a savage bull pup. It's a vicious fish, and doesn't deserve all those fine airs it has."

Mr. Spencer put his hand near the glass front of the tank, says the New York Mail and Express. There was an instant commotion; the insinuating tail lashed the water, and that angelic mouth bumped sharply against the barrier in a swift effort to nip the tip of the superintendent's finger.

"Would you ever think it?" said Mr. Spencer. "Lady fish, indeed!"

SHOE TRADE OF CUBA.

Shipments by American Manufacturers Have Been Very Largely on the Increase.

From statistics relating to the boot and shoe trade of Cuba, while under United States control, as shown by the last commercial summary of the island for May, 1902, published by the bureau of insular affairs of the war department, it appears that for the period mentioned purchases, including sandals, were made to the amount of 9,545,098 pairs, valued at $6,812,017, the importations coming chiefly from Spain and this country in the ratio of 73 per cent for the former, against 26 per cent, for the latter, though a comparison by years discloses the fact that under an equitable adjustment of the tariff rate on merchandise of this class, in effect prior to United States intervention, American manufacturers of boots and shoes have largely increased their trade with Cuba.

In connection with this statement the fact is mentioned that during each month of the three calendar years, 1899, 1900 and 1901, the total importations of boots and shoes into the island were $680,621, $335,643 and $467,778, respectively, considerably in excess of the shipments from our customs houses destined for all European (excepting the United Kingdom), the exportation from the United States for this trade being $212,935, $285,172 and $460,431 during the periods mentioned.

DAINTY WOMEN OF JAPAN.

The Picturesque Little Ladies Certainly Cannot Be Accused of the Sin of Overeating.

The almond-eyed, dainty little female of Japan is easily satisfied in the matter of food. She begins the day by eating when she wakes a couple of little green plums pickled in vinegar and rolled in sugar. This traditional breakfast of Japan is completed by a cup of tea. The dinner, which is brought on a red lacquer tray, is the drollest affair. The viands are in tiny cups with covers and among them are such dainties as a hashed sparrow, a stuffed prune, a salt sweetmeat, seaweed with sauce and a sugared chili. After these dishes, which are mere "frills," the substantial part of the meal is begun. A wooden bowl, bound with copper, is brought in, filled to the brim with rice, which is piled high. From this the flower of Japan fills her bowl—a capacious one—and, having mixed it with a black sauce flavored with fish, she then lifts it to her mouth and crams it down with the aid of her chopsticks. Thus ends her dinner.

AUTO CLIMBS A TOWER.

Two Hundred Pound Machine in Copenhagen Performs a Most Remarkable Feat.

A curious performance was lately accomplished by an automobile in Denmark. Copenhagen possesses a circular tower 100 feet in height, which was formerly used for astronomical purposes. Its top is only reached by ascending a spiral passage 12 feet broad which winds between the outer wall of the tower and an inner circular wall. From the base to the top it is entirely without steps, and the gradient is seven inches per ell. An automobile of five-horse power, weighing 200 pounds, and carrying three persons, ascended the tower the other day, taking one minute for the journey, and afterward making the much more dangerous descent with equal success. It is of interest to recall that the Czar Peter the Great, on visiting Copenhagen in 1716, made the same ascent and descent in a carriage drawn by four horses.

PRETTY AFTERNOON WEDDING

WHICH UNITED EDWIN CRAIG AND MISS MAUDE WILCOX IN MARRIAGE.

Many Relatives and Friends Witnessed the Event Which Took Place at the Groom's Home.

At the home of the groom's father, Former Councilman James H. Craig, of West Front street, a pretty wedding took place, Wednesday, Nov. 5, when Edwin A. Craig and Miss Maude R. Wilcox, daughter of Fred Wilcox, of Dunellen, were united in the bonds of matrimony. It may be termed a chrysanthemum wedding as great bunches of that showy flower were used with charming effect in the parlor where the ceremony was performed. Many relatives and friends from this city, New York, Newark, Philadelphia and Dunellen were in attendance.

Rev. N. J. Sproul, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, was the officiating clergyman and Miss Emma Craig, a sister of the groom, was Miss Wilcox's attendant. Fred Wilcox, Jr., a brother of the bride, acted as best man and the bridal party was completed by the ushers in the persons of Sidney R. Craig and Bertram Brandon, of this city, J. C. Keller, of Newark and Russel Wilcox, of Westfield. Miss Edith Boice rendered the wedding march.

The bride was attired in a becoming gown of grey with trimmings of plush. The bouquet she carried was made up of chrysanthemums. Miss Craig's dress was of a pink material and she carried roses to match.

Following the ceremony a reception was tendered the young couple in the course of which refreshments were served. Last evening Mr and Mrs. Craig departed quietly on a wedding trip the destination of which they refused to divulge. On its completion they will reside in this city. The groom is connected with his father in the Craig Chair Company.

Both young people were handsomely remembered with gifts, articles of a useful nature predominating. There was also a profusion of bric-a-brac, cut glass and examples of the silversmith's art.

WHO WILL PRESIDE?

Retirement of Councilman Coriell Makes Choice of a New Presiding Officer Necessary.

The Common Council for the coming year will be composed of the following members: R. I. Tolles, W. L. Gloak, J. F. Buckle, Wm. A. Garrigues, Jas. vanHerwerden, W. S. Tyler, Leslie Daniel, E. E. Pray, Frank Randolph, Robert Lee and Clarence Murphy. Of these, Mr. Garrigues, from the Second ward, and Mr. Tyler, from the Third ward, are new members. The latter takes Mr. Coriell's place.

By the retirement of Mr. Coriell it will mean that a new president will have to be selected. As yet no one has been thought of especially for that position. During the absence of Mr. Coriell Mr. vanHerwerden has filled the position, but as he is liable to be away considerably during the coming year, it is not likely that he will be elected. It is generally considered that the personel of the Council is one of which the city can feel proud.

JUST MISSED DEATH.

Two Plainfielders Were at Scene of Terrible Explosion in New York.

John Hines and Charles Beiter, of this city, sustained the reputation of this city by representing it in the frightful explosion in New York election night. While both escaped injury their escape was narrow. There is hardly any great accident that happens anywhere but that Plainfield is represented and in this case it was left to these two well known men to sustain that reputation. Mr. Hines was standing very near the boxes of fireworks which exploded but had left the spot only a few seconds before, otherwise he would no doubt have been killed or seriously injured.

MORE NEW BUILDINGS.

Building Permits Granted This Morning for Three Others.

Applications for building permits continue to come into the office of Building Inspector T. O. Doane, and the following were those disposed of today: Moses Carey, of 213 Filmore avenue, to build a barn in the rear of his premises.

Woodhull & Martin were granted a permit to erect in the rear of their new store on East Front street a barn. The mason will be S. Williams.

Mrs. A. G. Dunham, of 372 East Sixth street, will build an addition to her residence. The carpenters will be Titus & Pope, of 39 Sammis avenue.

No Important Business.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Young Men's Christian Association was held Thursday evening, when the different matters of the association work was brought up for consideration, but nothing of importance was done.

BATTLED IN GREEN BROOK

Chief Kiely and a Desperate Negro Nearly Drowned in Their Struggles.

IN WATER WAIST DEEP

Mayor Smalley Finally Settled the Fight by Coming to Rescue and Knocking Down the Negro—Had to Cart Prisoner to Jail—Heavy Sentence.

Evidences of a battle royal, such as seldom occurs between a policeman and belligerent prisoner, were brought out in the city court, last Thursday, when Edward Washington, a burly negro, was arraigned on technical charges of disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

He was taken into custody, the day before, by Chief Kiely after a ten minute struggle in the deep water of Green brook just below the Sycamore avenue bridge. Time and again both officer and prisoner disappeared beneath the surface only to reappear puffing and blowing like two porpoises and renew the struggle. Mayor Smalley, of North Plainfield, also plunged into the stream and assisted to put Washington hors de combat. After hearing the testimony City Judge Runyon sent Washington to jail for 100 days.

Chief Kiely was alone at the headquarters, when a telephone message from Mayor Smalley asked him to send an officer to the Sycamore avenue bridge, where a colored man was insulting women. The Chief set out himself, approaching the structure from the borough side. Washington was standing on it and as soon as he saw the officer he struck out for Giraud avenue on the city side of the brook with Kiely in close pursuit. He crossed the Giraud bridge back to the borough side and midway between it and Sycamore avenue the Chief caught him. In their struggles both became entangled in a barbed wire and the officer nearly had a finger torn off, while the Washington broke away.

He darted for the Sycamore bridge but seeing Mayor Smalley approach plunged into the brook and stood waist deep in the center. No amount of talking or coaxing from the officer or the borough chief executive could induce him to come out and the Chief cut the Gordian knot by going in after him, not even discarding his coat. The two grappled, with the advantage on Washington's side, and the officer went down. It was only for a moment when positions were reversed and the negro found himself on the bed of the brook. He was held beneath the water until it seemed as if his lungs had filled, but when he was allowed to come to the top, it was with a sinister smiler on his face and a renewed determination to fight.

The battle might have gone on indefinitely but for Mayor Smalley braving the chill water and by coming behind Washington struck him a blow which temporarily dazed him. This gave the Chief an opportunity to use his billy. A few taps sufficed to get him out of the water but on reaching the bank he again essayed a struggle and it was necessary to cart him to headquarters in a butcher wagon with several men sitting on him.

The Chief was, however, none the worse for his experience with the exception of the maimed finger and appeared as prosecutor against the prisoner. Washington denied the disorderly end of the charge but his arrester so entangled him that his guilt was clearly seen by the court.

The sentence was imposed in the form of $50 and fifty days but Washington declared he would have to serve it all. He was only released Tuesday after completing a forty day sentence for drunkenness.

ONLY LITTLE BLAZE.

Warren Boys Called Out and Extinguished the Fire With Buckets of Water.

The Warren Engine Company was called out Thursday at 6 o'clock for a fire in the home of Horatio M. Clark, of Grandview avenue, which did about $25 worth of damage before the flames were extinguished. The fire was caused by the upsetting of a lamp in the kitchen. The fire was put out by the members of the company who lived near the house.

The engine company responded to the alarm very quickly and was out of the house before the second gong had sounded. As the fire the engine was not started as the firemen were able to extinguish the flames with buckets of water.

Democratic Smoker.

A smoker will be held at Democratic headquarters, East Second street, Thanksgiving Eve.

WHAT MAYOR HAS TO SAY

Another Annexation Bill Will be Introduced Into the State Legislature.

TO BE NO REFERENDUM

Mayor Smalley Says Earthquake Which Struck North Plainfield May be Repeated If Conditions Do Not Change—But They May Change Soon.

Now that the election is over and the political Mt. Pelees have ceased their eruptions of mud and brick slinging, calmness once more reigns in and around the Martinique in Somerset county across Green brook.

Thursday afternoon Mayor Smalley said to a newspaper man that a bill will be sent to the Legislature without the referendum clause attached to take North Plainfield from Somerset county and annex it to Union county. It is hoped, he said, that when the present Governor sees the bill he will sign it and pass upon it, but in the event of his refusing to do this there are other governors who will follow Governor Murphy who will see that the bill is passed.

Mayor Smalley said he thought there would be no objection to the repeal of the proposed bill of Lou Thompson's mentioned in the Republican platform.

He also said that an earthquake struck North Plainfield Election Day and was due to the seismic disturbances at Somerville which were also felt throughout the county. The results were far reaching, he said, and there might be other similar eruptions as they seem to be easily caused.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 16. "Present Opportunities For Methodist Missions"—Text, Matt. xxviii, 19; Phil. iii, 7, 13, 16.

Opportunities are sometimes best measured by obstacles removed. Our present condition, with its doors wide open, may well be contrasted with the situation a few years since. Our people of middle age clearly recall how matters stood in 1857, the great revival year.

William Butler was in India. He was a lone pioneer in the far northwest provinces, hostile, bigoted, heathen millions surrounding him, armed and thirsting for blood, in a few weeks to sweep with billows of fire and blood the whole vast peninsula from snow capped Himalayas to the tropic ocean in the effort to exterminate Christianity and British dominion.

In the great empire of China we had work on a small scale in a few places only, while the land as a whole was fast closed against us and almost unknown. Japan had not yet awakened from her feudalism, and foreigners were rejected to a hand's length two or three ports. Korea was as little known as the south pole is today. Africa was unexplored except a narrow fringe around the coast. We had some work in Buenos Ayres, in South America, but Mexico was not to be entered until after our civil war. We had some work in Europe, but it was small and carried forward under hampering restrictions.

Now India is everywhere feeling the impulse of Christian thought and work. Years since one of our bishops returning from there declared that if Christianity was blotted out from every other land on earth there was vitality enough in India Methodism to restore it and evangelize the world. Japan is passing through a revival of religion which has swept the whole empire as the revival of 1857 swept the United States. Korea and China, the Philippines, the far strait of Malacca, Burma and even Borneo are in the full light of the gospel. Africa is open from circumference to center and feels the new life. Our Spanish speaking work is most notable and encouraging. So much for the fields. In 1857 the church prayed God to open the closed doors. He has marvelously answered that prayer. The bars are down.

In 1850 our missionary secretaries advertised for several months in our church papers for two men for the foreign work, and no one offered. In 1856 the writer of this article appealed to some of our conferences for young men to go back with him, and none went. Now there are several hundred of the choicest spirited and best equipped of our young people of both sexes ready to go anywhere they may be needed.

We have in all our past been hindered in our progress by lack of funds. Our people have been among the poor. This is also largely changed. Lands in city and country have increased in value and made many rich; mines, oil wells, farming, trading, manufacturing, commerce, stocks and thrift in a hundred directions have brought wealth until we have a superabundance. Much has been consecrated. More will be. Our young people will be richer than their fathers. We believe they will not be less devoted. Opportunities become necessities. We believe they will be seen and the Lord's work grandly advanced.

Divided Confidences.

The poverty of the individual life and the abortive efforts of the church are largely due to a divided confidence. A full faith is essential to a well rounded character. Division here means a halting feebleness and a shambling performance of clearly defined duties. This way lies safety. Ships in time of storm need sea room, and the masters commit themselves with confidence to the vast deep. The inexperienced might long for a sight of land, but the captain knows the treachery of the shore. The soul for its development and safety must commit itself with a true heart in full assurance of faith to Christ. He is strong enough and lasting enough to be worthy of a whole heart for all time.—Episcopal Recorder.

Thoughts.

Even the lion must lower himself before victoriously attacking.

With men we can afford to be children sometimes; with God we must be children always.

Man is satisfied if he has done good. God is not satisfied until he has done well.

Who wishes to avoid pain must take pains.

The heart should always be open, the ears often, the mouth seldom.—Christian Endeavor World.

Can Never Grow Old.

We have a gospel which can never grow old. Its adaptation to the deepest needs of men's souls remains constant with these needs. People in all the world have done its work; that the world has outgrown it. We are confident, with a confidence born of our knowledge, that as long as men live by bread so long will this word, which proceedeth out of the mouth of God, be the food of our souls.—A. Maclaren.

So Does He Look Upon Us.

As one who sees and knows us altogether, as one who understands the nature of sin and its unhappy results, as one who remembereth that we are dust, as one who loves purity and hates sin, as one who made us and loved us and gave Himself for us, so does the Lord look upon us. It is out of His very strong character that His pity and love and mercy and our salvation come.—Independent.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 16—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—For me.—Isa. liii, 6; Luke xxii, 19, 20; Rom. v, 6-8; I John iii, 16.

The doctrine of the atonement, or that Christ died "for me," is the most precious doctrine of the word of God. The expression "for me" as used in the New Testament in connection with this doctrine means "in my stead." Christ did not die simply for an object lesson on sacrifice or to set forth God's hatred of sin, but He died for us—died instead of us. Had He not died we in ourselves would have been compelled to bear the penalty of our sins. But since He died as our substitute, we are free from the penalty of sin if we accept His sacrifice for us. Christ's atonement for our sins is accepted of God, and we escape eternal death and receive eternal life.

No one can believe the Bible and doubt or deny the atonement. It is purely a doctrine of revelation. Nature and even history give us some suggestions that look toward vicarious suffering, but they fall far short of revealing God's great sacrifice of Himself, and this fact forms the crowning revelation of God's word. And here this doctrine is writ large. To reject the atonement is to reject the Bible or at least any reasonable and sensible interpretation of it. The testimony of sacred writers upon this subject is very complete, and is unanimously upon one side. And when a doctrine is purely a matter of revelation we must accept the conclusions of the holy men who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

1. The testimony of Isaiah. Isa. liii teaches clearly the vicarious character of Christ's death. The seer of God speaks of no human deliverer, for none ever appeared in Israel. Nor does he personify Israel herself, for she has long sought for others. Regarding the promised Messiah, and he says, "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; * * * the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." Could language be plainer? Is the testimony of Isaiah for or for substitution? And since they can be applied to Christ alone must His death not have been vicarious?

2. The testimony of Christ. In connection with the institution of the Lord's supper, which was to commemorate His death, Jesus said, "This cup is the New Testament in My blood, which is shed for you." What can "shed for you" mean but substitution? Would Christ be sacrificed Christ simply to have taught mankind a lesson? Never. Christ's death was necessary to save mankind or He never would have died.

3. The testimony of Paul. God commended His love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us (Rom. v, 8).

4. The testimony of Peter. "Who His own self bare our sins in His own body on the tree," is Peter's brief speech of the character of Christ's death. Our sins were placed upon Him, and he bare them. "The Lord laid on Him the iniquity of us all." Could this mean anything else than substitution?

5. The testimony of John. Hereby we perceive the love of God because He laid down His life for us." John's opinion is seen to be in accord with other inspired writers upon this subject. God in Christ laid down His life for us—for me.

Since Christ died for us we should live for Him. He has substituted His life for ours, and we should also substitute His life for us. "It is no longer I that live; Christ liveth in me."

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. liii, 1-12; Matt. xxvi, 26-28; John i, 29; Gal. ii, 20; iii, 13, 14; Eph. ii, 4-7; II Peter ii, 21-25.

Christian Endeavor In Wartimes.

There were twelve "floating Endeavorers" (the name given to sailors who belong to the society) on the Olympia the morning Admiral Dewey sailed into Manila bay. A crew made up entirely of Christian Endeavor men was put in charge of one of the captured Spanish gunboats. There was a floating society of Christian Endeavor on board the Oregon when she made that magnificent run around Cape Horn. A Christian Endeavorer was among those killed at Cardenas, Cuba, where the first American blood was spilled.

Pennsylvania's Fame.

This epigram, which has been going the rounds, is from the lips of Rev. Dr. George B. Stewart, president of Auburn Theological seminary, a former president of the Pennsylvania State Christian Endeavor union: "Pennsylvania is famous for pig iron and Christian Endeavor."

President McKinley's Interest.

Every year that Mr. McKinley was in the White House he sent a telegram of greeting to the international Christian Endeavor convention, and as governor of Ohio he delivered the address of welcome at the Cleveland convention.

Pledged Endeavor.

We are pledged to do but what is right
And bound to do it with our might.
Our guide our constitution be,
According to the Master's will.
The world, the flesh, we follow never;
To follow Christ is our endeavor.
—Rev. Dr. John Hall.

SOME REMARKABLE FREAKS

A VALUABLE COLLECTION MADE BY LATE PROF. C. K. HOWLETT.

Now in Possession of M. C. Dobbins —Collection Also Includes Some Rare Birds.

M. C. Dobbins, the tobacconist, is now located in his new store on Park avenue at the head of North avenue. The new store is a much finer one than his old store on North avenue and allows much more space for the display of the collection of stuffed birds of which Mr. Dobbins is justly proud.

This collection is conceded to be the best in the State, bar none. The specimens were collected by the late Prof. C. K. Howlett, a former resident of this city, and every bird was stuffed by him. Besides having specimens of birds from all parts of the globe there are included in the display some freak animals which are very interesting. Among the latter is a kid with eight legs, two tails, four ears, two heads and had only one heart; and another freak of nature is a family of calves, seven in number, which were gestated at one birth. All are perfectly formed excepting the last which is an embryo.

Few people in this city realize that there is a collection of this kind here and a visit to the store to look at these specimens is not only interesting but instructive.

THEATRICAL.

The most novel and sensational entertainment ever seen in the city of New York is the unanimous verdict of the crowds that have filled the vast St. Nicholas Garden, Sixty-sixth street and Columbus avenue, New York City, afternoon and evening since the opening of the Bostock Zoological Congress and Trained Animal Arena. One act alone, Bonavita and his twenty-seven lions, has caused more thrills, more excitement and evoked more discussion than any performance with animals known to the world's history. The command this man seems to exercise over the lordliest brutes of forest creation appears as unlimited as it is marvelous. Although rather slight in build, in fact anything but stalwart in appearance or seemingly stern in demeanor, in perfect silence at this man's will, these great beasts move like so many huge automatons, assuming the most beautiful postures and groupings emblematic of history and scripture. Among the scenic presentableaux is one termed "The towering of the kings." It is as if a great castle of feudal times is being laid from foundation to turret, the base of lions, the great body itself of lions, layer upon layer of the king of animals one on top of the other, in perfect pose, until at the apex stands Bonavita erect, illustrating more powerfully than words can depict, the masterful supremacy of the human over brute mind. Mr. Esau, the ape-man, not only continues to interest the general public but is the subject of dissertation by scientists and savants as to whether he is human or brute. Each day he develops some new trait, startling in itself and bringing him nearer akin to the human race. While the arena performances are thrilling there is a magnificant zoological collection embracing birds, snakes, baby lions, hybrids, bears and a nursery that permits of fondling and evokes the keenest delight from the tiniest visitor. The feasting of the carnivora, the gymnastic evolution of the comical simians, and the hundred other features, keep the interest ever alive to the child, the blase amusement goer and the student as well. In its entirety it is an entertainment not only moral in tone but instructive, educational and characteristic of a master-hand both in conception and composition.

MUSICALE CLUB.

Gave the First of a Series of Charming Events Friday.

A charming event of Friday afternoon was the musicale given at the home of Miss Stewart on West Front street. It was the first affair of the kind given this year by the Musicale Club, of which Miss Stewart is a member, and it marked the opening of what promises to be a successful season.

The programme included vocal selections by Mrs. D. W. Taylor, Mrs. Mack and Irving Stewart, together with piano selections by Miss Hart and violin selections by Fullerton Waldo. The numbers rendered were all classical and were well received by those present. A feature was the recitations given by Mrs. Phillip V. R. VanWyck, which added much to the pleasure of the event. No date or place were selected for the next meeting of the club.

Returns by 'Phone.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, as usual, gave excellent service election night. It was the one safe and sure means of getting quick returns.

SOCIAL SEASON OPEN AT THE PARK CLUB

Opening Reception at Its Cosy Clubhouse on Thursday Attracted Many Guests.

WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

FIRST OF A SERIES OF EVENTS PLANNED FOR THE WINTER MONTHS.

Clubhouse Was Prettily Decorated —Dancing Was in Order Most of the Evening—The Committee in Charge of the Affair.

The opening of the social season, Thursday, at the Park Club, was an event of more than ordinary interest to the society folk of the borough, as well as many from this city. That the season gives promises of being one of great success was evidenced by the generous response to the invitations issued for the opening reception last evening. In all over two hundred invitations were issued to members and their friends and by 9 o'clock the attractive clubhouse was well filled with guests. The cordiality of the reception of these people by the committee in charge was a marked feature of the affair.

The clubhouse has seldom looked more attractive than it did last evening. The main room was decorated with palms, ferns and flowers, while in the many cosy corners the effect was much admired.

There were quite a number of strangers present and they were cordially received by the members and made to feel welcome. All during the reception and later in the evening when the young folks were given an opportunity for dancing, Garland's orchestra, of New Brunswick, rendered a programme of popular music. The orchestra was located in a small room off the large hall, thus giving the extra room for dancing.

Another feature of the evening was the refreshments, served under the direction of the new steward, Charles Henry. The menu was more elaborate than usual and everyone present seemed to enjoy the innovation in this respect.

The committee in charge of the reception, and who will arrange similar affairs throughout the winter, consists of Mr. and Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. McGee and C. E. Murray. The next event at the club will probably be a dance on Thanksgiving eve.

WELCOMED WITH BLOW.

Chas. Schuyrock Beat His Wife When She Returned at His Request—Heavily Sentenced.

Seldom has a prisoner been more severely reprimanded by Recorder Dodd than was Charles Schuyrock, of Myrtle avenue, Friday morning when the Recorder sentenced him to jail for shamefully beating his wife. He pleaded guilty to two charges of being drunk, disorderly and fighting and for resisting arrest. On the first charge the Recorder sentenced him to a fine of $20 and seven days in jail and to the second charge he sentenced him to $10 and seven days.

He admitted having sent letters to his wife who had left him, asking her to come back on promise that he would treat her well and that when she entered the house he knocked her down and beat her for leaving him in the first place. The prisoner has been in court a number of times before on the same charge.

SUMMONS ISSUED.

Justice Mattison Has Issued Them in Several Cases.

Justice W. R. Mattison, Friday, sent out the following cases which are returnable Nov. 17. The cases came from Morristown and are as follows: John I. How, J. B. H. Rogers and J. J. How, Jr., comprising the firm of How and company, complainant, against Oscar M. Kagan, defendant, on contract; James L. Wandling, plaintiff, against James W. Rodenbough, defendant, both of Gladstone, N. J., on contract. The cases have been sent to constable James J. Woods, of Morristown, who will serve the notice.

Cured of Piles After 40 Years.

Mr. O. Haney, of Geneva, Ohio, had the piles for forty years. Doctors and dollars could do him no lasting good. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured him permanently. Invaluable for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, lacerations, eczema, tetter, salt rheum, and all other skin diseases. Look for the name DeWitt on the package — all others are cheap, worthless counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

SNOW WOULD CRIPPLE LOCAL TROLLEY LINE

New Dynamo Being Installed to Give the Power That is Needed to Run the Cars.

A LACK OF POWER NOW

CHANGE WILL PERMIT CARS TO MAKE MUCH BETTER HEADWAY.

In Case of a Storm Some of the Cars Would Have to be Taken Off to Get Enough Power to Run the Snow Sweepers.

The Plainfield Gas and Electric Company is pushing the work of installing the new engine and dynamo at the power house at the corner of Second street and Madison avenue, as rapidly as possible in order to secure more power for the different lines of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Stree Railway Company before the winter weather sets in.

Superintendent Brown of the trolley company, said yesterday afternoon that the company is greatly crippled at present on account of lack of power to propel the cars on the different lines and that is the reason the cars make such poor headway through this city.

In speaking of the scarcity of power on the road, Mr. Brown said that in the event of early snow the company would be obliged to take many of the cars off the line in order to secure power enough to operate the heavy snow plows. This would cripple the line considerably in case there should be a heavy fall of snow before the new generator is in working order.

The new engine is a gigantic one and will supply power enough to operate the cars at a faster speed through the town and to operate the cars and the snowplows in the winter time when the tracks are always more or less slippery.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

HAS REGAINED HER PENSION

MRS. SQUIRES DISCOVERED THAT SHE COULD DRAW IT UNDER NEW LAW.

Justice Mattison Made the Discovery of the New Law and Secured Pension for Her.

While reading an article in the National Tribune, some time ago Justice William R. Mattison, of Somerset street, read an extract from a law which was passed in 1900 which made it possible for a widow who has lost her pension through a second marriage to recover that pension in full on the death of her second husband, providing proper application be made and proof established that the applicant is the proper person to receive the pension.

Mrs. Harriet Squiers, of 186 Grove street, at once made out the necessary application papers before Justice Mattison. This application was sent to the War Department some time ago and Saturday Mrs. Squires received in a check $147.60 for back pension and will receive a regular pension of $12 a month.

Mrs. Squiers was the widow of Abram Bush, who fought in the Thirtieth New Jersey during the Civil War and who died in the Regimental Hospital at Belle Plains on February 14, 1863. Shortly after her husband's death Mrs. Bush married Isaac Squiers which obliged her to give up her pension.

HORSE HELD UP TROLLEY.

Laid Down on Track and Wouldn't Move for Nearly an Hour.

A few days ago Mrs. H. A. Weber, of 140 Liberty street, purchased a new horse, and Friday her father, Louis C. J. Randolph, took the animal out for a trial. While driving along West Front street, near Lafayette place, the horse deliberately laid down in the road across the trolley tracks. He refused to be removed for some time and it was nearly an hour before trolley cars were able to pass that point. Everything known to science was used to persuade the horse to change his location, but it was not until a bystander whispered something in his ear that he decided to move.

GIFTS FROM DR. COLES

WERE PRESENTED TO THE NEW JERSEY HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Pictures and Curios Presented by Dr. Coles Are Now on Exhibition.

Many valuable donations have been received by the New Jersey Historical Society during the last few months, and they now help to adorn the quarters of that institution at Newark. They consist of pictures, books, manuscripts, maps, curios, etc. All of the pictures are more or less valuable because of the subjects. The books include comparatively recent publications and some that are quite old. Many of the curios are interesting because of their previous owners or associations, while some of them may be highly regarded because of their antiquity.

One of the most prominent of the pictures is a large portrait of Dr. Abraham Coles, presented by Dr. J. A. Coles, of Scotch Plains. Dr. Abraham Coles, who was born in 1813, in Scotch Plains, lived many years in Newark, where he was a member of the Board of Education, a trustee of Newark Academy and a director of the Newark Library Association.

Besides the portrait mentioned, Dr. J. A. Coles gave several curios. One is a French mirror, made in the time of Louis XIV. It belonged at one time to Colonel Josiah Ogden, the founder of Trinity Episcopal church. Quite awe-inspiring are the manacles and anklets taken from a slave ship that was captured by a United States man-of-war in 1850. The manacles are locked by a screw that holds them close together. The anklets, which are heavy, are connected by a thick steel chain about eighteen inches long. Dr. Coles also gave a block of polished marble that came from Nazareth.

The Sussex County Board of Freeholders has voted to build four miles of stone road in three different sections of the county, after the style of the Union county roads.

A Thanksgiving Dinner.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, exposes the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach. Kodol relieves the inflammation, protects the nerves and cures catarrh. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach. L. W. COUNCIL MEETING WAS EIGHT MINUTES LONG Routine Business and Resolutions Occupied a Brief Session of Borough Council.

AFTER STREET RAILWAY

BOROUGH COUNSEL INSTRUCTED TO COMPELL COMPANY TO PAY UP.

Money Owed the Borough for Improvements Made to the Streets Where Tracks Are—Was No Sewage Commission Report.

A record-breaking meeting of the Borough Council was held in the Council Chambers on the other side of the brook, last Friday, when the members transacted the routine business, ordered the payment of bills, offered resolutions and adopted them, and adjourned all in the short space 450 seconds, or less than eight minutes.

All the members were present except Mayor Smalley in whose absence Councilman Charles Nichols occupied the chair. The meeting opened with the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by the clerk, Frank Rowley, which were approved as read.

A communication was received from Chief of the Fire Department J. J. Stahl recommending the discharge of Raymond Schenck as janitor of the Warren Engine Company. It was referred to the committee on fire, water and lamps, which recommended that the discharge take effect from date. A janitor will be appointed temporarily by the Mayor until a permanent steward is secured.

A long list of bills was read by the clerk amounting to about $7,550, which were referred to the committee on auditing, who passed on them and finding them correct, ordered them paid.

No report of the sewage commission was received as the chairman of that committee had not yet secured the approval of the other members of the committee in regard to the matter and the report will be received at a special meeting which will be held in the Council Chambers on Monday evening, November 17, at 8 o'clock. The bids for the new engine house will be considered and the contracts awarded.

Street Commissioner Arnold read his report of the work which has been done on the streets in the borough since the last meeting, which includes the trimming of trees, cleaning of Somerset street and Watchung avenue, and the sprinkling of the streets. The report was placed on file.

The fire, water and lamps committee reported the expenditure of $457.71, which was ordered paid. The report was placed on file. Charles Lee, chairman of the police committee, read his report and said that $31 had been received for fines.

Tax collector and treasurer, George F. Brown, read his report which was as follows: Tax and interest, $10,708.40; special school tax, $6,540.72; Board of Health, $302.50; licenses, $332.50; recorder's fines, $16; balance on hand October 1, $1,984.65; total receipts, $19,784.83; disbursements, $5,043.18; cash on hand, November 1, $14,342.65. The report was received as read.

It was resolved to instruct the Borough Counsel to institute proceedings against the street railway company to compell it to pay its unpaid bills for taxes and repairs to the street on which the cars run.

The meeting then came to a close after taking exactly 450 seconds to transact the business.

OUR INSULAR BUREAU

It Has Recently Been Expanded from a Division.

Will Have Complete Charge of Matters Relating to All Affairs Subject to Jurisdiction of the War Department.

Under authority of the Philippine government act the former division of insular affairs of the war department has been organized into a full-fledged bureau of that department, and will hereafter bear the designation of the "bureau of insular affairs of the war department." Capt. Clarence R. Edwards, Tenth infantry, remains at the head of the newly-established office under a special detail by the secretary of war, and while so acting he will have the rank, pay and allowance of a colonel. The act contains a special provision to that effect.

The business assigned to the bureau embraces all matters pertaining to civil government in the island possessions of the United States, subject to the jurisdiction of the war department.

The bureau is the repository of all civil records of the government of the Philippines that do not remain at the island capital. Similar records for the period in which the war department exercised jurisdiction over Cuba and Porto Rico are on file here. For the present these records interpret the purpose and intent of orders, laws and rulings, and furnish the data for the determination by the secretary of war of civil questions that arise in the government of the islands. In the future they will furnish valuable data for the government in respect of certain classes of claims that may arise in those islands, and in adjusting our relations with the governments of Cuba and the Philippines. The bureau transmits the instructions and orders of the secretary of war to the insular governments, and handles their correspondence with him and through him to the other departments of this government when communication with foreign nations is necessary. It may be truly said that every question involved in the conduct of governmental affairs lies within the possible scope of examination by this bureau.

Many matters referred to the bureau involve questions of law. These questions are of such diverse character as to require extensive research, being questions of constitutional interpretation, international law and relations, military and martial law, the political and municipal laws of both Spain and the United States, as well as the general principles and established customs which ordinarily regulate and control the action of public officers and private citizens.

It acts for the insular governments in the procurement and transportation of personnel, supplies and equipment that have to be obtained in the United States—a notable example being the employment and transportation of a thousand teachers and the purchase and shipment of a complete government printing plant for the Philippine Islands. It is also the medium through which the vast commercial interests of the United States are furnished with trade statistics, tariffs, duties and laws of the islands, and are made acquainted with their present and prospective commercial needs and desires, and conserves the interests of American trade in said islands in as far as is permitted by our international obligations.

Col. Edwards has as his chief assistants in the conduct of the affairs of the bureau Capt. J. Van Ness Philip, formerly of the volunteers; Capt. J. R. M. Taylor, Fourteenth infantry, and Judge Charles E. Magoon. Capt. Philip is assistant chief and Capt. Taylor is a special assistant, while Judge Magoon is the law officer of the bureau.

As organized the bureau consists of 61 clerks, whose aggregate compensation is $66,060. There are five divisions, as follows:

Record—A. D. Wilcox, chief; disbursing and accounting, James G. Jester, chief; compilations, M. E. Shall, chief; statistics, H. C. Lewis, chief, and correspondence, N. A. Woodson. Mr. Frank Steinhart, who is now in Havana as the agent of the government in closing up the accounts of the military government, has been selected as chief clerk of the new bureau, and will take hold of affairs as soon as he can be relieved of his present duties.

Lawsuits in Europe.

POISON FOUND IN POTATOES.

Solanine, It Is Called, and It Causes Illness and Sometimes Brings On Death.

Potatoes contain a poisonous alkaloid known as solanine. Little of this poison is found in the new potatoes, but even fresh potatoes which have grown above the surface of the soil and have a green skin are generally known to be poisonous, says a scientific authority. When potatoes are kept a long time they contain a large amount of this poison, and many cases of serious poisoning have occurred in late summer from eating old potatoes. About ten years ago many soldiers in the German army were ill from an unknown cause. They suffered with headache, colic, diarrhœa, vomiting, weakness, and slight stupor, and in some cases dilatation of the pupils. The matter was investigated and it was discovered that the men had been eating potatoes which had been kept for a long time in a damp place until they had begun to sprout. Chemical examination revealed the fact that these potatoes contained 24 times as much solanine as is found in new potatoes.

CITY SAFER THAN COUNTRY.

More People Killed by Lightning in the Open Than in the Wire-Bound Houses.

It is in the country that most of the fatal accidents from lightning occur, and they are about evenly divided between people who are struck in houses and those who are killed in the open or while seeking refuge under a tree, says an article on lightning, in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. To stand under a tree in a thunder storm is perhaps, next to clinging to a lightning rod, the most dangerous position that can be chosen. The comparative safety of the modern city from lightning is due to the network of wires which covers it, and the number of tall buildings with iron points, tin roofs, metallic gutters and steel frames connected with the water, sewer and gas pipes, which form an excellent system of conductors. Still the city is not by any means absolutely protected, for when a cloud with a tremendous store of energy approaches quickly, all the wires and pipes in ten cities cannot prevent it from discharging recklessly right and left.

STATISTICS ON SUICIDES.

The Number of Persons Who Committed Self-Destruction in United States in 1901.

The number of suicides in the United States during the year 1901, as compared with previous years was as follows: 1901, 7,245; 1900, 6,755; 1899, 5,340; 1898, 5,920; 1897, 6,600; 1896, 6,530; 1895, 5,759; 1894, 4,912. A considerable increase is apparent in recent years. Of the total number in 1901, 5,850 were males and 1,395 females, showing the same proportion as for several years past. The causes of self-murder were reported as follows: Despondency, 2,300; unknown, 1,643; insanity, 674; ill-health, 616; domestic infelicity, 541; liquor, 439; disappointment in love, 283; business losses, 67. The agencies used in committing suicide, with the number of persons employing each were as follows: Poison, 3,106; shooting, 1,476; hanging, 614; drowning, 613; cutting throat, 356; jumping from roofs and windows, 58; throwing themselves in front of locomotive engines, 27; stabbing, 23; fire, 23; dynamite, 11; starvation, 6.

PANAMA HATS.

Why This Style of Headgear Sold First in Front in Our Large Cities.

"Not being in the city every day," said an occasional visitor to town, "may make me more observant of small things than you folk who are here all the time. I have noticed, for instance, that most men who wear panamas are the possessors of dirty headgear.

"This doesn't apply to the whole hat, but only to the front. The front may be quite dark, while the back is nice and clean. Now, it happens so because there is much soft-coal smoke in the air and they are walking or riding against it every day. I have never seen such a thing here before.

"It seems strange, however," concluded the visitor, according to the New York Mail and Express, "that the use of soft coal should so change conditions here that you get a better impression of a man when seeing him from behind than when you meet him face to face."

Executioner Executed.

The official executioner of Tokio is dead. Capital punishment in itself, and considering his profession, was little short of remarkable. He was crossing a railway track near Tokio when he was run down by a fast express. The body was found by the side with the head nearly decapitated as any which had been cut off by the official executioner himself. Otherwise there was not a mark on his body.

Expressionless Faces.

The Japanese physiognomy is commonly thought expressionless by western nations. The reason is that it is always seen in repose. This is a part of Japanese education. It is with them, a mark of the underbred to permit the face to express any feeling in public.

Wisconsin's Lumber Product.

Wisconsin led other states in lumber production in 1899, with 3,400,000,000 feet of sawed lumber, valued at $41,000,000.

Cornmeal for Geese.

The increased importation in France of American cornmeal is due chiefly to its use for fattening geese.

CLEVER ARTISTS GAVE A FINE PROGRAMME

Successful Musicale of Whatsoever Circle, King's Daughters, Last Friday.

HAD A LARGE AUDIENCE

GIVEN IN LECTURE ROOM OF TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

Those Who Took Part Were Frank E. Drake, Miss Olive Lovell, Miss Zella Frost, Miss Ida Mae Pierpont, Miss Seymour and Others.

Entrancing vocal selections interspersed by instrumental solos from artists of more than ordinary merit, combined to captivate a large audience at the musicale of the Whatsoever Circle, King's Daughters, in Trinity Reformed church, Friday evening. Such composers as Schumann, Verdi-Lisst, Rubenstein, Phelps and many others were drawn upon for numbers that were interpreted with a personal charm and feeling that only the true musician imparts. This is better comprehended when it is known that those who appeared were Frank E. Drake, pianist, of Newark; Miss Olive Lovell, soprano, of Flemington; Miss Zella Frost, violinist, of Elizabeth; Miss Ida Mae Pierpont, soprano, of Newark; Miss Jennie Seymour, mezzo-soprano, of Elizabeth; and a male quartette composed of E. E. Runyon, M. C. VanArsdale, F. S. Cutter and W. B. Gilbert, of this city.

Each selection was followed by hearty applause and no contribution seemed to take precedence over the previous one. With Miss Pierpont, who was heard at the Joseph Hofmann concert last season, the four numbers allotted her were inadequate for her admirers and she received an ovation. Her sweet, sympathetic voice was, perhaps, never heard to better advantage especially with Hasting's "Red, Red Rose" and Lohr's "Irish Love Long." These were her best but the other two were none the less enjoyable.

Mr. Drake was named for two numbers but the first of these consisted of Schumann's Novelette F, Romance, F sharp major, and Novelette E flat were combined as one. "Rigoletto" from Verdi-Lisst was the second. The group permitted him to display his wonderful versatility with the instrument, one demanding lightness of touch, another finger velocity, a third vigorous action, yet all assuming their proper tone. His playing was a distinct treat.

Miss Frost's violin selections were noticeable for their technique which she evidently possesses to a marked degree. She also gave three numbers in which her sympathetic rendition won for her unusual praise. Vocal selections were contributed by Miss Lovell who rendered "The Violet" from Mildenburg, Nevin's "Best Upon My Little Heart" in the first part and afterward a piano solo, Rubenstein's "Kammenoi Ostrow." Her voice commands a wide range while her enunciations were unusually distinct.

The remaining musical numbers, were from the quartette. The initial selection was Phelps' "Ave Maria" in which their voices blended pleasingly but it was in "More and More" and "Maid In the Valley" that the harmony was more apparent. Their time was faultless and in balance each was perfect.

Beside these, Miss Evalina DuB Benton, one of the city's most talented elocutionists, rendered an original monologue, "Their First Quarrel." It was replete with humorous lines and Miss Benton deftly timed the action. She was seen at her best in the telephone "talk," where pantomimic ability was a necessary adjunct to the situation.

Miss Lillian A. Force presided during the evening and with her were associated the Misses Mabelle Wilson, Mabel A. Woodruff, Minnie Williams, Mrs. J. F. MacDonald and Mrs. W. F. Williams, who formed the decorating committee. At the conclusion of the programme refreshments were served the artists by a committee composed of Mrs. Fred M. VanEnburgh, Mrs. Emily Cory, Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff, Mrs. Leonard Smith and Mrs. Virginia Chickering. The proceeds of the affair will be used by the Circle for supporting the King's Daughters nurse.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXV. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1902. NO. 7

"Support the Constitution Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities"—Madison

PYTHIAN HALL MAY BE BUILT

Perseverance Lodge is Planning to Have a Building of Its Own Erected.

MAY START IN SPRING

Old Project Has Been Revived and Much Interest is Taken—Probable Site on East Front Street—Will be a Three-Story Structure With All the Modern Conveniences.

Emboldened by its prosperity in point of membership and finance, Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., has in contemplation an undertaking probably never attempted by a similar local organization. It is none the less than the erection of a handsome building exclusively for lodge purposes, but embodying all the comforts of the modern clubhouse. The matter was first broached several years ago and at that time plans were drawn for the structure, but disagreement over a suitable site led to its temporary abandonment. Now it has revived, stronger than ever, and before the close of the present year committees will be appointed to bring the scheme to a successful issue.

Perseverance is now one of the largest lodges in this city and the second largest of the order in this State. Through the careful selection of officers in its career of thirty years it has prospered steadily, the present term under the guidance of Chancellor Commander William N. Runyon capping the climax. Although its castle hall on West Second street is conceded to be the best furnished of any in the State, the need of added facilities has long been felt and the members saw no other alternative but the erection of its own building. It has been no spontaneous suggestion but a careful forethought, viewed from all sides. Several pieces of property in the heart of the city which would answer the purpose of a site, have been looked over and one on East Front street seems to be the favorite. On approval from the entire membership it will be purchased.

As outlined at present the structure will be not less than three stories in height. In it will be an auditorium, a lodge room that can be used by any order, a banquet hall of unusual proportions with a kitchen annex, a reading room, bowling alley, plunge and shower baths, dancing floor and many others of a like nature. A janitor will be placed in charge and the running expenses will be met by revenue derived from rentals, not only of the lodge room, but from one or more stores on the ground floor. The cost of the contemplated structure will be met by the issuance of bonds to be retired within ten or fifteen years or else by selling shares to members, to be held by them or their wives.

City Judge William N. Runyon, who is the present head of the organization, has all along favored the plan and will call for action before the close of his administration which will be the first of the coming year. It is not at all improbable that actual construction will be commenced early in 1903.

FUNERAL OF MISS AYERS.

Services Were Held From Hope Chapel Tuesday Afternoon.

Funeral services over the remains of Miss Laura Ayers took place Tuesday afternoon in Hope Memorial chapel with a large gathering of relatives and friends in attendance. Rev. L. R. Howard was in charge and in the course of his remarks referred feelingly to the bright young life so suddenly taken away. Two vocal selections, "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Nearer, My God," were sung sweetly by Mrs. John Manly.

Following the service interment was made in Hillside cemetery. Those who acted as pall bearers were Jediah Smalley, Thomas Muir, George E. Firstbrook and John Young.

NAMED END MEN.

Preparing for the Coming Minstrel Show of Hope Y. M. A.

Preliminary plans for the Hope Y. M. A. coming minstrel entertainment were discussed at length at a special meeting, last Tuesday. Coes, R. C. Firstbrook, Thomas Muir and M. D. Sweeney. The first regular rehearsal will take place next week and will be in charge of President William N. Runyon.

Other business in the course of the meeting was the election of two members and the receiving of several propositions.

WEDDED AT ROSELLE.

Marriage of Mrs. Ida M. Smith and Frank Baldwin, of Brooklyn.

Devoid of any undue ostentation a marriage service was performed in St. Luke's Episcopal church, at Roselle, Tuesday morning, which united in the bonds of matrimony, Mrs. Ida M. Smith, of Watchung avenue, widow of Seymour G. Smith, to Frank Baldwin, of Brooklyn, formerly of North Plainfield. Only the members of the two families were in attendance.

Rev. Harry Elmer Gilchrist, rector of the church, officiated. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin went south on a wedding trip, and on returning will reside in Brooklyn.

THOUGHT IT MAD.

So Mrs. Uhrhahn's Cow Was Shot by a Borough Marshal.

A valuable cow belonging to Mrs. Uhrhahn, at the corner of Somerset street and Codington avenue, was shot Tuesday by Special Marshal Louis Wickoff. The animal was bitten some time ago by a dog suffering from hydrophobia, and which belonged to Adolph Behrens, the milk dealer. Tuesday the cow began to act strangely and Dr. Herbert, the veterinary surgeon, was sent for and he said the animal had symptoms of hydrophobia and ordered it shot. The cow is appraised at $50, which will be paid by the borough.

NO BARN DANCE.

But Guests Assembled at Home of E. S. F. Randolph Instead.

Refreshments were served late in the evening and the guests departed at about 12:30.

SAFE ROBBERS ADMIT GUILT

PLEADED GUILTY WHEN ARRAIGNED AT UNION COUNTY COURT.

Other Indicted Ones Entered Their Pleas When Arraigned Before Judge Vail.

Elizabeth, Nov. 19—In the Union County Court of Common Pleas held yesterday, before Judge Vail, two most important arraignments were Alfred C. Gerwig and Joseph Donnelly, two of the masked burglars, who on February 5 last broke into the new shops of the Jersey Central Railroad at Elizabethport, assaulted, bound and gagged the watchman, Timothy Harrington, and blew open the safe with dynamite, securing $8,000.

Two of the robbers, DeWitt C. Cave and John McDonald, were caught shortly afterward, and are now serving terms in State prison. Donnelly, who was formerly employed in the shops as a watchman, is a cripple. He and Gerwig today pleaded guilty to the robbery and will be sentenced next Wednesday. Other arraignments and pleas were: John C VanHouton, of Plainfield, bigamy, guilty, sentenced November 26; Emil Helperts, bookmaking and poolselling, not guilty, trial next Thursday, bail $300; Leander Streicel, keeping a disorderly house in Elizabeth, not guilty, trial November 26, bail $300.

ALL-DAY PARTY.

Progressive Euchre Given at Park Avenue Hotel for Benefit of Woman's Exchange.

Under the auspices of the Woman's Exchange and through the courtesy of Manager John D. Bailey, of the Park Avenue Hotel, a progressive euchre party was held at the hotel yesterday. The affair was held in the morning and continued throughout the day with social features. There were twenty-three tables, but those who did not play euchre passed the time in sewing and in other ways they had a good time.

In the progressive euchre there were several prizes. Mrs. Rapalje won first prize, Mrs. McManus second, Mrs. T. J. Minford third and Miss Florence I. Marsh fourth. Among those who spent the time in sewing and making useful garments, there was a drawing for a prize. This was won by Mrs. T. S. Davis. All of the prizes were donated and the expenses of the affair were trifling.

The women are very appreciative of Mr. Bailey's efforts in their behalf in offering them the use of the hotel. The Exchange will net about $90 and this money will be used to advance the interests of this worthy institution.

The association was organized on August 9, 1885, and is a very prosperous one, at which the members can meet to discuss various topics of interest. The president is Rev. Peter Bruce, of Copper Hill, and the secretary and treasurer is Rev. Frank Fletcher, of New Market.

The singing of the convention is to be one of its leading features. F. H. Jacobs, of Brooklyn, the gospel singer, will have charge of this department. The song book, Young People's Songs of Praise," by Sankey, will be used.

Thursday evening a trained chorus of 150 voices, under the direction of William Woodhouse, Jr., will sing Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" and the "Gloria," from Mozart's twelfth mass.

HE DOESN'T FEEL CRUSHED

JAMES E. MARTINE TALKS ON RECENT DEMOCRATIC DEFEAT.

Said the Democratic Party Made Decided Gains Even If Not Victorious.

James E. Martine was asked yesterday by a Constitutionalist reporter whether he considered the recent defeat of the Democratic party crushing.

"No! emphatically no," said Mr. Martine, "it was not what we liked or had reason to expect. The issues and our candidates deserved a better fate at the polls, but withal we made decided gains. The tariff and the trust question must be dealt with. There is no hope of a reduction of the tariff at the hands of the Republican party, hence the trusts will go on with their greedy avarice.

"The Democratic party has done much in the way of tariff reduction in the contest and too, we have martialled the Democratic hosts for the fight in 1904.

"All this being considered we are far from being crushed."

After the house has been taken away Mr. Hooley will have the cellar filled up and the surface graded and a grass lawn will be sown over the lot. It is probable that much of the house will be used in the erection of a new house by Mayor Smalley.

BOARD WANTS NEW RAILROAD

Board of Trade Discusses the Need of Additional Railroad Facilities for Plainfield.

TALKED OF TROLLEYS

Committee Appointed to Investigate Chances of Steam Line to Perth Amboy—Talk of Trolley Lines From Metuchen and Over to the Passaic Valley—Board Active.

To those who attended the regular meeting of the Board of Trade, held last Tuesday, it was plainly evident that the organization has awakened from its lethargy and is, at present, stronger and more active than ever. So many members answered the roll-call that the board's facilities for seating were over taxed and makeshifts had to be utilized.

More encouragement was added at the beginning of the session by the election as members of Henry Nischwitz, W. W. Warnock, D. C. Irving, M. Leichtentritt, John Abbots, A. S. Giles and R. H. McCullough. It was reported, also, that many more of the city's leading business men would shortly tender their propositions.

Added railroad facilities for this city and vicinity was the chief topic for discussion and many opinions were brought out by remarks of James E. Martine, deploring the fact that all the railroads in the State ran longitudinally and that none go directly across. This is felt more by those who wish to go to the sea shore and particularly to Perth Amboy, where many Plainfielders have interests. It was the opinion of most of the members that the New Jersey Central could be induced to build a spur from its tracks at a point near Rock avenue, to the Lehigh Valley road and use that to run trains to the present points reached now only in a roundabout way. A committee, composed of J. E. Martine, C. W. Runyon and J. F. MacDonald, was appointed to confer with Superintendent Besler in reference to the matter.

Trolley talk was also prevalent and the old problem of getting a line to run over the mountan into the Passaic valley was thoroughly gone over. Mr. Martine stated that Superintendent McCoy, of the Raritan Traction Company, which built the road from Perth Amboy to Metuchen, aspired to eventually extend the line to this city, and if so, he declared it would be an easy matter to have him go still further and terminate at Stirling.

The gap leading from the head of Somerset street was pronounced to be the best route but the "notch" at Scotch Plains was also suggested as a way to get through the mountains and William R. Stanbery offered to donate land for a private right of way to the foot of the range. It was decided to see Superintendent McCoy in regard to the extension and Messrs. Martine, Stanbery and President Woolson were selected as a committee.

An informal talk took place on the question of getting the local company to run its Elizabeth cars through to Dunellen, thus obviating the necessity of transferring passengers at Watchung avenue, when they wish only to reach the business center of the city. No action was taken.

The supper committee reported that it had been decided to hold the first of the proposed banquets in the Hotel Rossell on Wednesday evening, December 10. It will be limited to 60 members of the board but promises to be an elaborate affair. The committee's report was accepted after which adjournment was made.

Plainfield Inducements.

Don't miss this rare opportunity of having your old piano made new as a trifling expense by L. H. Bastalia, 426 Watchung avenue. For two years our piano has been in a very bad condition. We called in several piano experts, and each one declared it beyond repair. We finally consulted Mr. L. H. Battalia and he said he could make it as good as new. It is now in as perfect condition as it was the day we bought it, twenty years ago, and we feel we cannot recommend Mr. Battalia too highly.

RICH ORNAMENTS.

Motifs of Lace—Cabochons and Spangles.

Motifs of lace are studded with cabochons of jet, and colored stones are used in similar fashion.

This will be a season of beadings and spanglings.

Tucks and plaits of ribbon are laid freely on lace, and net and folds or tabs of velvet are finished with tiny buttons or little bows or buckles. Where lace is employed it is usually left transparent or lined with color. Ecru or ficelle lace is popular over white satin, and a tracery of black chenille running over the light colored lace is quite the height of the mode.

Evening blouses are not very decollete, and many have the necks wholly or partly covered with transparent lace. Choux of colored velvet, crape or chiffon are liberally used, but placed more at the center than at the left side. Embroidered galon is inlet in the fashion of lace on heavy gowns.

A thoroughly up to date gown is the one in the cut. It is trimmed with strappings of lighter shade. The hat is of white felt, trimmed to correspond.

HAT FASHIONS.

Ingenious Imitations of Fur and Feathers.

The new millinery shows ingenuity as well as charm. Both fur and feathers are imitated in weaving, while real feather flues uncurled are supporting the return of fringes. Some about an inch in depth are applied in continuous circles on the large flat crowns. Be the shape what it may, flatness is the marked characteristic of the hats of the moment. Felt, smooth and hairy, and the fluffy silk beavers play an important part, but moire cloth and velvet, especially white, hold their own.

Feathers assume a new aspect. Bird of paradise plumes are fashioned into bows and loops and into cockades and aigrets.

Large flat hats after the Lambelle order are much worn. Some of the crowns are of white cloth, some of white moire. Drawn louisine hats are another novelty.

Large hats are made of sable and gray squirrel. They are trimmed with tabs of bright colored velvets.

The smart tailor made hat in the illustration is of black beaver, trimmed with a scarf of red silk, black panne straps and two wings, the one black and red, the other white.

An order was received by a large shoemaking firm in Cawnpur from the Middlesex regiment for shoes for the mess. The manager passed the order over to the head baboo and told him to see it was attended to at once. The baboo read it over and seemed rather mystified, but went away. After a short time he returned and said to the manager of the firm:

FASHION NOTES.

Differences In This Winter's Costumes—Large Sleeves.

Waists have altered nearly as much as skirts. Sleeves may are long render fashion extremely ridiculous. Some of the French models show sleeves with absurdly large proportions from the elbow to the wrist. Many are rendered clumsy with bands of shirring. Good dressmakers, however, will no doubt modify this tendency.

Bodices are nearly all tight fitting in the back, though elongated and pouched in the front, with a narrow pointed waistband. Collars are higher than ever. The French are compromising by wearing pretty little fiutes of silk at the sides of the collar.

There is a tendency toward voluminousness in evening dress and more handsome materials than of yore. Velvet will be worn a great deal both for day and evening wear. Embroideries will be seen on everything, and of course lace never loses its popularity, while a good many Paris frocks are threaded through with white velvet.

The evening coat shown would also be suitable for afternoon wear. It is of velvet lined with white satin. The revers are of ermine, the cuffs part ermine and lace. The triple shoulder capes are piped with white satin.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

UP TO DATE COSTUMES.

Plaited Skirt—New Flecked Zibelines.

All walking and tailor costumes just clear the ground and have no trains. It is a different matter, however, in the case of smart frocks. The skirts of these are not as long as they were, but they take all up in fullness and absolutely lie in folds around the feet.

The newest skirt is the plaited one. This is arranged in folds around the hips and at the back, but the front is still kept fairly plain. It is charming when the material is not too thick. Tailors are using a great deal the new box plaited or kilted skirt, which they mostly put into a plain piece fitted around the hips.

The materials of the moment are the new snowflake tweeds and zibelines. Somewhat similar fabrics were used last winter, but now the flakes are larger. In these blue, brown, red and green are the favorite shades.

The illustration shows a street gown of gray zibeline flecked with white. The hat is of rough white felt.

ODD COATS.

Back Shapes of Zibeline and Fancy Goods.

The sack paletot abounds in many charming shapes. It is made in delicate green zibeline cloth trimmed with hanging green and white tassels. This is lined with delicate brocade and closes right up to the throat.

Equally alluring is a long evening coat of pastel pink zibeline. It is very full sack in form and is stitched with bands of pink satin and finished about the shoulders by a width imparting double cape.

A half sack coat of heavy fawn corduroy is strapped with shaped upright lines of face cloth defined by braid, the whole lined through with scarlet satin.

Gowns are becoming more and more elaborate, especially those for evening wear. They are fairly incrusted with fine lace and embroideries. The dinner dress here shown is of pink crape trimmed with a raised embroidery of hydrangeas worked in chenille over black and white lace. The gown is in two pieces, but simulates a princess dress with its long lines of trimming opening over a full shirred underskirt of chiffon.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR STREET WEAR.

Rough Cloths—Cord and Tassel Trimmings.

Although rough cloths are deservedly popular, yet fine cloths are also being used. Corduroy velvets and vicunas lend themselves admirably to ruchings of lace and velvet, and these play a very important part in the season's trimmings.

Cords and tassels are seen on many tailor made gowns, while Indian and Russian embroideries are excessively popular.

Never was there a wider choice in furs. Full length coats, three-quarter coats, coats ending at the waist line—all these are the style. The furriers' ingenuity is shown in the fact that they are adding waistbands of embroidery or silk to these short tight fitting coats. This is a becoming touch which does away with the idea of clumsiness that additional thickness at the waist nearly always gives.

Fur toques will be a great deal worn, though in most cases the crown only is of fur and the rest of velvet or felt, which is much more becoming than the old time fur models in millinery.

The smart bathrobe in the cut is of red wool trimmed with bands of black velvet.

THE NERVOUS WOMAN

"WELL, doctor?" The patient drummed her fingers impatiently on the table as she spoke.

"You live on your nerves," was the answer.

The woman laughed. "As if I had anything else to live on!" she retorted sarcastically as she shrugged her slender shoulders.

"Why did you choose a rocking chair when you came into this office? Why didn't you sit in a straight backed one?"

"I—I don't know." She stopped the quick, jerky rocking she had been indulging in ever since the beginning of the conversation. "I suppose I did it unconsciously." The rocking recommenced without her noticing it.

"You see you can't stop it! Now you are fidgeting your feet—that's just as bad—and now you're rubbing your right thumb against the side of your first finger. Can't you keep absolutely still?"

The patient took a long breath and faced the doctor. "No!" she said. "I feel as if I should fly all to pieces. I can't; that's all there is to it!"

The woman rose to go. "Oh, if I had known that nerves was all that was the trouble with me I wouldn't have bothered you!" she said crispily. "No one ever died of nerves that I know of."

"Then you haven't studied cause and effect very carefully," remarked the physician. "More people die of nerves every day of the year than one can count. They die in three ways—mentally, morally and physically. If you have a very strong will, you don't die mentally or morally, and if you have very strong health you don't contract disease. Now, a disordered nervous organization robs you of both these safeguards. You make light of nerves," he went on, "and yet I tell you that the nervous woman is not only no good in this world, but in many cases she is a positive harm. She begins by allowing herself to be affected by small things. The sound of a piano drives her wild if she is writing, and when she reads you mustn't talk within a mile of her. She fidgets, she bites her lips and drums on the table; then she begins to borrow trouble, to fret, to wonder why other people don't fret and to worry for them—in other words, to nag them. The next step is to become visionary. Her mind is in that state of tension that she is ready to believe almost any superstition or fancy. Her children, if she has any, become weak willed and cowardly through their nerves. The nervous woman loses life's best chances because speech trembles on her lips, and she is incapable of sustained action or *patient waiting. She becomes an ex*tremist and is thorough in nothing. She lives perpetually at high tension, her tastes become highly flavored, she dislikes quiet company, quiet books, even quiet sounds. Life itself must be keyed to her own unnatural pitch."

THE PIANO DRIVES HER WILD.

"And what would you do about it if you were such a woman?"

"I would seriously go over my mode of life and find out what was wrong with it. There are three principal causes for such a state—mental worry, an unhealthy mode of life and overstrenuousness, or attempting too much. Concerning worry, here's the best thing that was ever said: 'If what you are worrying about is avoidable, then worrying won't do it any good; if it is not, then devote your energies to changing matters.' As for the two last causes, I have only this to say—make a change at all cost, live regularly, insist upon getting the proper time for sleep, food, work and recreation. If your present position in the workaday world or in society is untenable under these conditions, change it, even if you have to change your whole mode of life, for life was not meant to be a torture or a curse, and it is only by our own acts that we make it so. And, above all, have respect for your nerves, for they mean not only your own well being, but that of all those around you."

SMART MILLINERY.

Long Ends Not Yet Out of Style—Picture Hats.

Some of the prettiest millinery models are picture hats of felt and beaver in delicate tones trimmed with autumn leaves, grapes and blackberries.

If not exaggerated, the ends at the back of the hat can still be pretty, but when the simplest hats show streamers of velvet and lace they degenerate into absurdities.

There is more hair shown in front than formerly; still nearly all the smart hats are worn well forward. Some of the Gainsboroughs are tilted on the right instead of the left side. Some of the crowns, too, are low, while others are high.

Useful and smart are the little silk hats piped to match the tailor made frocks. They are also pretty in felt with two or three quills at the side or some pompons consisting chiefly of tassels. Simple hats such as these are ideal for country wear.

Stuffed birds and paradise plumes are also greatly in evidence.

The cut shows an elaborate gown of pale yellow chiffon and lace. The berths is ornamented with little chiffon flowers and baby velvet ribbon.

NEW TRIMMINGS.

Piecements of Braid—Llama Cloth. Crushed Velvet.

Embroidered piecements of braid are inlet into heavy wool gowns after the fashion of lace. The woolen fabric is cut away and the edges bordered with cut scrolls of velvet buttonholed at the edges.

Llama sack coats in a pale putty shade are finished off with bands of plain stitched cloth and broad collars.

BLACK AND WHITE COMBINATION.

The material is a rival to the zibeline cloths, having a waved surface much resembling broadtail.

Crushed velvets and even plushes will be favorite materials this winter both for day and evening wear.

Velvet this season has a very important place in fashion, and pin spotted velvets are very dressy. One of the latest things is a dark green corduroy. This is very smart made up with deep russet lace.

The illustration shows a street dress. The material is black broadcloth trimmed with panne velvet having an embroidered dot of white. The waist is made with a soft front of chiffon and lace.

FURS AND AUTO COATS.

collar and plaited silk gimp introduced in a double series of vandykes on the narrow basque and cuffs.

The new furs are very rich. Many of them come shaped on the shoulders so as to form a cape, and from there they fall almost to the feet in the shape of flat tabs edged with tails. Sometimes the back of the neck is softened with brown chiffon. The cuffs are large and pliable, the tails trimming them so arranged that whichever way the muff is held they fall into place.

The gray squirrel is one of the most fashionable furs of the moment. It is made into loose sack back paletots, while the pelerine and cape combined is the newest form of fur garment.

A great many odd and even inexpensive furs are made up after the fashion of costlier skins.

One of the latest fur models is shown in the cut. It is of squirrel, with revers of point lace over primrose velvet. The hat is of lace and chiffon to match.

SEPARATE WAISTS.

They Must Conform In Color to the Skirt.

Bodices are so diverse in fashion that a clever dressmaker is able to suit the most exacting figures and arrange trimmings in the most becoming fashion. The blouse still prevails, but the blouse distinct in color and material is only worn with the coat and skirt for country and morning wear. The evening blouse is still fashionable, but although the material may differ the coloring must correspond.

Black blouses of every description are worn with black skirts, and the pin spotted nets, crepe de chines, mousseline de soie and plain and fancy chiffon are much incrusted with lace or decorated with embroidery. Fine jet is much used, and silk featherstitching is quite a popular decoration.

Cross stitching and the varied types of herringbone and feather work are arranged over narrow ribbon velvet. Spots of velvet are also used. These are generally of varying size.

The evening waist in the picture is of lace, nile green liberty satin and chiffon.

For steamer and sporting wear the new sweaters in cream wool are very smart and very becoming to those having good figures.

Useful shirt waists are made of rough cheviot. The waists are strapped, and the skirts, laid in stitched plaits, reach a little above the ground.

A smart walking gown made in a Fifth avenue shop was of tweed in a heather mixture strapped in suede leather, which also appeared on the cuffs and belt. The coat also had small leather buttons in groups of three.

The useful dress in the illustration is of dark red cheviot, trimmed with black braid over white silk.

HUMAN ILLS OF ALASKANS.

An English Physician Tells of the Diseases Most Prevalent in That Country.

After a residence of 16 months in Alaska an English physician has made a report of the disease which most afflict the people of that cold region. There are, he says, two seasons. Winter, the season of pack ice; summer, the season of swamps. The winter lasts for nine months, the summer for three. Among human maladies cerebro-spinal meningitis is very prevalent, sometimes in epidemic form, sometimes in sporadic form. It is often difficult to distinguish from the cerebral form of typhoid. Scorbutus is also widespread.

Rheumatism is frequent and usually takes the neuralgic type; inflammatory rheumatism is rare. Pneumonia is almost unknown, strange to say. Affections of the digestion are very frequent, owing to poor food; nervous diseases, such as locomotor ataxia, are also frequent. Alcoholism and the like are prevalent, due to the ennui of the long winter, but, on the whole, intemperance is less harmful in Alaska than in more southern climates. Insanity is by no means rare, and it declares itself most frequently in winter, owing to ennui, absence of occupation, lack of exercise and isolation. Its usual form is acute melancholia, almost always followed by acute mania. Suicidal mania is also frequent. Taken altogether the catalogue of Alaskan diseases is a long one and indicates that a vigorous physique and morals is required to resist them.

THE BRITISH LOAD LINE.

Vessels Are Not Permitted to Carry Surplus Cargoes in English Waters.

A short time since the captain of a Dutch vessel here took the singular step of making application to one of the bodies authorized to assign the load line to have the line marked on the side of the vessel, says London Fairplay. This was carried out and the vessel was then loaded. The captain found that the disk was submerged, and in the coolest way possible appears to have invited on board of trade officials and to have asked them for permission for his vessel to sail in her overloaded condition. To his great surprise he was told by the officials that his vessel would be detained until the surplus cargo was taken out of her. He urged that the load line act applied to British ships only and that consequently his vessel could not be interfered with. It was explained to him that the act referred to Dutch as well as British ships and that at any rate he had "given himself away" by actually adopting the British loadline.

The officials visited the Dutch vessel when it was discovered that the disk had been incorrectly assigned, being a trifle higher up the ship's side than it should have been—so that in fact she was more overloaded than she even appeared to be. A quantity of cargo was ordered to be discharged—four times the quantity that brought the vessel to her incorrectly assigned loadline. The Dutch captain sailed a sadder man.

ST. VINCENT ERUPTION.

A Curious Feature Observed by Prof. Russell After the Volcanoe's Upheaval.

In Century Prof. Russell prints the following bit of personal observation among his conclusions concerning the West Indian eruptions:

"The distribution of hot material discharged from La Soufriere in a belt across the island of St. Vincent, instead of over a V-shaped area as at Martinique, seemed to have an intimate connection with the position of the crater near the summit of La Soufriere and the influence of the trade-winds on the distribution of the material discharged from it. As is well known, the depth of the layer of the atmosphere affected by the trade-winds is comparatively shallow, and above it the air is moving from west to east. The stones and dust shot upward from La Soufriere rose through the trade-wind layer, and were carried eastward by the upper air-current. On falling, however, they again met the influence of the westward-blowing trades and were given a slant in a westward direction sufficient to allow them to pass through windows and enter houses. The windows of some of the houses near Georgetown which face eastward have the appearance of an abandoned house which has served as a target for skilful rifle shots, the westward-facing windows, or those looking toward the volcano, are but little injured."

Bad Hand Made Him Money.

When Lord Curzon, now viceroy of India, was at Oxford, he wrote an abominable hand. One day he penned two letters, one of them to a relative and one to a tradesman with whom he always discussed the faults of their respective relations, and accidentally put these letters into the wrong envelopes. He was about to write a profound apology to his relative when he received the following note from him: "Can't read a word of your four pages, but guess you want some money, you young rascal." Inclosed was a Bank of England note for a good amount.

Big Game in South Africa.

At the present time many valuable species of big game in South Africa are threatened with extinction. It is proposed to establish regulations for their preservation, and it is suggested that camps should be set apart for the purpose of breeding certain species in order that the country may be restocked with game.

SALARIES OF STATE JUDGES.

They Range from $2,250 a Year in West Virginia to $7,000 in New York.

While many who draw government salaries and who were excessively unhappy until they "got on the payroll," are now crying out for more, let us turn to the statistics of the salaries of state judges, who, as a rule, are superior to the men who, "not making headway at the bar, seek United States judgeships," as Thad Stevens said. And they are as hardworking, if not more so, than the federal judges. The chief judges' salaries are as follows, according to the Washington Post:

Alabama	$4,000	Missouri	$4,500
Arkansas	2,500	Nebraska	2,500
California	6,000	Nevada	7,000
Colorado	3,500	New Hampshire	2,400
Connecticut	4,000	New Jersey	6,000
Delaware	3,500	New York	7,000
Florida	2,500	North Carolina	2,500
Georgia	3,000	Ohio	5,000
Illinois	6,000	Oregon	3,000
Indiana	4,000	Pennsylvania	7,000
Iowa	4,000	Rhode Island	4,000
Kansas	3,000	South Carolina	3,500
Kentucky	4,000	Tennessee	3,500
Louisiana	3,000	Texas	4,500
Maine	3,000	Vermont	3,500
Maryland	4,000	Virginia	3,000
Michigan	5,000	West Virginia	2,250
Minnesota	4,000	Montana	3,000
Mississippi	3,000	Wisconsin	4,000

Territorial judges, whose courts are analogous to the District of Columbia supreme court, get $2,000, and I think territorial chief justices now receive $3,000.

The list of great jurists who first presided in state courts and became federal judges afterward would be very long, and from Joseph Story down would be equally illustrious. A more industrious, conscientious, and competent class of men than that of the state courts cannot be found in this nation. In themselves they illustrate the superiority of the elective system.

TROPICS ARE AT OUR DOOR.

Americans Are Large Consumers of the Products of Warmer Climes and Have Them Handy.

Americans live better, perhaps, than the people of any other part of the world. They are not content with the products of their own country, but draw largely upon the tropics for condiments and delicacies that add to the pleasures of the table. The increase in the contributions of the tropics to the daily life of man has been general throughout the countries where prosperity or an active foreign commerce is the rule, but it seems to be especially marked in the United States, which now imports more than $1,000,000 worth of tropical and subtropical foodstuffs and raw materials every day in the year. The increased reliance upon the tropics is probably greater, proportionately, in the United States than in most other countries, since a much larger share of our sugar is drawn from the tropics than is the case with other countries, especially the European countries, which in most cases now produce their own sugar from beets.

The United States has during recent years consumed nearly one-half of the coffee crop of the world which enters into international commerce, and more than one-half of the coffee of the world. In the year just ended the importations of goods usually considered as of tropical or subtropical production amounted to $400,000,000, or considerably more than $1,000,000 for every day in the year, including Sundays and holidays, while 30 years ago they amounted to but $143,000,000, or less than $400,000 per day.

AMERICAN HAWTHORNS.

Surprises in the Field of Botany That Have Come in the Last Few Years.

The explorations of botanists have developed, during the past few years, certain facts concerning the American hawthorns which constitute one of the surprises in the field of botany, says the Boston Transcript. To the merely lay mind the mention of the hawthorn commonly suggests only an attractive ornamental tree of English, or at least of European origin; the idea that there are species indigenous to our own soil proving generally an interesting but quite novel bit of information. And it may be added that although students of the North American sylva have always been well aware of a number of fine native species, they too, it seems, until very recent years, had but a faint comprehension of the somewhat astonishing facts.

So far as is now known, the principal home of the hawthorn is North America. England has but a single species, Crataegus oxyacantha, which with a few others of continental Europe have, in the hands of gardeners and hybridizers, been so greatly differentiated as to be obvious origin have become a perplexed question. Japan, too, for a wonder, has only one species, and but two or three are yet known as indigenous to China, though this great field may yield others to more enterprising explorers hereafter, however, abound in them. They are distributed from Newfoundland to the Pacific, and southward to Texas.

Ordeal for Diplomats.

Foreign ambassadors in China are required to go through a difficult ordeal, as the following incident shows:

Young Li, a cabinet minister, recently invited the foreign representatives at Peking to a dinner, which began at ten o'clock in the morning and did not end until three o'clock on the following morning. During that time 126 different dishes were placed before the guests. "As dinners of this kind are not rare," says one of the foreign representatives, "it is evident that no one should go as an ambassador to China who has not a good stomach."

CHINAMAN AND THE PEN.

It Was the First of the Kind He Had Ever Seen. But It Was No Puzzle to Him.

A certain newspaper man who was induced to "try" a stylographic pen got it out of order by reckless treatment and took it to a penshop for repair. The man there soon showed him that there was nothing serious the matter with it, the only trouble being that he had neglected to do some little thing in using it. Then he began to take the pen apart for the newspaperman's instruction, so that he might see how very simple a thing it is, relates the Philadelphia Record.

"Simple!" cried the indignant owner of the instrument, "it is as complicated as a Chinese puzzle! I don't wonder that I cannot make it go when I want to!"

The penman laughed.

"You remind me," he said, "that there is a Chinaman in this town who used a stylographic regularly. He came here to buy one several years ago, and when I showed it to him he began to take it all apart. I hurriedly stopped him, supposing that he would do it an injury, but he at once put down the value of the pen saying that it was his, and then continued the dissection of it. I gave you my word that he handled the pen more deftly than the man who made it, and in five minutes he had put it together again so that it worked better than it did at first. There fellows beat the world at understanding little details. Now, an Irishman or an American—I beg your pardon—would have done that; and, remember, it was the first pen of the kind the Chinaman ever saw.

MARRIAGES INCREASING.

Figures Gathered in England Confirm the Fact as Regards That Country.

It is a little surprising to learn that the marriage rate is substantially increasing. It was 15.6 per 1,000 in 1898 per thousand, which, though below the rates of 1898 and 1899, is higher than the rate in any other year since 1876. This fact should furnish a sufficient answer to such questions as: "Why don't the men marry?" which periodically reappear in the dull season. Marriage, so far from being a decadent and unpopular institution, is more flourishing to-day than it has been for at least a quarter of a century, says the London News. "It is in the industrial and urban centers that the marriage rate is highest. London leading the way with 18 per thousand of the population. In the agricultural districts marriages are relatively few, falling to 11.9 per thousand in Rutlandshire. Although the majority of marriages continue to be performed in the Anglican church, the proportion is not so great as formerly. There were 257,400 marriages in England and Wales in 1900, and 672 per thousand were solemnized by the Church of England, against 684 in the five years 1895-99. The decline in Anglican celebrations is balanced by an increase in those performed in nonconformist churches, and at the offices of the registrars.

A DIET OF WOOD.

German Chemist Invents an Animal Fodder with Sawdust as Principal Ingredient.

Wood is to be the newest food, says Heinrich Reb, a German chemist in Berlin. He has secured a patent upon a form of animal fodder which has sawdust as its chief ingredient, says a London cable.

He argues that animals have a decided liking for young shoots, roots of shrubs, tree bark and other heavy food of the same nature, and, since experiments have proved that the nutriment contained in such growth remains in it even after it has become wood, he observes that with a little salt and water added to it the sawdust will prove to be a highly nourishing diet.

He has statistics to prove it. Pine, birch, alder, acacia, beech and walnut woods and straws have been analyzed chemically by him and he finds that the wood has vastly more albumen, nitrogen and fatty substance than the straw.

The inventor claims that "a very cheap cattle food can be prepared in this manner, to which may be added potato peelings, corn husks and shells of grain and the residue from the sugar beet after the sugar has been extracted."

The Superstitious Czar.

The czar wears a ring in which he believes is imbedded a piece of the true cross. It was originally a part of the treasures of the vatican, and was presented to an ancestor of the czar. Some years ago the czar was traveling from St. Petersburg to Moscow. He suddenly discovered that he had forgotten the ring. The train was stopped immediately, and a special messenger sent flying back on an express engine for it, nor would the czar allow the train to move until several hours afterward, the messenger returned with the ring.

Historic Trees.

Litchfield, Conn., has more historic trees than any other town in New England. The elm which adorns the green planted by John C. Calhoun; a sycamore said to be one of three planted by Oliver Wolcott, signer of the Declaration of Independence, and named after the 13 original colonies; an elm which served as a whipping post in colonial days, and a willow tree which grew from a walking stick stuck in the ground by Col. Thomas Seymour, an American officer who captured Maj. Andre, the British spy.

Toronto Has Boat.

In Norway torpedo boats are now carrying the mail between Christiania and Bergen. The naval authorities have long been anxious to increase the efficiency of the officers and men on board of these boats as much as possible, and they finally decided that this object could be achieved by letting the boats run regularly between the two greatest cities in the country. For three reasons this plan was preferred to any other—first, because during the trips the boats could be thoroughly tested; second, because the officers could become fully acquainted with that portion of the Norwegian coast, and, third, because the postal service would be benefited. There is no railroad connection between Bergen and Christiania, and all postal communications between the two cities are delivered by boat. In doing this work the torpedo boats far excel the ordinary mail steamers.—N. Y. Sun.

He Ate "Insards."

An actor who was accustomed to spend his summers in Wilton, Me., noted when, as the custom was, a farmer "killed a critter," the liver, sweetbreads, kidneys, etc., were thrown away. The actor appreciated these delicacies, but, though he got the goods, the "sturdy farmer scorned his proffered gold." Not long after he observed as he walked through the village that the man who made it, and indeed minutes he had put it together again so that it worked better than it did at first. There fellows beat the world at understanding little details. Now, an Irishman or an American—I beg your pardon—I've been there that; and, remember, it was the first pen of the kind the Chinaman ever saw.

Admonition That Admonished.

Patrick and Bridget, with their bright young son Mikey, of whom both were excessively fond, were taking a walk in Central park one Sunday morning. Mikey was not a bad boy, and did not intend to be disobedient; but he couldn't long remember, amid so many diverting sights and incidents, his mother's oft-repeated caution to keep off the grass. At last Patrick noticed, became vexed, and decided to intervene in the interest of family discipline. Removing his dudeen from his mouth and glancing fiercely at Mikey for a moment he thundered to the terrified youngster: "Look a-here, ye young spalpeen, if ye don't moind yeils ye not to do anythin' hereafther ye do it! Do ye understand?"—N. Y. Times.

Why Rats Are Safe in India.

Although the famine over the greater part of Rajputana, Gujerat and the Central Indian states, is less widespread than hitherto, there will nevertheless be much suffering during the next few months, and 400,000 people are already on government relief works. The rats have to a large extent disappeared, but have destroyed a considerable portion of the cotton crop. The inhabitants of Gujerat are convinced that the rats are reincarnations of people who died in the last famine, and it is for this reason that the British officials have found it impossible to get any assistance in destroying the pests.—London Mail.

"Wake up here, Moorphy, till Oi give ye the powdhers t' ma-ake ye sleep!"—Colorado Springs Gazette.

Statesmen Who Refused Peerages.

REGULAR BABY SAMSON.

Nine Months Old Boy Performs Truly Wonderful Feats of Endurance and Strength.

A nine-months-old boy living in Somerville, Mass., has developed into a regular Sandow. He has a name as substantial as his strength. He has been christened John Driscoll Sweeney, and "Johnny" has a pair of arms attached to a 30-pound body that are marvelous. His strength is extraordinary. He can hang from the top of a door, trapeze, mantel—in fact anything on which he can obtain a grip with his tiny hands. It is not known how long he can hang by his fingers, as his parents will not permit him to go to a final test, but he never has shown the least inclination to weaken and has at once indicated that he wanted to be taken down.

A feat performed by him not long ago was hanging from the tailboard of a wagon while the horses moved at a brisk trot. He swung back and forth perfectly contented and apparently feeling that he was in no danger of falling. "Johnny" also can turn somersaults with perfect ease. He can stand on his hands while his father takes hold of his heels and can walk along that way for a short distance, displaying remarkable strength in his hands and wrists.

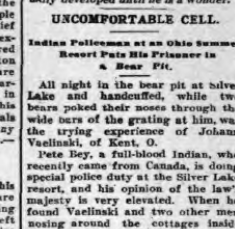
The baby goes through a regular course of athletic training, with his father as trainer. Every morning he takes his exercise, going through the test with wonderful enthusiasm. The boy began to exhibit unusual strength when he was three months old, and since that time his muscles have gradually developed until he is a wonder.

UNCOMFORTABLE CELL.

Indian Policeman at an Ohio Summer Resort Puts His Prisoner in a Bear Pit.

All night in the bear pit at Silver Lake and handcuffed, while two bears poked their noses through the wide bars of the grating at him, was the trying experience of Johann Vaelinski, of Kent, O.

Pete Bey, a full-blood Indian, who recently came from Canada, is doing special police duty at the Silver Lake resort, and his opinion of the law's majesty is very elevated. When he found Vaelinski and two other men nosing around the cottages inside the grounds late at night, he gave a whoop, and caught two of the fellows before they could start to run.



VAELINSKI WAS CAUGHT.

The third escaped. Another got away while Peter was putting the cuffs on Vaelinski. Where to put the prisoner bothered the Indian for awhile, but at last he thought of the bear pit. There is an entrance to the pit three by four feet, and with wide-barred gates on each side. Into this the prisoner was pushed, and though he yelled with fear as the bears came trotting toward him, it did no good. By putting their feet through the grating the bears could come within an inch of touching their visitor, and they made things interesting for him for several hours.

After an investigation next morning Vaelinski was released, it being found that he and the man with him had come there in going from Cuyahoga Falls to Kent.

New Suit for Every Day.

The greatest dandy in the world is Prince Albert of Thurn, Germany. This fastidious young man attires himself in a new suit of clothes every day —enough people to keep 29 experienced workmen going, and to run up a bill of $15,000. AN EQUINE FREAK.

A Beautiful Black Mustache Adorns Upper Lip of Bearded Myra, a Western Horse.

Chicago has a horse with a mustache. Early the other day Myra H., out of Queen Myra, by Black Giant, appeared in the city, and wondering citizens stopped to gaze as she high-stepped down the boulevard, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

Bearded Myra, the veterinary surgeons agree, is a phenomenon. On her upper lip is a long black mustache, not a spare thing, made up of a few scattered hairs, but one of heavy, luxuriant growth, like the false affair the villain wears in the play. When left alone it droops gracefully over her mouth and gets in her way when she eats.

MYRA AND HER BEARD.
(Illinois Horse Known as the Queen of Equine Freaks.)

Myra is the property of F. A. King, of Clinton, Ill. She is coal black all over, with the exception of a single white star on her forehead, a strong, straight-limbed, beautifully-formed animal, and altogether a splendid specimen of horseflesh. Mr. King brought her from Clinton to have two prominent Chicago veterinary surgeons examine the growth on her upper lip, and, if possible, explain its presence there. From here he will take her to San Francisco, where he will remain for the winter.

"Myra was my mother's pet. Mother died recently. I would not part with Myra for a fortune," Mr. King says. "Museum managers have fairly haunted my footsteps, and anxious to buy her. Magnificently large offers have been made me, but I would accept none of them. As long as I have money enough to keep her well-fed, well-housed, and well-cared for, Myra and I shall not be parted."

The Chicago veterinary surgeons who have seen the mare are at a loss to account for her mustache.

Occasionally Mr. King has the hostler cover the mare's facial adornment with a black cloth, which effectually conceals it. Then Myra passes up and down the boulevard without attracting more than the most casual glance from the passers-by. She seems to understand this, and enjoying her distinction, dislikes the cloth.

Sometimes, on the other hand, Mr. King orders the hostler to take great pains to "dress" the mustache becomingly. The style that he and Myra like best is the one affected by Emperor William of Germany.

The prospective archbishop was born in Armagh, Ireland, 60 years ago, and was educated partly in his native land and partly at St. John's college here, in the American college at Rome, and in St. Joseph's seminary at Troy. Prisoners in Morocco are required to pay the policemen who arrest them. The fee is about 25 cents. This system makes the officers quite vigilant, and they often arrest a man on a slight pretext.

AN AMATEUR PIRATE.

Maj. Stede Bonnet Turned from Farming to Freebooting and Became A Greedy Robber.

Early in the eighteenth century there lived at Bridgetown, in the island of Barbados, a very pleasant, middle-aged gentleman named Maj. Stede Bonnet. He was a man in comfortable circumstances and had been an officer in the British army. He had retired from military service and had married a widow at Bridgetown, where he lived in comfort and was respected by his neighbors.

But for some reason or other this quiet and reputable gentleman got it into his head that he should like to be a pirate. But besides the general reasons why Maj. Bonnet should not become a pirate, and which applied to all men as well as to himself, there was a special reason against his adoption of the profession. He was a robber on a sea an out-and-out landsman and knew nothing whatever of nautical matters. He was fond of history and well read in the literature of the day. He was accustomed to the habits of good society, and knew a good deal about farming and horses and cows and poultry.

But notwithstanding his absolute unfitness for such a life, Maj. Bonnet was determined to become a pirate, and he became one. He had enough money to buy a sloop, and he fitted her out and manned her, and this he quietly did at Bridgetown, nobody supposing that he was going to do anything more than start off on some commercial cruise. When everything was ready his vessel slipped out of the harbor one night, and he was sailing safely on the rolling sea he stood upon the quarter deck and proclaimed himself a pirate. He ran up *the black flag, girded on a great cut*lass, and folding his arms he ordered his helm to steer the vessel to the coast of Virginia.

Bonnet's men were practiced seamen, and so when this "green hand" came into the waters of Virginia he actually took two or three vessels and robbed and plundered passengers, burned the ships and sending the crews ashore.

This had grown to be a common custom among the pirates, who, though cruel and hard hearted, had not the inducements of the old buccaneers to torture and murder in the seizure of the vessels which they captured. It was called "marooning," and was somewhat less heartless than the old methods.

As Bonnet wished to adopt the customs of the society in which he placed himself, when he found himself too far from land to put the captured crew on shore he did not hesitate to make them walk the plank, a favorite device of pirates whenever they had no convenient way of disposing of their prisoners.

In a few months Maj. Stede Bonnet rapidly advanced. He soon became a greedy robber and a cruel conqueror. He captured merchant vessels all along the coast as far north as New England.—Frank R. Stockton, in St. Nicholas.

SAMPLES OF IRISH WIT.

Pat's Ready Tongue Maintains Its Reputation for Putting People in Good Humor.

Two laborers set out from Wexford to walk to Dublin. By the time they reached Bray they were very tired with their journey, and one turned to the other and told them they were still 12 miles from Dublin. "Be me sowl," said one, after a little thought, "sure, it's but six miles apiece! Let us walk on."

During a discussion at a meeting of the Kilrush Temperance Literary society upon the slight consideration attached to life by uncivilized nations, a speaker mentioned the extraordinary circumstance that in China if a man were condemned to death he could easily hire a substitute to die for him. "Arrah," the debater went on, "I believe many poor fellows get their living by acting as substitutes in that way!"

A child went crying to its mother and reported that it had swallowed a button. "Well, well, look at that now!" cried the woman. "Begor, I suppose the next thing you'll do is to swallow a buttonhole!" This reminds me of the graphic description by a beggar man of his tattered coat: "Shure, me clothes are all in a wisp. It's nothin' but a parcel of holes sewn together."

A curious peculiarity of the Irish nature is the wide limits to which relationship is extended. "Do you know Pat Meehan?" a peasant was asked. "Of sourse I do," was the answer. "Why, he's a near relation of mine. He waves proposed for my sister Kate."

A clergyman told me that he has a parishioner who is much addicted to drink. Meeting the man one day he said, as the people say, "he had a drop in," the priest insisted that he should take the pledge, for it was the only protection against the temptations of the public house. "You've never seen a teetotaler drunk, father," was the retort. "Ah, your riverence," replied Tom, "I've seen many a man drunk, but I couldn't tell for the life o' me whether they wor teetotalers or not!"—London Spectator.

Not a Whisky.

When the bishop of New York was once making a visitation at Goshen, one of the vestrymen, who had a pair of flambeteonians, indulged the bishop's fondness for fine horses by allowing him to drive the pair. Bishop Potter was well covered with dust when he drew up at a country inn. Stepping into the office, which was also the bar, the bishop approached the counter and said to the man in attendance: "Would you kindly give me a glass of whisky, sir?" The man looked confused, more especially because of the unmistakable cut of the ecclesiastic's clothes, and he replied, with some diffidence: "Really, doctor, we daren't sell liquor on Sunday." It was soon explained that the bishop only wanted a whisk broom to brush his dusty broadcloth.—N. Y. Tribune.

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION.

In conformity with the day named by the President of the United States, I appoint Thursday, November 27, as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer—of thanksgiving for blessings received, and of prayer, for their continuance. I do this partly because it has been an honored custom in this State from its foundation, which I hope will continue as long as the State shall endure, to set apart at least one day in the year for this purpose, and partly because it is right and proper to make public as well as private acknowledgement to an ever living, merciful God for His constant and unfailing care. No nation has ever been blessed with all the material blessings of life as our nation. No State in our nation has been more favored than the one in which it is our happy lot to dwell. We are a God-fearing and God-loving people. Let us get together in our public places of worship on the day named and render public thanks and prayer to Almighty God for all His mercies.

FRANKLIN MURPHY,
Governor.

PLAINFIELD'S GROWTH.

Anyone who has the slightest doubt that Plainfield is not growing has only to take a trip through the city streets to see evidences on every side of the substantial prosperity which is visiting this city at present. New residences are springing up on every side. Old industrial concerns are enlarging their plants and new ones are locating here. In the business section, there is activity. The handsomest building in the city is being rebuilt after partial destruction by fire. Another new business block has only recently been started. Empty stores are very few and far between.

It is pleasing to know that the prosperity which is so general throughout the country is equally in evidence here. As a matter of fact, it seems more evident here than in many of the other cities of the State. New Jersey can boast of few cities indeed that are enjoying the material and healthy prosperity that has come to Plainfield. The city's excellent government, its attractive location and the desirable character of the vast majority of its inhabitants all combine to assist in the permanent growth of the place. It has been growing steadily and will continue to do so but this appears to be a period when the growth is considerably accelerated.

In another column will be found some interesting facts concerning the remarkable building boom which appears to be at its height. As the borough has no building inspector or building ordinance which compels the issuance of permits, it is impossible to obtain like facts concerning that municipality. There has been some building there as well but not to as great an extent as in Plainfield. The building operations there have been largely confined to the erection of new residences of which a number have sprung up. It is all good news and right welcome and serves to show as we have often declared that when the people can be brought here there is no difficulty in securing them for permanent residents, for it has been the increase in the population which has made so many of these new building necessary.

GAME IS PLENTIFUL.

Not for many years have the hunters of New Jersey found game so plentiful as it is reported to be this year. Not only is there plenty to be seen but hardly an enthusiast of the gun goes forth who does not return with his game bag more or less filled. Some are more expert than others while luck has its favorites but they all manage to bag something. Stories of wonderful trips are therefore numerous.

Just exactly why game should be more plentiful this year than in previous years is a hard thing to explain. It is undoubtedly a fact, however. Plainfield has supplied even more than its usual quota of hunters and all seem to have met with more than the usual luck. The poor cottontail is quite numerous in the fields just outside the city and he and hundreds of his little brothers have been brought down. Quail and partridge are not as rare as one might expect. It is through the counties of Somerset, Hunterdon and Warren that the hunters' paradise appears to exist. From these counties come the greatest tales of remarkable results of sundry expeditions.

With the exception of the accidental shooting of the South Bound Brook lad, the hunting season has been singularly free from accidents in this part of the State. With so many hunters out, many of whom are undoubtedly inexperienced in handling firearms, it is wonderful that more people are not killed or maimed for life.

FINAL FAREWELL TO AN HONORED MEMORY

Funeral Services of Charles Graves Held From Church of the Heavenly Rest.

WINFIELD SCOTT POST, G. A. R., WAS PRESENT IN A BODY AT THE CHURCH.

And Conducted the Services at the Cemetery—Were Many Beautiful Floral Tributes—The Veterans Served as the Pallbearers.

The Church of the Heavenly Rest was filled to overflowing Monday afternoon when the funeral services of the late Charles Graves were held. It was solemn and impressive testimony to an exemplary Christian life and each one felt that Mr. Graves' death was a distinct loss not only to the church, of which he was a devoted member, but to the community as well.

The services were conducted by Rev. Harris C. Rush, rector of the church, and in connection with the regular funeral service of the Episcopal church, he spoke a few earnest words of the life and character of Mr. Graves.

There were selections by the church choir consisting of Mrs. E. E. Brown, Miss Jennie Wenzel, Mrs. Lizzie Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Morgan, Juan A. Babcock and John Thompson. Garret T. Dunham presided at the organ. The choir sang "Abide With Me," "O Paradise, O Paradise," and "Rest, Spirit Rest."

The members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of which Mr. Graves was a member, attended the services and at the grave conducted the Post memorial service. This was in charge of Commander J. F. Berg, assisted by Mr. H. Dobbins, who acted as chaplain, and Francis A. Whitely, H. C. Smith and H. C. Corsa. There was the salute at the grave by the firing squad and the final sounding of taps. The Independent Fife and Drum Corps acted as an escort for the Post and played the funeral march.

There were a great many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends, including a cross, bearing the word "Papa," from the children, a large bunch of chrysanthemums from the Woman's Guild, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, a pillow from Post, No. 73, G. A. R., a wreath from the Woman's Relief Corps, and a large number of cut flowers, including lilies from other friends.

The firing squad, members of Post No. 73, G. A. R., included the following: John Vail, E. M. Devine, Preston B. Goodfellow, Israel Compton, Jas. Beglin, William Haud and M. Wagner. They were in charge of Officer of the Guard Albert Perry. The pall-bearers were also from the Post and were as follows: T. O. Doane, W. C. Smith, Louis Willett, Job Coddington, Fred Wendell and M. C. Dobbins. The interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

FUNERAL OF A. D. HOBBIE.

Services Held at Residence of His Brother on Watchung Avenue.

The funeral services of the late Alonzo D. Hobbie were held Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home of his brother, William F. Hobbie, 1303 Watchung Avenue. Rev. Mr. Jones, formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church, at Bayonne, conducted the services and he made a short impressive address.

There was a very large number of floral tributes. The pall-bearers, all members of the Calliopian Club, of New York, of which Mr. Hobbie was a member, for many years, were N. Trask, of Bayonne; C. H. Beach, of New York; Charles Jones, Frank T. Ostrom, D. C. Ivins and E. H. Booth, of Plainfield. The interment was in Hillside cemetery.

Long Water Main.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company is just about finishing the laying of a six-inch water pipe about a mile long which will supply the new residence of Francis Hyde near the Park Golf Club, and a number of other houses which he intends erecting in the near future. The pipe is almost a mile long, it being over 4,000 feet in length.

Well Pleased With Preacher.

Prof. Thomas Hall, of Union Theological Seminary, who is occupying the pulpit at the Crescent Avenue church, this month, is attracting considerable attention for his excellent discourses and fine oratorical ability. He has been delivering a series of three special sermons, the last of which will be given Sunday. The congregations of late have been unusually large and considerable interest manifested in the sermons delivered.

Frank Ranrand, of Philadelphia, has been visiting relatives in this city for a time.

GREAT BUILDING BOOM IS NOW IN PROGRESS IN THIS CITY

There Are Seventy-Seven New Buildings Now in Course of Erection in Plainfield Today.

BESIDES ALTERATIONS BEING MADE

IT IS GREATEST RUSH THE CITY HAS KNOWN SINCE THE PRESENT ORDINANCE WAS PUT INTO FORCE.

Not Only Are Handsome Residences Springing Up On All Sides, But Industrial Concerns Have Erected New Factories and Great Business Blocks Are Rising in Centre of Town—Thousands of Dollars Are Being Spent Daily in the Various Building Trades.

Plainfield has enjoyed the reputation of being the most progressive city of its size in this State and the great progress made in the building industries in this locality during the past year or more bears out this reputation fully. Known far and wide as a city of handsome residences and fine streets it is but natural that progress should be made but the records in the office of Building Inspector T. O. Doane show that during the past year there have been more new building erected than in any year of the past decade.

The new buildings have not been residences only but new stores have been erected and on the outskirts of the town immense industrial plants have been rearing their tall chimneys skyward and already the hum of rolling wheels and the clang of machinery can be heard behind the long brick walls. These new factories have been locating along the railroad tracks and consequently have not marred the beauties of the city as a residential community. Intead, they have increased the industrial importance of the city to a marked degree.

During the past year there have been more buildings erected in this city than at any time since the building ordinance went into force. At present there are seventy-seven buildings in course of erection within the city limits which is not inclusive of the thousands of dollars which are being spent on alterations and improvements to dwellings and stores which are not extensive enough to have a building permit issued.

Within a year a little less than a million dollars has been spent on building and improvements in this city. A person may go from one end of the city to the other and on every hand he will see indications of the great activity in the building industries. New building are springing up on every side. From the extreme West End to the pretty environments of Netherwood one may hear the noise of the carpenter's hammer and the scrape of the stone mason's trowel as new residences are being erected for new comers into this city.

A few of the more expensive houses taken at random from the list in the possession of the Building Inspector, which are now in course of construction may be interesting of note. J. C. Manning has built four handsome residences during the past year each valued at about $10,000, which he has sold to out-of-town people who have moved their families here. Then there is the handsome residence which was started last winter at Netherwood for W. W. Alpaugh. Another is the fine dwelling built and completed this year at the corner of Watchung and Kensington avenues for S. A. Ginna. The handsome addition to the house of Mrs. Ruth Lounsbury on LaGrande avenue and the handsome stable attached are now one of the show places of the town.

Another extensive building which is now in the course of construction and can be pointed to as an indication of the progressiveness of the town, is the new Muhlenberg Hospital. This building is already one of the principal points of interest in this city.

C. L. Moffett is building a handsome new residence on Park avenue which is rapidly nearing completion, and at the corner of West Eighth street and Arlington avenue another fine new residence is being erected for H. G. Squires. N. B. Smith's new home on the corner of Madison and Stella avenues, is also rapidly nearing a tenantable condition.

These are only a few of the handsome homes now rearing their graceful walls skyward. Other structures are in course of construction in the city which are doing their part toward increasing the industrial importance of Plainfield.

Last year the Scott Press Works secured a permit for a large two story addition to their already extensive plant which was completed this summer. The Hibbard-Rodman-Ely Safe Works are also adding four mammoth factories to their plant which means an outlay of many thousands of dollars and then there is the Pederick-Ayres Company, iron workers, who are also erecting great factories to meet the growing demands of their business. Other concerns which are building plants in addition to their present factories are the Pond Tool Works, and the "old oil cloth factory" *and the Crescent Embossing Com*pany.

These mills, extensive as they are, have not taken from the city the reputation of being a desirable residential town. Instead, they have been the means of helping the city to grow by bringing to the merchants of the community an increase of business and thus adding a commercial importance to the town as is evidenced by the extensive improvements being made on East Front street where one of the most important concerns of the town is building a handsome new store.

The store of Woodbull & Martin, the foundation of which has already been built, when completed, will be one of the handsomest in the county and means an outlay of over $50,000. The improvements to the Babcock building, the most attractive business block in the city, are now underway at a cost of over $100,000.

The churches in the city have also felt the activity in the building boom and the Swedish church, at the corner of West Sixth and New streets, which has been in the course of construction for almost a year, is practically completed and will be opened Sunday, November 30. The banks have also benefitted from the gradual growth of the city and within the past year the building on East Front street, where the Plainfield Trust Company is now located, has been remodeled and is now one of the principal banking houses in the town.

Each day new building permits are granted by the Inspector which show that the boom is not a temporary one and shows also that the city of Plainfield has started to grow so that within the next ten years it may rank in the State but one of the principal industrial and commercial centres in this part of New Jersey.

THE MOTORMAN NOT TO BLAME

Coroner's Jury Decided Yesterday That He Was Not Responsible for Accident.

SHARP WAS RELEASED

Testimony Was Taken Before the Jury—Sharp's Witnesses Held That Van Driver Was Asleep and That Slippery Rails Were Responsible for Collision.

Eugene Sharp, the trolley motorman in charge of the car which struck a van on West Front street, Wednesday night, causing the death of Emil Amiet, of Bound Brook, was discharged from custody, Monday afternoon. A jury, empanelled by Coroner Livengood for the purpose, listened to testimony in regard to the case and after a brief deliberation decided Sharp was not culpable for the fatality. They held a failure of the brakes to work on the slippery track as responsible for the accident and not any negligence on the motorman's part. The jury was composed of Charles DeGraw, foreman, Morris Abrams, John J. Kenney, Jere Foss, Stephen Schlief and Frank Linke. Police headquarters was the scene of the hearing.

The witnesses examined at the hearing were Dr. J. C. Gaston, who lives opposite where the accident occurred and who examined Amiet's form immediately after; Carlos C. Gallup, Aaron Levine, conductor of the car, Dr. Albert Pittis, who also examined the body immediately after death ensued, County Physician F. W. Westcott, Patrolman Andrew Saffron, Robert McAfee, John King, owner of the truck, Edward C. Hobby and Miss Cora Willet. Prosecutor N. C. *J. English called for the direct testi*mony on behalf of the State, while cross examination was made by As*semblyman William Newcorn, repre*senting Sharp. Attorney W. R. Codington was also present in behalf of the victim's widow.

Assemblyman Newcorn's evident intention from the start was to show that Amiet was asleep when his van was struck. Valuable witnesses to this effect were McAfee, Hobby and Miss Willett, who all saw the vehicle just before the collision and testified that Amiet had every appearance of one in slumber. The latter two were particular about his appearance and asked by Prosecutor English, as to why they had taken special notice of an ordinary van, related an incident that removed all doubt as to their sincerity.

"You see," said Hobby, "this girl put her hand on my shoulder and I said: 'Look out, there's a man on that wagon' ".

"Did she 'look out?' " asked the prosecutor. The witness replied in the affirmative while the spectators laughed.

Patrolman Saffron, who saw the van as it passed Front street and Park avenue, averred that the man was awake, but he was the only one who so testified.

Nothing of importance regarding the blame was gleaned from any of the other witnesses excepting Levine, the conductor. In his statement he claimed to have heard the motorman sound the gong and felt a reversal of the power twenty seconds before the crash occurred. On alighting from the car, he said, the motorman remarked that he had done all he could to avoid the collision but that the slippery tracks prevented. Testimony revealed this was the case, as the night was damp and wet leaves were on the rails. It was this fact that evidently influenced the jury in its decision.

In summing up Prosecutor English defined for the benefit of the jury the purpose of holding the coroner's hearing. It was not, he said, to try anybody but merely to determine where the responsibility rested for the accident. If Sharp had been originally negligent, he continued, then he was culpable for involuntary manslaughter, otherwise he was blameless. The jury retired with this admonition and returned with its verdict in about thirty minutes.

INTRODUCED TO SOCIETY

RECEPTION GIVEN TO MRS. JOHN W. KIRKNER LAST SATURDAY.

Tendered by Mrs. Jacob Kirkner—A Charming Social Affair at Mrs. Kirkner's Residence.

To formally introduce her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John W. Kirkner, to Plainfield society, Mrs. Jacob Kirkner tendered a reception at her West Eighth street home, Saturday afternoon, from 3 until 6. Fully 300 guests were in attendance.

The receiving party consisted of Mrs. Jacob Kirkner, Miss May Kirkner and Mrs. John W. Kirkner and they were assisted by Mrs. J. Casper Kirkner and Miss Ethel Colyer, of New York, the latter a sister of Mrs. John M. Kirkner, Mrs. Theodore Wilson, Miss Louise Gifford, Mrs. Joseph W. Sandford, Mrs. Ellis Hedges, Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, Mrs. Leonidas Dennis, Mrs. E. N. Erickson, Mrs. Julius Erickson, the Misses Fritts and Miss Elsie Harmon.

In decorating good taste was decidedly apparent. The dining and reception rooms were a mass of pink carnations, set off by palms and smilax. In the parlor chrysanthemums were used exclusively and the contrast was striking.

FELL IN FRONT OF A CAR

QUICKWITTED MOTORMAN STOPPED CAR JUST IN TIME.

A Three-Year-Old Child Ran Into Path of Car and Fell Beneath Fender.

Presence of mind on the part of Mark Hipp, a motorman on the Dunellen-Netherwood trolley line, is all that prevented the life of Sarah Nolan, the three-year-old child of Andrew Nolan, of East Front street, from being crushed out beneath the wheels of a car, Saturday afternoon. In her anxiety to get to a candy store to spend a penny, she ran directly into the fender of Hipp's car as it was passing her home.

She was struck by the fender and knocked down but at the same instant the quick-witted motorman reversed the power, bringing the conveyance to a stop with a jerk that sent passengers in a confused heap. A few feet more and the wheels would have passed over her form as she had slipped beneath the fender.

The child was picked up and taken home, more frightened than hurt. She still complains of a pain in the back but it is thought to be a mere bruise. Hipp's action was warmly commended by all who witnessed it but he modestly declined to accept any praise.

FUNERAL OF GEORGE SCHROPPE.

Services From His Home and St. Joseph's Church This Morning.

The funeral of the late George Schroppe, who died at his home on Jackson avenue, Saturday, took place on Monday from his late residence at 8 o'clock and from St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock when Rev. Father Miller said mass over the remains and preached a sermon in which he eulogized the deceased. After the service the remains were borne to the grave by his six grandsons: George, Frank and John Rickert, William Schroppe and William and Charles Hartfelder. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

INCREASED THE PRICE.

Charge for Private Rooms at Muhlenberg Hospital Has Been Raised.

Notification has been given to physicians that on and after December 1 the charge for private rooms at Muhlenberg Hospital will be $20 a week, instead of $15 as heretofore. Just why the increased rate is adopted is not understood by many physicians who have received notice of the change. For some time past the number of private rooms has not been sufficient for the demands as a rule. Only a week ago one physician was obliged to place two of his patients in the ward because he could not get private rooms.

THANKSGIVING PROGRAMME.

Is Now Being Arranged at the Borough High School.

A programme is being prepared by Miss Susie Glass, assisted by the teachers of the Borough High School for the closing day exercises at that school on November 26, when the Thanksgiving vacation begins. Miss Ethel Whaley, the instructor in music at the school, is preparing an excellent musical programme for the occasion. The exercises will be of a patriotic order and the pupils of the entire school will take part.

T. A. B. Reception.

The T. A. B. Society is making arrangements for an invitation reception and dance to be held Thanksgiving Eve. It will be held in the society's hall on West Fourth street.

ESCAPED FROM BURNING HOME

Mrs. John W. Mulholland and Her Daughters Fled in Night Robes From Blazing House.

THE RESIDENCE GUTTED

A Midnight Blaze Practically Destroyed a Washington Park Residence—The Loss Will Amount to $16,000—Partially Insured—Occupants Escaped in Time.

Awakened early Tuesday with the room full of suffocating smoke and the roar of hungry flames ascending the staircase, Miss Eleanor Mulholland rushed into the apartments where her mother and sister were sleeping at their home at 93 Rockview avenue, aroused them and led them in their night robes through fire and smoke down a winding back stairs to safety, stopping only long enough to grab up some clothing. Such were the experiences of Mrs. John W. Mulholland and her two daughters, Mrs. J. H. Bacon and Miss Eleanor Mulholland, this morning, when a fire broke out at their home at 12:30 and completely gutted the house.

The fire evidently started in the cellar from a furnace flue and ate its way up through the flooring to the reception room and from there to the living apartments at the top floor where it was discovered by Miss Mulholland just in time to enable her to arouse her mother and sister, who are both quite deaf, and lead them to safety. As soon as she had seen that her mother had been placed in the care of neighbors she rushed in her night robes to the home of J. L. Watson, where a telephone message was sent in to the Warren Engine Company. There was no one in the house at the time and the telephone bell was only heard some minutes later by Marshal Adelman who turned in an alarm from a neighboring box.

When the firemen arrived at the scene it was found necessary to have *assistance so the West End Hose Com*pany was sent for. The firemen saved the house of J. L. Watson, which was already smoking, and the house of J. M. Pitman, next door. The fire burned fiercely for four hours.

There was only one accident reported. Walter Bennett, a fireman who was carrying a length of hose up a ladder, fell through the rungs of the ladder and, slipping, fell to the rafters below where he caught his chin on a nail and was severely cut.

The long fight in the face of the terrific heat made the firemen exhausted and A. Overton, whose house is near by, made some coffee and served it to the men. W. H. Debele, the milk dealer, had some coffee made and brought it to the scene of the fire in his delivery wagon.

The house, which is almost totally destroyed, is owned by Mrs. Mulholland, and is about two thirds covered by insurance. The firemen returned to the headquarters at 5 o'clock and at 6 o'clock they were again called out by a still alarm to quench a fire in the rafters. The total loss will be about $16,000. A little dog lost its life in the flames.

MAKER OF HARNESS SUCCUMBS TO DISEASE

Wm. H. B. Drake, a Well-Known Citizen Passed Away Last Evening at His Home.

ILL FOR FOUR WEEKS

HAD SPENT HIS LIFE OF SIXTY-FIVE YEARS IN PLAINFIELD.

Save for the Time He Served as a Volunteer in the Civil War—At His Request Pythian Knights Will Conduct the Funeral.

Wm. Henry Bryant Drake, a well-known citizen, died Monday evening about 6:30 o'clock at his home in Orchard place, after an illness of four weeks, the last two of which he was confined to his bed. Early this year Mr. Drake was critically ill. He recovered for a time and was able to attend business. His death was due to a complication of diseases which baffled the skill of the physician.

Mr. Drake was born in Plainfield sixty-five years ago and, with the exception of the time he was in the Civil War, he lived here all his life. At the age of seventeen years he went with Thomas Worth, the harness-maker. He learned that trade and followed it up to the time of his illness. He was probably one of the best known harness-makers in this vicinity.

When the Civil War broke out Mr. Drake enlisted at Perth Amboy in *Company I, Twenty-eighth New Jer*sey Volunteers, and he saw considerable service. He was married just prior to the war. He was a faithful member of the First Baptist church. He was also a very active member of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, and a member of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men and Whitfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R.

Mr. Drake leaves a wife and one son, Arthur Drake; also one sister, Miss Hannah Drake, the only one left of a family of ten children. The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock and, as it was Mr. Drake's request that Perseverance Lodge conduct the service, this will be followed out.

Dance at Park Club.

There will be a dance at the Park Club Thanksgiving Eve, the event being the second in the series of affairs arranged by the entertainment committee.

POPULAR YOUNG FOLK MARRIED IN CHURCH

Miss Mabel Adele Woodruff Became the Wife of Harry Sloat Potter Thursday.

AT TRINITY CHURCH

CHARMING CHURCH WEDDING WAS LARGELY ATTENDED.

Those Who Made Up Bridal Party—Ceremony Performed by Rev. Dr. Schenck—Reception at Bride's Home Followed Ceremony.

A brilliant affair of early winter was that of last Thursday when Miss Mabel Adele Woodruff, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Woodruff, of 212 East Second street, and Harry Sloat Potter, of Duer street, North Plainfield, were married in Trinity Reformed church in the presence of a large and fashionable throng of relatives and friends from this city and distant points. It was the union of two popular young people, who for sometime have been identified with many events of both church and society interests and the details were carried out with elaborate effect.

It was a white and green wedding and the color scheme was attractively brought out through the use of palms, ferns, smilax and a profusion of white chrysanthemums. These plants and flowers were banked about the pulpit platform.

The hour set for the event was 7:30, and some time before that every seat in the edifice was filled with guests. While they were awaiting the arriving of the bridal party, Howard Case, organist of the First Baptist church, rendered a programme of select music. Exactly at the appointed time the bridal party reached the church and their entrance was announced by the introduction to the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin. All eyes were turned in the one direction as the party proceeded up the main aisle.

The ushers, Edgar I. Serrell, John G. McLaughlin, William Slape, Percy Dayton, of Plainfield; Neil Potter, of Metuchen, a cousin of the groom; and C. H. Florandin, of Westfield, led the way, followed by the flower girl, Miss Helen Schley, of Orange. Then came the maid-of-honor, Miss Evelyn Taylor, of Philadelphia. Following the maid-of-honor, was the bride, accompanied by her father.

While these members of the party were wending their way to the altar, the groom and his best man, Robert Vail, of Hackettstown, entered from the pastor's study and all were met at the altar by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., pastor of the church, who performed the ceremony according to the ritual of the Reformed church. In this a ring was used and the responses were given in a distinct voice.

The gown worn by the bride was an exquisite one of peau de cynge, trimmed with duchesse lace, a much prized heir-loom. She also wore a veil caught up with tiny lace butterflies mounted on fine spiral wires and she carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and bride roses.

The maid-of-honor was gowned in nile green crepe with iridescent trimmings, and she carried pink chrysanthemums. The flower girl wore a gown of white lace over nile green silk. She carried a basket of carnations which were strewn along the pathway of the bride after the ceremony was over.

Immediately after the solemn vows were taken, the bride and groom, followed by the other members of the party, left the church. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, where several hundred guests gathered to offer their hearty congratulations and well-wishes to the happy couple. The home was prettily decorated to receive the newly-wedded pair and their friends. The principal colors, green and white, were to be seen in the spacious parlors, where Mr. and Mrs. Potter received. In the hallway smilax was used with good effect, while in the library, where an orchestra discovered an attractive programme of music, the decorations consisted of cedar and autumn leaves. The dining-room also presented the colors of green and white.

During the hours of the reception, the guests were invited to inspect the handsome array of costly and elegant presents. There was a large collection, including furniture, silver and gold ware, cut glass, oil paintings, fancy work, banquet lamps and many other gifts of use and beauty. The popularity of the couple was evidenced through these magnificent gifts.

A delightful feature of the reception was the elaborate supper served after congratulations were given. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Potter left their friends to enjoy a wedding trip. Upon their return they will take up their residence with the bride's parents on East Second street.

The bride is a most estimable young woman and is actively engaged in many of the departments of work at Trinity Reformed church. The groom, who is the son of Reuben Potter, of Oak Tree, is also well-known and popular in a large circle of friends and acquaintances. He is president of the M. A. Lawton Company, of New York, electric supplies. In the happy exchange of gifts the bride gave the maid-of-honor a gold necklace with pearl pendants and to the flower girl she gave a bonbonniere. The groom's gifts to his best man and ushers were stick pins.

A gift of great value received by the bride was that of a book containing the autographs of a host of her friends and expressing some pleasant words of congratulatory nature. It is in the nature of a birthday book and the unique idea was conceived by the bride's mother. The book has been passing among friends since last March and was complete when presented last evening, a total surprise to Mrs. Potter.

An ingenious plan was laid by the bride and groom for their escape from the guests who were closely watching for this opportunity to give them a good send-off. The bride made an excuse to go to the kitchen. While there she put on rubbers and rubbers and went out the back way, through a fence, where the boards had been removed, and to the home of Mr. Enander, on Watchung avenue. There she was joined by her husband. At Mr. Enander's home she changed her wedding gown for a travelling one. A coach was standing on Watchung avenue waiting for them and as they drove off, the guests were still looking for the couple. No one had the slightest idea when they were and the couple escaped many pranks planned for their departure.

STAMPS OF NEW DESIGN

THEY WILL SOON, HOWEVER, BE PUT INTO GENERAL CIRCULATION.

Bear the American Flag and the New Picture of George Washington.

There will be received at the Plainfield postoffice in a few days a new series of postage stamps which have been designed and approved by the postoffice department and will soon be in general circulation. The present red two-cent stamp will be retired and a more artistic stamp will take its place. The American flag will be used in the design for the first time since 1869, and Houdon's profile of Washington, so long in use, will give way to Gilbert Stoart's famous painting of "The Father of Our Country." On the new stamp the likeness of Washington will be the most distinctive feature, occupying the central oval, which will be slightly smaller than the current issue. Above the oval in a panel will be the inscription, "United States of America." Occupying about two-thirds of the length on either side will be seen the American flag draped, forming a background on which the oval appears to rest. Below the bust will appear the name "Washington," in small figures in each corner the date of his birth and death.

The Stuart picture of Washington has not been used since 1847, when it formed the basis of the 10-cent stamp used in that year. The Washington design with its changing denominations continued until 1869, when it gave way to the Houdon profile of Washington, which appeared first on the three-cent issue.

When the American flag was used in the issue of 1869 it was on a denomination seldom seen, the 30-cent denomination. Petitions have been received for many years back from the postal department asking that the flag be used in the next design of stamps, but it is understood that mechanical difficulties prevented a compliance with this apparently general request. It was especially urged in connection with the Columbian series of 1893 and with other world's fair sets. The flag design on postage stamps is frequently seen on the postage of republics. The Boers, the Hawaiians, Haytians, Cubans and others of the South and Central American republics give prominent places on their stamp to the national emblem.

LITERARY.

The new story by Alice Caldwell Hegan, author of "Mr. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," will begin in the December Century. It is named from one of its characters, "Lovey Mary," an inmate of a charitable institution who is said to have as many interesting characteristics as Mrs. Wiggs. She runs away and becomes an inmate of the "Cabbage Patch," so that Mrs. Wiggs and her children, with Miss Hazy, Chris and the rest, become characters in the new story, which is said to be fully up to the merit of its author's previous success. For seven consecutive months "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" has been among the six best-selling books in the United States.

Queen of the Night.

That a large proportion of creatures with gorgeous wings were not made for man's special delectation is proved by the fact that so many of our most beautiful moths fly only at night. Therefore is it that he who, in an afternoon ramble, discovers the great Luna moth clinging to some twig like a splendid leaf, always regards the event as an original discovery, and less aptly believe that no one ever had such an experience before. So perfectly does its color protect it from enemies is to its best shilling place that it is rarely found in daylight, although it is a very common insect. At night it may more often be seen hovering near a light like the ghost of some great passion flower, and in piring the beholder with a thrill of wider that is akin to awe. Viewed closely, it is easy to understand why this moth has been called "queen of the night;" the ermine-clothed body, the green robe bordered with purple and crimson, the shoulders with spots and prolonged into a train, all indicate royalty.—Country Life in America.

Shaving Mules in the South.

Martha McCulloch-Williams, in the course of the narrative of "Next to the Ground," explains many customs and superstitions peculiar to the negroes. Not the least interesting of these is the reason given for the shearing of mules. "Mules are shorn instead of shearing mules." Mrs. Williams writes, "Dan was an artist. He had spent two hours or more at it the day before. Manes were trimmed to half-inch upstanding fringe, and tails banged to a perfect tassel tip, even the ears had been shorn of their long inner hairs. Dan had a firm faith in witches. Now, a witch, it is well known, cannot ride a horse or mule unless the ears are hairy enough to twist into a stirrup. Dan had not left a single long one—hence he was satisfied the teams would thrive and stand up to their work, not to name being ever so much more bidable, as witches, working unhindered, put the devil into even the best broke of them."

Keeping Things Tidy.

"Marie," said Culberson, in a tone of forced patience, "I do wish you would keep this room a little more tidy Seems to me things are always lying about in the middle of the floor."

"I'll try, dear," said Mrs. Culberson, meekly.

That night Mrs. Culberson took tea with a cousin. When she returned she found Culberson raging about in a vain search for his dressing gown.

"This is a pretty state of affairs!" he began. "Here I come home and can't find my slippers, nor my paper, nor my pipe, nor my glasses, nor anything else. When I left this morning they were here all right."

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Culberson, "they were in the middle of the floor. I think if you will look in the cupboard and on the writing desk and the parlor table, you will find them all safe."

And they were safe.—Chicago Journal.

International Bird Protection.

An international agreement for the protection of birds useful to agriculture was concluded in Paris this spring. The powers in the agreement are Belgium, France, Greece, Austria, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland and Spain, and a few smaller states. All birds useful to agriculture to enjoy unconditional protection, and the destruction of their nests and eggs is prohibited. Certain other birds are named as mischievous. Sporting rights are protected. Italy, a country in which the capture of migratory songbound birds is a regular trade, does not appear as of the treaty signers.—N. Y. Sun.

Keeping Within the Law.

"Are you sure this automobilist was going faster than the law allows?" asked the judge.

"Absolutely certain, yer honor," replied the policeman.

"But it is possible to be mistaken on such a point."

"Not in this case, yer honor. It was going so fast that Ald. Clancey, who was trying to pass him, couldn't do it, and he was driving a trotter what does his mile on the road right along in 2:13 and better."—Automobile Magazine.

Has a Big Salary.

The lord chancellor of Ireland, says a correspondent of the Law Times, is probably the most highly paid holder of judicial office in the empire. His salary is £8,000 per annum. The lord chancellor of England gets £10,000, but of this sum £4,000 is paid to him as speaker of the house of lords.—London Mail.

Willing to Pay.

"You are charged with killing two men while operating your automobile," said the magistrate.

"All right," replied the rich chauffeur, taking out his pocketbook, "how much are they worth apiece?"—Ohio State Journal.

Up on History.

"What other instance besides Mont Pelee have we of a fatal volcano?" asked the teacher.

"Th' wun wot killed Mr. Pompeii," replied the boy on the back seat.—Ohio State Journal.

Well-Paid Poet.

The highest price ever paid for a poem of 6,000 golden crowns paid to Sannazaro by the citizens of Venice for his eulogy on their city—a poem of six lines only.—Bookman.

A New Way for Some.

For some people a new moneymaking scheme would be the old-fashioned way of earning it.—Chicago Daily News.

ORGANIZING IN NEW JERSEY

LABOR UNIONS ARE TO BE GREATLY STRENGTHENED HERE.

Active Campaign Has Been Planned for All Parts of the State.

Labor organizations in this city and vicinity may shortly feel the influence of a new move which the American Federation of Labor has decided to adopt. It has for its aims the enrollment of every workman in a union representing his craft and the banding of them all together more strongly than has ever been accomplished.

To attain this end, State organizers will be placed at work, and every part of the State will be visited. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has sanctioned the movement and has advised the State leaders the best means of conducting a uniform campaign. National and International unions, whose trades are represented in New Jersey, have been asked to co-operate and assist in making unionism stronger than ever. As soon as satisfactory arrangements can be made competent organizers will be appointed and commence work.

ALARM TURNS ON LIGHTS

INVENTION OF A. C. ROGERS TRIED AT WEST END HOUSE.

Automatic Switch Which Lights the Engine House When Alarm Comes In.

There has recently been installed at the West End engine house, No. 3, an invention which though small in one sense, bids fair to be adopted by fire departments throughout the country. It is an automatic lighting switch, the idea emanating from the brain of A. C. Rogers, of East Fifth street, the patentee of numerous useful electric and other devices.

The switch is attached to the fire gong circuit and the instant an alarm is sounded on the house tappers, every electric light in the building is turned on. This not only saves the firemen taking time to throw the switches but would warn them of an alarm if for any cause the house gong should fail to resound.

Several experts have witnessed the working of the scheme and are loud in their praises of its efficiency. The present system was installed as an experiment but it universal adoption is but a matter of time, mainly from its simplicity and small cost.

This is only one of Inventor Rogers' devices which have attracted wide spread attention. Principal among the others are an improved fire alarm box, an automatic painting machine, a self-acting electric trolley switch and a cut-off attachment for automatic telephone pay stations. This latter is being considered by several telephone companies and so far has been found feasible. At the present time a person who uses an automatic pay-station, that is, a 'phone which registers the amount of money dropped in a box for the benefit of the operator, can talk over the time limit if not watched from the central office. The Rogers invention times the connection and the instant the allotted period paid for is completed, the connection is disengaged without human agency.

The young people have taken up their residence in New York City, convenient to the University of New York, where Mr. Jeffery is finishing an evening course in the school of commerce, accounting and finance.

WASHINGTON'S FACE IN STONE

Features Appear in a Rocky Wall on the Boston Post Road After a Blast.

Where the old Boston post road turns toward Orienta Point, just south of Mamaroneck, the rock adjoining the old Disbrow house was blasted away about 15 years ago to improve the grade, says the New York Tribune. A ragged, rocky wall now stands, and nothing peculiar was noticed in it until last August, when the wife of a well-known resident on the point, while driving to the village, suddenly saw the features of Washington in the stone. She looked again and again, and the more carefully she scrutinized the rock the more distinctly she saw the features of the father of his country.

The woman told her friends of her discovery, and they told others, and within a month all residents of Point and most of Mamaroneck had gazed upon the striking accidental likeness. It is not at all difficult to see when one is told it may be found there, and is in plain view for a distance of nearly 100 yards, or within one-fourth as many feet. The image is about six feet the longest way and about four the other way across.

The eyes, nose and mouth are naturally darker spots in the stone, which, being apparently softer than the remainder of the mass, broke out to a greater depth, so the image is there in bas-relief as well as in color. The outside of the face is almost perfectly formed by the edges of the broken rock. The image is best lighted from 12 o'clock until 12:30 on sunny days.

DEEP WELL BORINGS.

United States Geological Survey Has List of Many in This Country.

The deep well borings of the United States, made for water, oil and gas, are the subject of a statistical report by N. H. Darton, in the series of Water-Supply and Irrigation Papers of the United States geological survey. The list of deep wells is arranged by states, in alphabetical order, and appears in two pamphlets known as Water-Supply Papers Nos. 57 and 61. All wells 400 feet or over in depth are carefully listed. Depth, diameter, yield per minute, and other characteristics are given, and many instructive details are noted indicating for what purpose the borings were originally made, the character of the product obtained, and whether the wells are in use or abandoned. For the benefit of persons desiring more detailed information concerning wells in any particular region, references are given to the literature or other sources from which the data were obtained. The large product of natural gas in the east and the west, the enormous yield of oil in the wells of California, Texas and the east, and the considerable and indispensable water supply furnished by the deep wells on the plains and in the arid and humid states, make concise and accessible information on this subject of value for economic and scientific purposes.

BILLIARD MAN'S LAMENT.

The Craze for Ping-Pong Has Caused Billiard Halls to Be Deserted.

"Ping-pong has undone us," complained the proprietor of a well known Broadway billiard parlor the other day, reports the New York Times. "Look at those $1,500 billiard tables covered over with boards and turned into ping-pong tables. We had to do it to help out.

"Our customers grew fewer and fewer, and I was hardly making expenses. One day I saw several of my best patrons going into a place around the corner, and I read the reason on a cheap sign: 'Ping-pong, 50 cents an hour.'

"A fellow who couldn't get together enough capital to buy one billiard table had set up a lot of cheap wooden tables and was coining money running a ping-pong place. I surrendered. Carpenters came next day and fixed up half my fine billiard tables for ping-pong.

"Too bad, isn't it? I feel I ought to apologize ten times a day to every table. But my patrons are coming back. There's consolation in that."

To Free Palestine.

Plans for freeing Palestine from Moslem rule now take the shape not of an armed crusade, but of a peaceful crusade. The sultan is poor and the Christian nations are rich. The Christian world does not feel exactly easy in its mind to see the Holy City in the possession of the unbelieving Turk. The agitation for its redemption is not dead by any means. With all its quietness, it is gaining strength and enlisting the interest of people of wealth. It will not be surprising to see, some day, a powerful religio-commercial syndicate arise, which will use the resources of millions, ready to buy Palestine from the Turkish government and organize it into an independency under the protection of the great powers.

Electric Bath.

The electric bath is one of the newest things, although it isn't a bath at all. A thick robe is entwined with wires, and this is donned. Then a current of electricity is switched on, and the wearer of the electrical robe soon finds his body getting warmer, until in a little while he perspires as freely as if he were in a Turkish bath.

WEDDED AT BRIDE'S HOME

MARRIAGE OF MISS MABEL AUGUSTA MOORE AND CHARLES GEER.

Pretty Ceremony, Although Bride Was Unattended—Groom From New Brunswick.

A pretty home wedding was that of Miss Mabel Augusta Moore, daughter of Mrs. William H. Moore, to Charles Culver Geer, of New Brunswick, which took place Wednesday, Nov. 12, at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride on East Second street. The wedding was witnessed by a large number of friends and relatives of the contracting parties and the home was very handsomely decorated with palms and chrysanthemums, which gave the front rooms of the house a very attractive appearance.

Attired in a gown of white satin with trimmings to match the bride entered the parlors leaning on the arm of the bridegroom and together they marched to a corner of the room where the minister, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, tied the nuptial knot.

The bride was unattended and was given in marriage by her brother, William Moore. The best man was Ralph W. Christie and the usher was Arthur Moore, a cousin of the bride. The wedding marches were played by Harvey Patterson, of New York, a friend of both the bride and groom. After the ceremony had been performed a wedding supper was served after which a reception was held until train time when they were driven to the depot where they took a train for Ridgewood, N. J., where they will spend their honeymoon. They will reside in Somerville where the groom is employed in the carriage manufactory of Valentine & Van Fleet.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a meeting of the vestry of the Church of the Holy Cross, held on Monday, Nov. 3, 1902, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God, in His unerring wisdom, to take out of this world the soul of our deceased brother, Edward C. Perkins, a man highly honored and respected by all, a faithful communicant of the church and for many years a fellow-member and associate in the vestry; and

Whereas, Mr. Perkins, as an able lawyer and loyal friend of the parish freely gave his advice and services, always conserving its best interests and welfare, therefore be it

Resolved; That this vestry has heard of the death of our esteemed and honored member with profound sorrow, and that we desire to place upon record our sense of personal loss, our thorough appreciation of his uniform courtesy, his lovable character and signal ability and of the debt of gratitude which this parish will always owe to him and shall ever continue to cherish in our memory his strong personality, his kindly disposition and rare gifts.

Resolved; That these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of this vestry, that a copy be sent to the family and published in The Churchman and the Plainfield local papers.

James A. Alexander,
Committee of the Vestry.

GOING ON STAGE.

Local Talent Organizes a Vaudeville Company to Go on Road.

B. C. Firstbrook, F. M. Brown and Ira C. Bowers, all of this city, have joined forces and embarked in a theatrical enterprise of no mean proportions. They have formed an organization to be known as the Eastern Vaudeville Company, which will shortly begin a tour of the surrounding counties and perhaps eastern Pennsylvania. Rehearsals are now being held daily by members of the enterprise, who are mostly local artists, and the first performance will be given in Somerville December 7. Augustus Bowers has been elected advance representative of the concern.

DEATH OF CHARLES GR

OCCURRED AT HIS HOME ON LIB STREET FRIDAY EVENING.

Was One of Plainfield's Best Known Citizens—Member of G. A. R. and Church of the Heavenly Rest.

In the death of Charles Graves, which occurred shortly before 8 o'clock, Friday night, at his home on Liberty street, another one of Plainfield's best citizens is taken away. Mr. Graves was taken suddenly ill two weeks ago Monday night after a trip to Jamesburg, with pneumonia and other complications. The best medical aid failed to bring relief and from the first he suffered intense pain. He was patient through it all and never complained.

Mr. Graves was born in Wraggle, near Boston, Lincolnshire, England, sixty-seven years ago. During his younger days he learned the trade of slating and he followed this business with few exceptions until eight years ago, when he retired. He came to this country when about 21 years of age, and first went to Philadelphia for a short time. He then went to Newark, and it was in the latter place that he lived when the Civil War broke out. He enlisted as a private in Co. I, 26th N. J. Vols., the same regiment of which M. C. Dobbins, of this city, was a member. The two knew each other by sight at that time, but it was not until after the war that they became warm friends on coming to Plainfield.

In 1865 Mr. Graves married Miss Ella A. Kidger, and they lived in Newark for a time. From there they went to Somerville, where Mr. Graves continued his business as a slater for three years. From there he moved to Plainfield, where he lived the rest of his life. Mr. Graves had a host of friends. He was a man of sterling character and a sincere Christian. He was a trustee of the Church of the Heavenly Rest and was deeply interested in the affairs of that church, being a substantial contributor to its maintenance. Mr. Graves was also a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 78, G. A. R., and at times held various offices in the organization. He was interested in the success of the Post and did all he could for its advancement.

Surviving Mr. Graves is a wife, and four children. The latter are Charles C. Graves, Miss Mary A. Graves, Miss Kate E. Graves and George F. Graves; also three brothers, one in England and two in Australia. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon with a short service at the house, followed by another one at the Church of the Heavenly Rest. The interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

ELABORATE STABLE.

A permit was granted Mrs. Eleanor C. Stewart, of 563 West Eighth street, yesterday, by the building inspector, to erect on her property on West Eighth street a stable which will be 42x80 feet. The stable will be a very handsome one and will cost about $8,000. The architects are Tracy & Swartout, of New York, and the masonry will be done by Tallamy Brothers, of this city. The contracting carpenter is John Abbott, also of this city.

A frame building will be erected at 286 Jackson avenue by W. B. Bohl, of 720 Kensington avenue. The architect is Mr. Bohl who will also do the carpentering work. The contracting mason is Walter J. Mundy.

District Meeting.

There will be a Knights of Pythias district meeting in Perseverance Lodge rooms Friday evening, November 28, at which time all the Grand Lodge officers will be present.

To Publish Sermons.

The work of compiling for publication the sermons delivered by Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, while he was pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, is now underway. It is expected that they will be on sale within a short time.

Avoid all drying inhalants and use that which cleanses and heals the membrane. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and cures Catarrh easily and pleasantly. Cold in the head vanishes quickly. Price 50 cents at druggists or by mail.

Catarrh caused difficulty in speaking and to a great extent loss of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm dropping of mucus has ceased, voice and hearing have greatly improved.—J. W. Davidson, Att'y at Law, Monmouth, Ill.

—Lewis Goldstein, of Watchung avenue, entered the draughting department at the Pond Tool Works today.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, of the First Baptist church, is arranging to give a social in the church on the Tuesday evening before Thanksgiving Day.

ANNUAL HARVEST HOME HELD FOR HOSPITAL

Affair Held at Nurses' Home of Muhlenberg Hospital Thursday Afternoon.

THE FRIENDS GENEROUS

GUESTS WERE RECEIVED BY FRIENDS OF THE HOSPITAL.

Light Refreshments Served—Those Who Assisted—Affair in Charge of the Women's Auxiliary of the Hospital.

The fourth annual harvest home under the auspices of Muhlenberg Hospital, was held Thursday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock in the Nurses' Home of that institution, and it was without a doubt the most successful of any previous affair of the kind.

All friends of the hospital were most generous in their contributions of money and provisions and especially so were the teachers and pupils in the public schools. The teachers of the Franklin School combined in their contributions, and in many other instances this was done. Especially noteworthy was the contribution of the Needlework Guild, the members giving 215 garments, including sheets, pillow cases, towels. This donation, as well as all others, are greatly appreciated by those in charge of the hospital.

The donations of provisions exceed those given heretofore. They include all kinds of canned goods, cereals, jellies, preserves, potatoes, apples, and many articles too numerous to mention. They were piled up in the large room at the Nurses' Home, and made a pretty showing. There were many barrels of apples and potatoes which were put in the basement at the hospital and could not be displayed owing to lack of room. It is expected that other donations will be received today.

The decorations at the home were attractive. They were arranged by the committee of which Mrs. William Pelletier is the chairman, and consisted entirely of American and English flags prettily draped about the various rooms and hallways.

During the afternoon tea and cake was served to the large number of guests who called to leave their donations and show their interest in the hospital. Miss Elizabeth Cock, president of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Governors of the Hospital, had general supervision of the affair, while the other members of the auxiliary assisted.

Mr. R. A. Hegeman, Jr., presided at the table and assisting her were Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., Mrs. Herman A. Schwed, Mrs. A. G. Hooley, Mrs. F. H. Andrews, Mrs. Thomas Mingford, Mrs. Emil Woltmann and Mrs. W. A. Pinto. Miss Love and Miss Mumford also assisted in serving tea. Mrs. Daniel T. VanBuren, an active member and earnest worker in the auxiliary, assisted in receiving the guests and making them acquainted with the work of the hospital.

PREPARING FOR CONCERT.

Y. M. C. A. Orchestra Will Attempt Something More Elaborate.

The preparations for the orchestral recital at the Young Men's Christian Association are occupying much of the attention of those who are rehearsing the orchestra for the event. The music this year will differ from that rendered at previous recitals in that the selections will be more classical, most of the music being from the great composers. Mrs. F. M. Ward, the soloist at the First Baptist church, has consented to sing at the recital, and those who have not heard her will no doubt embrace this opportunity of doing so.

New Resident.

C. C. Cummings, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, of New York, has rented the house at 147 East Seventh street through the agency of Mulford, the real estate dealer. Mr. Cummings will bring his family to this city in the course of a few weeks.

Built New Office.

A substantial and well-equipped office has just been built in the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Store on West Front street. Manager Vanderhoff, wanting to be up-to-date, had the office made and it will be of much assistance to him in the increasing business which the store enjoys.

In Case of Accident.

Accidents will happen. Mother strains her back lifting a sofa. Father is hurt in the shop. Children are forever falling and bruising themselves. There is no preventing these things, but their worst consequences are averted with Perry Davis' Painkiller. No other remedy approaches it for the relief of sore strained muscles. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'.

FEW BANKRUPTCIES HERE

PLAINFIELD DOES NOT PROMINENTLY FIGURE IN THAT WAY.

Bankruptcy Statistics in Jersey—Thousands of Petitions Now Filed Under New Law.

Petition in bankruptcy 1,000 was filed in the bankrupt division of the United States district court at Trenton recently just four years, three and one-half months since the signing of the federal bankruptcy law by the late President McKinley, July 1, 1898.

In the first year of the life of the law 149 petitions were filed, 290 during the second year, 268 came in the third year, and 239 was the record of the fourth year. During the fractional part of the fifth year, or from July 1 to October 15, three and one-half months, there were 54 petitions entered.

Of the grand total of 1,000 cases 801 were voluntarily filed by debtors and 199 were involuntary — filed by creditors.

Since the passage of the act 480 discharges have been granted, of which 434 are voluntary and forty-six involuntary. Nineteen petitions have been dismissed, some by consent, many in spite of opposition. Of the nineteen six were voluntary and thirteen involuntary.

The total number of cases disposed of to date is 507, or a little more than one-half the petitions filed.

Petitions from Newark easily lead the number, while the greatest number of petitions next in order have appeared from the following cities: Jersey City, Paterson, Hoboken, Passaic, East Orange, Elizabeth, Trenton, Atlantic City, Camden, Freehold, Morristown, Long Branch, Hackensack, Somerville and New Brunswick.

The 1,000 cases are distributed as follows among the various counties of the State:

Essex, 236; Hudson, 179; Passaic, 121; Monmouth, 68; Mercer, 56; Union, 50; Bergen, 44; Atlantic, 42; Camden, 31; Somerset, 22; Cumberland, 22; Middlesex, 18; Burlington, 16; Warren, 16; Hunterdon, 13; Salem, 11; Cape May, 10; Sussex, 8; Ocean, 8; Gloucester, 8. Total, 1,000.

LEARNING TO TAKE NOTES

NEW TRAINING FOR PUPILS OF NORTH PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

A. V. D. Honeyman Read Chapter From His New Book on European Travel.

Thursday afternoon between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock A. V. D. Honeyman read a chapter from the manuscript of his new book on his travels through Europe before the pupils of the North Plainfield High School. The pupils took notes of the talk for the purpose of making a report of the different events described. The chapter was an interesting one and told of Madrid, Spain, and incidently a lucid description of a Spanish bull fight was given.

It is the intention of Superintendent Wightman to have a lecture of this kind before the pupils every two weeks so as to get the pupils of the school accustomed to taking notes of lectures and making reports of them. It is possible that Mr. Honeyman will read another chapter from the manuscript next time.

It was the intention of Mr. Wightman to have the two eighth grades take part in this exercise but owing to the crowded condition of the auditorium this was found to be impossible. The two upper grades devoted the time to the cooking class for the girls and the manual training class for the boys.

NAMED PAPER.

Title Selected for High School Publication Soon to Make Its Initial Appearance.

At a meeting of the Board of Editors of the City High School paper held on Friday afternoon, "The Oracle" was decided upon as the name of publication to be published by the High School. From the cover designs submitted by various members of the paper. The design represents two high school flags, crossed behind a shield bearing the letters "P. H. S." The coloring will be red and blue, the colors of the school. The bid for the printing of the paper was awarded to Thomas H. Stafford and the first issue will appear December 3. The reports from the different editors showed all branches of the work to be well under way and all departments are hard at work upon the first issue.

A Little Loss

A few doses of Allen's Lung Balsam cause a free discharge of mucus and so loosens the cough. It heals the inflamed air passages and all its beneficent work is accomplished without a grain of opium.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 22, "Thanksgiving and Thanks Living"—Texts, Ps. cxvi, 12-17; Jas. i, 27.

The oldest forms of worship are connected with the recognition of some power superior to man in the giving of harvests. No people of any considerable degree of intelligence have been without harvest festivals. In these there have been elements of merely human gladness that there was abundant provision for bodily needs for some time to come. But mingled with the feasting and riotous rejoicing there have been rites of worship, rational or superstitious, in adoration of a beneficent Giver or in propitiation of one who could injure.

Our Thanksgiving season gives occasion for recognition of our blessings of the One who has given them and searching of His will as to what we shall do with His gifts.

It is well at this time for each one to go apart by himself and in quiet reckon up where he stands. If there has been prosperity of any kind and degree, look it fully in the face and recognize the change which has been wrought in conditions. Were due to fortunate circumstances, to God's immediate blessing.

What then?

You owe it to yourself, to your God and your fellows to use your means whether great or small, in the best possible way. You should be heart glad for God's favor and also you should be humbled by it. Who are you that God has so favored you? Are you in close touch long enough, great hearted enough to carry the load and not be humbled by it?

Your real thanksgiving will be shown by the way you live.

You cannot end the matter by a good big subscription to church finances, to the missionary cause or education or to any other benevolence. God requires more. Your own soul and your fellow men need more. They need not your money half so much as they need you. Are you a better man this year than you were a year ago? You young people, how is it with each of you? You have gained something the past twelve months. Has it been worth getting? Is the possession such as to gladden you and ennoble heart and life? Do you know God nearer and your associates dearer, yourself more devoted and determined for the right and true and less careful for the merely pleasant things of life?

Bless God for His benefits and live higher up in life because of them from this time onward.

The Neighbor.

Our first thought of the neighbor is of him who is near to us in space, in social position or in blood relationship, and our first impulse of neighborliness is toward these personally. Our first thought of doing good to the neighbor is to supply the natural wants and to guard from active harm. But in many it is thought of the neighbor alone may lead to doing evil and not good, since to love the person only is to love the evil as well as the good which makes up the person and to supply the wants of those naturally without deeper thought may be to give them means to do evil to others. Hence it is easily seen that we really love the neighbor and do good to him only as we love the good which is in him and foster and cherish that. Love to the evil displayed may properly be shown by denying them the gratification of their evil loves or by punishment for their evil doing.—Helper.

Personally Responsible.

The harvest may seem a long way off, but it will most assuredly come with its burning realities and tremendous consequences. There have always been seedtime and harvest, summer and winter, since the world began. So it is in human life. As summer follows spring and autumn follows summer and dreary winter comes at last, even so will it be with all who neglected God's overtures of mercy in Christ. With them the harvest will soon be past and the summer ended, and their condition will be eternally hopeless. "He that observeth the wind shall not sow, and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap." Every man is personally responsible for his sowing and reaping.—Episcopal Recorder.

Home and Society.

Our home and our society are to us what the world is to a great man—the sphere we may fill with work that cannot die. The statesman molds a people into order and progress partly by the force of character, partly by great measures. We are the statesmen of our little world. Every day mother and father stamp their character upon their children's lives, mold their manners, conscience and future by the measures with which they direct the household.—S. A. Brooke.

Won by Prayer and Toil.

Perfect patience is a jewel which is won only by years of prayer and toil.—Lutheran Observer.

The Dawning Light.

Keep working on for what is right,
And God will send the dawning light,
As daylight follows after night.
Then all at last, into the west
And know the will of God shall be
To make our souls sincere and free.

While only truth and love shall stay
To usher in life's glorious day
And teach mankind the heavenly way
To find God's kingdom, bright and fair,
Where souls are free from mortal care
And find sweet peace beyond compare.
—Philadelphia Ledger.

TALKED ABOUT MISSIONS

MEETING OF YOUNG PEOPLE'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF TRINITY.

Interesting Session Held Nov. 12, —Japan and Arabia Were the Subjects.

The regular meeting of the Junior Missionary Society, of the Trinity Reformed church, was held in the church parlors, yesterday afternoon, when Miss Violet VanWinkle presided. The meeting was very well attended by the members of the society and a very pleasant afternoon was spent by the young folks.

Mrs. Cornelius Schenck led the song service and Mrs. Josephine M. Tier read the roll call which showed that sixty-three members were present. During the afternoon three new members were received into the society.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was the question box which was conducted by Mrs. Tier. When it came time for the little ones to answer the questions, Mrs. Schenck passed around walnut shells tied with ribbons in which were the answers written on small slips of paper. These questions and answers dwelt on the mission work now going on in Arabia and Japan. While the children were answering the questions propounded by Mrs. Tier, little pieces of candy which contained the kernels of the nuts, were distributed. Booklets, telling about the mission work in these countries, were also passed among the children.

Seven little girls, of the society, sang a mission song during the exercises. They were Helen Smith, Helen Rossmond Rogers, Helen Wooley, Elsie Tier, Mary Van Deventer and Ethel Vail. After a closing benediction recited in chorus the meeting dismissed.

RAHWAY NEXT.

Pennsylvania Railroad Will Consider Raising of Tracks Through That City.

When the elevation of the Pennsylvania Railroad's tracks through Newark and New Brunswick, now under way, is completed, Rahway will remain as the only city on the New York division where grade crossings still exist. The elimination of this is now under consideration and will be begun next spring if the necessary municipal legislation can be secured. The company has contemplated this improvement for some time, but owing to some opposition to its proposed plans and the desire of the officials not to have it tracks torn up at too many places at the same time, it has not pressed the matter.

The result of the last election, it is said, will greatly aid the company in securing the required municipal legislation in Rahway as soon as its plans are fully determined upon and the matter comes formally before the Councils of that city. The people of Rahway generally are in favor of the improvements, and while there has been and will continue to be opposition owing to the necessity of closing certain streets and bridging others, it is fully expected that it will be successfully combatted.

The Pickwickians Are Coming.

Next Saturday the people of Plainfield will have an opportunity of seeing one of the cleverest farces on the road. The Pickwickians are superior to many so called farce comedy companies and will be in this city next Saturday afternoon and evening.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 22—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Thanksgiving and thanks living. Ps. cxvi, 3-17; Jas. i, 27.

No more appropriate Scriptural selection could have been made for this subject than the One Hundred and Sixteenth Psalm. The psalmist here gives thanks unto God for special and general blessings and declares practically that he will live his thanks. "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits?" he asks and then answers his question by saying, "I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all His people." This is equivalent to saying, "I will live my thanks unto the Lord for all His blessings."

1. Thanksgiving to God is most fitting and appropriate. The psalmist on this occasion had much to thank God for. He had been sick—yea, nigh unto death. "The pains of death got hold upon me." Then he cried unto the Lord, and the Lord heard him. He was healed. His life was saved. Little wonder that he would cry out unto God in gratitude and thanksgiving. But who has not many things to be thankful for? Every day there are blessings in our lives. Sometimes they are conspicuously great—unusual prosperity, escape from danger, restoration from sickness to health, we have thank God as we ought for these special blessings? And then there are the innumerable common blessings of life. Let us count our blessings and in gratitude thank God for them, for they all come from His hand.

2. Thanksgiving to God should be accompanied by deeds. Not those who merely say, "Lord, Lord, we thank Thee," are to thankful ones, but those who do the will of their Father who is in heaven. The psalmist recognized his indebtedness to God for His goodness. A sparse life put him in debt to God. He declared that he would pay it. "I will pay my vows unto the Lord." All sick vows are not paid, but the psalmist evidently intended to pay his. Thus, best of all, he could show his gratitude to God. "Actions speak louder than words." But thanks to God can be expressed by deeds of kindness toward His people. "Pure religion and undefiled before God the Father is this—to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world." How can we better thank God than by helping and caring for those who are the special objects of His love and care?

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. xxxiv, 1-8; i, 14, 15; c, 1-5; ciii, 1-5; cvii, 1-16; Mark v, 18-21; Acts iii, 1-10; II Cor. ix, 1-11; Phil. iv, 6; Col. ii, 6, 7; Rev. vii, 11, 12.

A Sure and Safe Refuge.

The day may be one of calamity. Dark clouds may be over us and a terrible storm about to break upon us. Where shall we find safety? The providence of God may fill us with alarm. We may feel ourselves left destitute and helpless. Where may we hide ourselves from the pending evil? Or, while all is peace about us, while others are rejoicing because of great good we are depressed in the spirit and in the thought of ourselves see only sin and judgment. How shall we escape? The Spirit of God has given us the answer, "God is our refuge; a help in trouble most readily to be found." He is at all times and His ear is open to our cry of distress. He is the Almighty, and within His loving care we are safe. He is the faithful, unchanging one, and therefore will not forsake us. Hasten to the open door and to the outstretched arms of Him whose love infolds you and whose arm will guard from every harm.—United Presbyterian.

Dreading the Future.

The most of our trouble is caused by dread of coming ills. Many of them never come at all, or, rather, when the trial that we have been dreading does come it does not seem to be any more to bear than we expected. In fact, we are almost disappointed when we get over some long expected trouble so easy and immediately look for something else to worry over. Have the abundant grace given for every need today; let us thankfully receive the blessing and leave tomorrow, with all it may bring, in His care. After all, what He expects of you and me is trust in Him, a trust that remains firm in the face of every possible calamity. Such faith as this is the only remedy for dread of the future, and such faith is the rightful heritage of every saved soul.—Presbyterian Journal.

MANY MOURNED HER LOSS

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. JOSEPH M. MYERS.

Rev. Dr. Bliss, an Old Friend and Neighbor, Conducted the Service —Her Sunday-School Present.

The funeral services of Mrs. Joseph M. Myers were held Wednesday, Nov. 12, at 3 o'clock from the late home on East Front street, where a very large number of friends were present to honor the memory of one whose death is a distinct loss. There was a profusion of floral tributes from many persons who loved and esteemed Mrs. Myers for her true Christian character and her devotion in the work of helping others. Noticeable among these tributes was a floral gift from the members of the Chinese Sunday-school, which "was organized and taught by Mrs. Myers. The members of this Sunday-school were present in a body to show their respect to their beloved teacher. This was very impressive.

Rev. Dr. Bliss, a former pastor of the Crescent Avenue church and a very dear friend and neighbor of Mrs. Myers, conducted the service and he gave sincere and earnest testimony of the life of devotion to the cause of Christ which was so suddenly terminated. He referred to her constant and never-ceasing labor in the charitable enterprises and her desire to help others, who were less fortunate.

Rev. E. M. Rodman, pastor emeritus of Grace Episcopal church, assisted in the services, and in the absence of Dr. Bliss, was unable to attend, the burial in Hillside cemetery, Mr. Rodman took charge of the committal services.

THEATRICAL.

Women theatre patrons in New York have a new matinee idol and this time have departed from tradition and raised up one of their own sex. She is Miss Henrietta Crosman who is appearing at Wallack's Theatre in "The Sword of the King." Miss Crosman's impersonation of Philippa Drayton seems completely to have fascinated her own sex. At the successive Saturday matinees, October 18 and 25, the big audiences composed almost entirely of women grew so enthusiastic that they insisted on Miss Crosman making a speech from the stage. Addresses to audiences are not infrequent on special occasions such as first nights or extraordinary dramatic events, but for audiences to demand speeches at usual performances, and these matinees, is unprecedented and declares for Miss Crosman's wonderful popularity. As audiences at the Wednesday matinees are equally enthusiastic it is possible that Miss Crosman will be required to make speeches at all her afternoon performances. In her speeches she so lared that she liked to play to women.

The Bostock Animal Show that has kept Greater New York in a whirl of excitement for the past six weeks will positively close its season at the St. Nicholas Garden, Sixty-sixth street and Columbus avenue, November 30, after one of the most remarkable and brilliant engagements ever known in the history of amusement annals. As the closing performances are announced, the rush for seats has been increased and those who anticipate a visit to an entertainment repeatedly pronounced in a field by itself, will be wise to secure their seats in advance. For the closing weeks several new features will be introduced including an act by four polar bears and three tigers under the guidance of Prof. Millo. Madame Creedonia, a beautiful young French woman, will also introduce a new act with animals that have not yet made their debut in public. Incidental to this feature, Madame Creedonia will sit down to supper with five lions and will indulge in see-saw, hurdle jumping and other feats hitherto unknown to the leonine family, at least so far as their capabilities as actors are concerned. One of the sights promised in the feeding of the carnivora, always watched with the keenest interest by thousands each day, will be a feast of turkeys for the lions and all the other carnivorous animals, Thanksgiving Day. They will be fed with turkey at 4:30 in the afternoon and at 10:30 in the evening. A contract has already been placed that may possibly cause a corner in the turkey market, but will suffice to satisfy the appetites of the animals. Two performances are given daily and every afternoon and evening, children being admitted at half price to the afternoon performances.

A Thanksgiving Dinner.

Heavy eating is usually the first cause of indigestion. Repeated attacks inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach, exposes the nerves of the stomach, producing a swelling after eating, heartburn, headache, sour risings and finally catarrh of the stomach. Kodol relieves the inflammation, protects the nerves and cures catarrh. Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, all stomach troubles by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach. L. W. Randolph.

MEN ARRANGED SUPPER AND GAVE PROGRAMME

Delightful Social Was Held at the First Presbyterian Church Last Thursday.

SUPPER WAS GOOD ONE

IT WAS COOKED AND SERVED BY THE MEN OF THE CHURCH ALONE.

After the Supper Was Over, a Programme Including Instrumental Selections by "Walter Trio" and Funny Things by Mr. Closs.

Not to be out done by the women in raising the amount still due on the new kitchen recently added to the First Presbyterian church the male members of that congregation served a chicken and waffle supper on Thursday to a large number of people in the Sunday-school rooms of the church which proved to be not only a most successful affair but an enjoyable one as well.

The supper was prepared and served by the men without the assistance of the women. There were four tables arranged in the large room which seated about fifty people each and their wants were attended to by William McKillop, George Herrmann, Westley Messersmith, Harry Messersmith, Howard George, E. Douglas Murphey and Norman Hill, all of whom were costumed in natty white jackets.

After the supper the tables were cleared and a musical programme was rendered. The "Walter Trio" were the first to appear in the musical part of the evening's events and they rendered several selections including "Sunshine and Shadow" in which they were repeatedly encored. Those in the trio were M. A. Korff, William McKillop and Vincent Sokol, who presided at the piano.

Emil Closs, of Brooklyn, gave several humorous recitations and during the evening rendered pantomimic selections which produced round after round of applause and laughter. His impersonations of different types were exceptionally clever and were well carried out. The evening's entertainment closed with the "Good-night March" by the "Walter Trio."

The committee which arranged the entertainment comprised Howard Pope, Edward Boroughs, John Johnson and Edward A. Gano and assisted by A. V. Williams.

MUSIC AND READINGS.

Alfred J. Everett's Friends Well Entertained at a Stag Party.

Late in the evening refreshments were served by Mrs. Joseph Bolsterle, Miss Everett, Miss Florence King, Miss Creger and Miss Jennie Everett. Among those present were, Edward Mayburry, Benjamin LaVere, H. Harold, F. Ewards, of East Orange, S. Robinson, William DeCamp, William Steward, C. Martin, W. R. Brokaw, G. E. Watts, A. G. Everett, A. E. Everett, and Theodore Everett.

HEARD GLEE CLUB.

Successful Concert Given in Parish House of Church of the Heavenly Rest Friday Evening.

An audience of fully 400 people heard the Rutgers College Glee and Mandolin Club give one of its concerts in parish house of the Church of Heavenly Rest, last Friday. The organization was assisted by W. K. Flanagan, elocutionist, who gave a number of highly enjoyable selections. The musical numbers were made up of individual solos and chorus selections by the entire club, every one of which was longly applauded.

The affair was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild which will realize a neat sum from the affair. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. E. E. Brown, chairman, Mrs. B. K. Burke, Miss Elizabeth Foster, Miss Jennie Wenzel and Miss Nellie Miner.

GERMAN FAIR BROUGHT TO SUCCESSFUL CLOSE

Saturday Night Ended a Week's Activity for Members of the Saengerbund.

WAS WELL ATTENDED

THOSE TO WHOM CREDIT FOR FAIR'S SUCCESS IS DUE.

Dancing Was an Important Feature —Results of Contests and Prize Bowling—A Number of Out-of-Town Guests Were Present.

After a week's successful run the fair of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein came to a close Saturday evening when the big hall was crowded with young people who thoroughly enjoyed the dancing. The fair has been a great success, as is shown by the heavy receipts at the door and by the interest manifested in the several contests which have been going on at the fair during the week.

Every night the hall has been filled to its utmost capacity and the patronage has been unusually generous. Each night the local society entertained out-of-town guests. Thursday night the members of Warren Engine Company were guests and Saturday night forty-five members of the Arion Singing Society came up here from Newark and during the evening rendered several selections. Other societies from Elizabeth, Rahway, New Brunswick and Bound Brook were entertained on different evenings of the week.

A feature of the closing night was the prize bowling when three prizes were offered for the best scores. These prizes, which were two chickens and a duck, were won by Henry Rammell, chairman of the bowling committee.

The committees who are deserving of credit for the success of the affair were as follows: August Melcher, chairman; Joseph Haurand, John Wirth, Charles Meyers, Jr.; floor manager, Peter Blake; assistants, Henry Hertle, Charles Frey, Adolph Lattmann, and John Retzer. The women who were on the committee were: Mrs. Joseph Haurand, Mrs. Rudolph Spiegel, Mrs. Henry Hertle, Mrs. Henry Rammel, and Mrs. John Retzer.

The awarding of the prizes and contests took place at about 12 o'clock. In the contest for the wheel Henry Haurand was declared the winner, having collected $39. Adolph Barry won the rifle by collecting $30. The contest for the football was won by Henry Steenzenberger who collected $7.

In the diamond ring contest Miss Minnie Frey collected $30.75, while her opponent collected $7.70 and Miss Frey was therefore declared the winner. There was an interesting contest for a gold bracelet between Miss Ida Ballentine and Miss R. Lattmann. Miss Ballentine handed in $21 against Miss Luttmann's $7.

The women's bowling prize of a gold trimmed clock was won by Mrs. Melcher.

Funeral of Emil Amiet.

Funeral services over the remains of Emil Amiet, who met death in the trolley collision on West Front street, Wednesday night, were held from Cole's undertaking parlors, Saturday afternoon. They were in charge of Rev. E. M. Rodman and were attended by relatives and a party of friends from Bound Brook. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

PARK BOWLERS ARE ACTIVE

THE ALLEYS WILL BE PUT IN THE BEST OF CONDITION.

Many Attractions at Park Club Will Serve to Boom Interest in Bowling This Winter.

Improvements are to be made to the Park Club alleys this fall which will make them the equal of any in the county. At a recent meeting of the bowling committee of that organization, it was decided to get an expert on bowling alleys from Newark who will look over the club's alleys and see just what is necessary to put them in the best of condition for the fall and winter months. Another year it is hoped to have a concrete foundation laid for the alleys and thereby prevent any warping.

Bowling promises to be an important factor at that club this winter. First and foremost will be the contests for the championship of The Daily Press Bowling League. The Park Club's team will be captained by William R. Faber who was in command last year. Among those who will participate in the league contests are such veterans as Laurens H. Van Buren, H. D. Hibbard, F. O. Ball, Allan B. Laing and others with less experience as William A. Townsend, Morgan T. Townsend, Ralph Willis. There is also some new material in the club which it is hoped to bring out.

But the league contests will not be the only attraction as far as bowling is concerned. The bowling committee is arranging for its usual handicap individual tournament which always attracts interest among the members, if not so much on the outside. Then there will be the usual inter-team contests which always prove such pleasant features of the holiday season at the club.

Society Making Gifts.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society, of Trinity Reformed church, has sent a large box of clothing, wearing apparel, canned goods, etc., to Mrs. J. Vander Meulen, widow of Rev. Mr. Vander Meulen, and her two daughters, at Grand Haven, Michigan; also a barrel of clothing, shoes and other articles to the Scofield School, Aiken, S. C.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Margaret May Mulford, and William R. Townsend, of East Fifth street, which will be celebrated Wednesday, December 3, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Margaret A. Mulford, 403 East Fifth street.

Injured In Alighting.

While alighting from her carriage Thursday evening, in front of the Trinity Reformed church, Miss Grace Rowland, of East Second street, slipped and fell, injuring her knee. She was taken to her home, where she will be confined for several days.

—The Young Ladies' Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, will hold a regular meeting Friday afternoon, when it is probable that a new president will be elected.

ORGANIZED AID CONFERENCE

THE FIRST GATHERING OF COMMITTEE WORKERS HELD FRIDAY.

Miss Williams, of New York College Settlement, Addressed the Meeting.

The first conference of the committees of the Organized Aid Association was held Friday afternoon at the home of Miss Zaidee VanBoskerck, at 542 West Seventh street, when Miss Williams, of the College Settlement Workers in New York, addressed forty or more people and told in an interesting manner of the work being done in that city.

After the talk tea was served to those present and the work was again talked over in a general way.

It is the intention of those who are foremost in the work to hold these conferences every other week during the winter and occasionally holding special meetings like that of yesterday when other societies will be asked to attend the meeting. The regular meetings will be held in the morning at the offices of the Organized Aid Society on West Front street. The special meeting will be held at the homes of the members in the afternoons when, after the meetings, tea will be served.

HUNTER DROPPED GUN.

The Weapon Went Off and So Did Dewey, the Dog.

H. Howard Becker, who lives in South Plainfield, went hunting Friday and took with him his dog, Dewey. Dewey was tied with a long clothesline so that he would not get away. While passing through a thicket the dog saw two rabbits and suddenly determined that one of them at least must be his prey. He stood still for a moment and then made a sudden dash the rope slipped through the hands of Becker so that the flesh was burned and then he accidentally dropped his gun. The gun went off and the next thing Becker knew the dog was sailing peacefully on its way to dog heaven where all faithful canines are destined to go.

Installation of New Pastor.

The installation of Rev. Edward Vicars Stevenson as rector of Grace Episcopal church will be held Sunday, December 14, at which time Bishop Scarborough will be present. Rev. Dr. Peters, rector of St. Michael's church, New York, where Mr. Stevenson was an assistant, will preach the sermon. It is expected that several well-known Episcopalian clergymen will be present at the installation services.

SEWERS FOR THE BOROUGH

Sewage Commission Submitted Its and Engineer's Report to Borough Council.

TWO PLANS PROPOSED

Either a Sewer to Tide Water or a Disposal Plant—Commission Will Report More Fully in the Future—Municipal Engineering Company's Report.

The Borough Sewage Commission, comprising E. A. Hegeman, Jr., Elston M. French, William C. Smith and David T. Kenney handed in its partial report on its investigations on the sewage problem in North Plainfield, at the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council last Monday when the Municipal Engineering Company, of 1123 Broadway, New York, sent a report and a description of its plan which shows the people in the borough what they may expect in the way of a sewer disposal plant.

The description of the plant and the cost of installing the same is given forthwith and shows the extent of the project of doing away with the sewage in this manner instead of carrying it to tide water.

This, however, is not the final report of the commission as they are to submit a more exhaustive report later after they have investigated the question of tide water drainage further.

There was much time taken up in discussion for and against the proposed system in which Mr. Clark asked if there was not a law which was passed prohibiting any town from emptying into a stream after 1904 unless they have been emptying into such a stream prior to that year, to which the borough counsel, Charles A. Reed, said that such a law had been passed but in that law there was a clause saying that it was necessary to get the approval of the State Sewage Commission and cited Passaic as an example.

Mr. Reed further said that if the sewage could be carried to tide water it would be much preferable. Personally he thought that the scheme proposed was better than the system now in use in this city because, he held, that not only has the sewage got to be carried to tide water but it has to be carried to a point where it is not conducive to consumption in that vicinity. He said the nearest tide water from here is the Raritan River but New Brunswick has already cried out against Somerville and Bound Brook emptying their sewerage into that river and there was likely to be a greater howl if North Plainfield should follow their example.

He argued that it would have a septic tank at the bank of the river. Even at Raritan Bay it would be necessary to have a septic tank as the State Sewerage Commission makes it almost compulsory.

New Brunswick, Bound Brook and Somerville may be stopped at any time from emptying their sewage into the Raritan without a septic tank, he said, as they have no authority for sewering at tide water or anywhere else unless they have the permission of the State Sewage Commission to do so.

After a little farther discussion it was moved to receive the following reports and they were ordered placed on file.

To the Honorable the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield.

Gentlemen: Your Sewage Commission appointed by Mayor Smalley on June 7, 1901, under authority given by a resolution passed by the Borough Council, begs to report as follows:

Owing to several resignations from your commission, and other causes, we did not get actively to work until early in 1902, since which time we have had numerous meetings for the purpose of investigating the subject committed to our care. As a result of those meetings your committee desires to submit the following preliminary report:

First—That owing to the fact that the borough of North Plainfield bears such close relationship to the city of Plainfield, that it is in reality competing with the city as a place of residence, and as the city is govided with a sewage system it is necessary for the borough to be provided with a like convenience if it expects to secure normal growth or even to hold its present position.

Second—It being deemed necessary, for the reasons stated, that a system of sewage should be introduced the next question is what system appears most feasible? In regard to the systems of sewage which your committee would report on we would state that we have considered the various methods which are common for this purpose.

First—To carry the sewage to tide water. This would be most desirable and is having our further consideration, as we desire more time to more thoroughly investigate this system as applied to North Plainfield.

Second—To adopt the system which disposes of the sewage by means of intermittent filtration. This does not appear feasible to your commission on account of the difficulty of securing the proper soil upon which to construct it and which is essential to the successful operation of this plan. This system was tried in the city of Plainfield and failed on account of the soil on which the beds were constructed.

Third—To use a system embracing the use of a septic tank in connection with a series of contact beds, which system bears the stamp of approval of the New Jersey State Sewage Commission and which is now in use in the city of Plainfield, and from reports received from the city authorities, is doing its work to their entire satisfaction.

Having eliminated the second method of sewage disposal on account of its impracticability under existing conditions, the two remaining plans seem the only ones within the range of present possibilities. Acting on this conclusion, so far as the septic tank method is concerned, your commission employed the Municipal Engineering Company to make a survey of the borough and prepare an estimate of the cost of the introduction of such a system. We append their report and estimate to our report, together with the map which they prepared in connection with their proposal. The plan they propose is an improvement on the system used in the city of Plainfield. The cost of this plant, including mains, laterals and flush tanks, is $87,400. In naming this figure it must be borne in mind that there was no competition in securing the bid and was only obtained so that we might place before your honorable body and the people of the borough a statement as to what the approximate cost of such a system would be.

We are unprepared to report on the approximate cost of a system of tide water disposal at this time, as we now have this matter under investigation, but hope to make a final report at an early date, all of which is

Respectfully submitted,

B. A. Hegeman, Jr.,
Elston M. French,
Wm. C. Smith,
David T. Kenney, Committee.

THE PROPOSED SYSTEM

The sewer system as proposed by the Municipal Engineering Company will cost the borough $48,000 and the disposal system completed in a first-class manner will cost $39,000. These figures will not include engineering fees which, Mr. Pearson, the representative of the company who was present at the meeting, said would amount to about five per cent. of the cost of the plant.

This amount provides for a first-class system of sewers, including manholes, flushtanks, etc., on all streets on which houses are located. In some places, notably along the Green brook, road iron mains will have to be laid on account of the great number of springs which are to be found along this place which will form an inverted syphon. The sewers will be divided so that they will be found adequate for present as well as future conditions.

The disposal of the sewage arranged for safeguards the health of the community and is destined to care for a population of 7,000 inhabitants and will allow for the extension of the system to provide for a population of double that number.

The sewage enters the system through an endless line of moving screens, the function of these being to remove all coarse matter in suspension and to convey the same to the chambers where the evaporation take place. The matter is then conveyed to the large sedimentation tanks where the velocity is checked and the settling of the fine suspended solids may take place. From the sedimentation tanks the sewage flows over dams to a conduit from which it may flow to each of the reception tanks. These reservoirs will have a capacity of holding 4,000,000 gallons.

From these tanks the sewage goes through a natural process which liquifies all solid organic matter to prepare it suitably for purification. As this part of the process causes the sewage to turn black and causes offensive gases this part of the system is covered over with a concrete covering.

Into the roughing beds the sewage rises by gravitation after passing through the septic tanks. This is formed of beds of gravel which are arranged under a large ventilating chimney and from there the sewage flows through the gravel and the gases there contained are liberated and are carried off up the chimney where they may be burned. From these roughing beds the sewage falls through a thin film over a dam where the consequent aeration prepares it for the next stage of purification.

From the roughing beds the effluent flows to beds of gravel and coarse sand where purification, a natural process, takes place. These beds, four in number, are designed to cover half an acre each and are 4 feet deep.

The surfaces of the beds are to be covered with loam and seeded to grass, this treatment being rendered possible by means of subsoil aeration provided.

The beds are so arranged that two may be used for a first contact, the effluent flowing thence to the other two by gravity, for the second or final contact. The effluent from the system will be acceptable to the State Sewage Commission of New Jersey for discharge into Green brook.

After the sewerage reports had been read and acted upon at the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council last night the matter of the new fire engine house was brought up for discussion when, after taking a recess during which the question of reducing the cost of constructing the building was discussed, it was decided to reject all bids received before and to have the architect modify his plans by cutting off the addition in the rear as proposed and to again advertise for bids on the proposed new building in order to make the cost of the building come within the appropriation of $10,000.

When the clerk, Frank Rowley, read over the bids as published in The Daily Press last week it was found that the sum total of the lowest bidders amounted to $4,500, over the appropriation. It was suggested by some of the members of the Council whether it would be more advisable to have the people vote on an appropriation for more money or whether it would be best to exclude the addition at the rear and have the bidders figure on the main building alone, retaining the outline and finishings of the building at the front which will be of yellow brick and dressed stone.

A petition was presented asking for an electric light at Grant avenue near Green brook which was referred to the committee on fire, water and lamps, which committee granted the petition, and also ordered that a hydrant be placed at or near the corner of Rockview and Rock avenues.

The meeting then adjourned until Friday night, December 5.

LITERARY.

Professor John Bach McMaster recently wrote to the editors of St. Nicholas: "Thank you very heartily for the pleasure and profit St. Nicholas brings to my boys."

Boys and girls are very much alike the world over. The delight and help that St. Nicholas is giving to Professor McMaster's boys and thousands of other girls and boys, is holds for every girl and boy who can understand English.

Since the first number of St. Nicholas was published, nearly thirty years ago, many weekly and monthly publications for children have come and gone; but St. Nicholas still holds its place, the unrivalled "prince of periodicals for young folks." It was never more enjoyed by its readers than now, for in addition to the usual called "The St. Nicholas League," in which the children themselves have the opportunity to take part. There are said to be nearly fifty thousand children now belonging to the League, and prizes are given out each month for the best stories, poems, drawings and photographs sent in by the young members. Any reader of St. Nicholas may become a member.

St. Nicholas announces for 1903 "The Story of King Arthur," written and illustrated by Howard Pyle, a companion story to his famous "Robin Hood," but which readers of the manuscript think surpasses that in the strength and interest of the narrative and beauty of the illustrations. Two short stories by Miss Alcott, written for her own little nieces and never before published, will soon appear in St. Nicholas, with other stories and articles by the author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," by Ruth McEnery Stuart, Frank R. Stockton, Clara Morris, and scores of other well-known writers. St. Nicholas makes a specialty of papers of information, richly illustrated articles on practical subjects, like the Navy Yard, the Assay Office, etc.

The price of St. Nicholas is $3 a year. The publishers announce that new subscribers who begin with January may receive the November and December numbers free, and so begin the volume and get the commencement of all the serials. The publishers are The Century Co., Union Square, New York.

WRIGHT DIVIDED FIRST HONORS WITH W. L. GLENNEY SATURDAY.

W. T. Glenney Now Has the Boys' Cup Practically Won—The Play for the Cups Will Probably Last Two Weeks More.

E. T. Newkirk did not hold the lead for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club very long. Saturday afternoon Howard Wright, who has been playing a strong game this year, divided honors with W. L. Glenney and now holds the lead with 20½ points. There yet remain two Saturdays to compete for this cup and the chances are that Mr. Wright will be the winner if he continues in his present form. All the scores Saturday were good and the course being in fine condition it was a pleasure to play over it.

WOMAN FELL IN A CISTERN

Walked Into It In the Dark and Could Not Escape Until Aid Came.

THERE HALF AN HOUR

Rain Water Had Partially Filled It and Sides Were Too Steep and Slippery to Permit Her to Escape—Finally Rescued by a Policeman—Was Injured.

A short-cut through a field between Essex and Fourth streets, near Spruce street, last Tuesday, resulted in Mrs. Martha Parkinson, of West Fourth street, meeting with a peculiar and unpleasant accident.

She was walking along a frequently traversed path which runs in the rear of a new house being erected on Spruce street. Unknown to her a deep excavation, which is to be used as a cistern, had been made directly in the way and was left unprotected. Into this she plunged headlong. Besides suffering bodily bruises she found herself partly submerged by rain water.

The steep sides offered no foothold and it was impossible for her to climb out. There was no other way out of the predicament but to call for help and this she did with a vehemence for nearly half an hour before her cries were heard by a boy. The lad was thoroughly frightened, as he could not discern the source, and made off to the home of Police Doorman Thomas McCue. Hurrying to the scene, the latter found Mrs. Parkinson in an almost exhausted condition. He was forced to call other men from nearby houses and with the aid of a plank she was finally extricated, bruised and bedraggled.

Although no bones were broken by the fall, Mrs. Parkinson is in great pain and is confined to her bed. There is a possible chance that illness may result from the exposure.

Unity will return the visit on Friday, December 5, when Perseverance entertains Ethic Lodge, of Harrison.

Mr. Waring has several horses entered in the Orange Horse Show this week and expects to capture some prizes.

WHY THIS COUNTRY SHOULD BE GRATEFUL

Some Reasons for Thanksgiving That The American People Now Have.

THANKSGIVING SERMON

WAS PREACHED BY REV. J. W. RICHARDSON SUNDAY MORNING.

Told Congregation of Park Avenue Baptist Church How God Has Particularly Favored This Country and the Present Generation.

"Why We Should Be Grateful," was the subject of a Thanksgiving sermon preached at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday morning by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, in which he reviewed the great blessings which have been showered upon this country from the time the Pilgrims landed on these shores to the present day of peace and plenty. The lesson which the pastor endeavored to show by his sermon was that Americans, who are continually surrounded with rich blessings, are apt to look upon them as being commonplace and are liable to forget to give thanks to Him from whom all these blessings come. The text of the sermon was taken from the passage of scripture found in the book of Isaiah vii-5 of the King James version. The sermon was opened in showing that while God had not suspended the natural laws to work miracles in this country He has prospered the New World in a manner that has opened the eyes of the rest of the world. Americans would be blind and unreasonable indeed, he said, if they did not recognize God in His chariot at the head of the country's affairs and for this reason the people are to offer up their thanks to God for the blessings which have been greater than those enjoyed by any other nation in the history of the world. In view of God's favors thus evidenced on *every hand they would be remiss, in*deed, if they failed to offer thanks on high by their hearts as well as their lips.

In showing some of the things for which they should be thankful, the pastor cited the gift of this country, and said that this republic was God's own handiwork. He told of the conditions which had been going on in the Old World for years which had caused a pressure of about 1,000 pounds to the square inch which, be*coming unbearable, finally resulted in* the Pilgrims leaving behind home ties and loved ones to flee to the newly-discovered land.

*New ideas, he said, needed new ex*ploitations and environments. If America had been discovered in the Middle Ages the tendency to overrule democracy by aristocracy would have permiated the new world. God saw to it that the new world was to be for His people and kept it until the time was ripe for them to occupy it and when that time came the newly found America grew in His favor because it had learned in a few years the lessons which had been learned by the European nations in centuries of bloodshed and tears. It was the land of the free churches on the hills, the sacred homes on the plains, and of the ma*chine shops* and other industries on the shores. To those, who, having come to this country and were not able to appreciate these blessings, the pastor advised them to pack their trunks and get out, the sooner the better.

In speaking of the opportunity for advancement in this country the pastor said that even the rail splitter may become president and a poor newsboy and telegraph operator become one of the greatest wizards of the age. Incidentally the speaker said that in the labor troubles, which have been before the public eye for the past year, right and justice would soon come to the front. The growth of this country was also dwelt upon by the speaker who said that Solomon had a thousand galleys but what would he think if he could but see the great commercial ships and sail boats of today; Abraham had many chariots but his eyes would open if he could see the great railroads whizzing through the country at wonderful speed. In many things America leads the world commercially, industrially, in religious freedom and in growth, in population and intelligence, and that from a struggling colony of thirteen States of a total population of 3,000,000 it has grown to a country of 77,000,000 and forty-nine States.

"Education has also made wonder-

Y. M. C. A. Five Defeated the Hope Y. M. A. in the Initial Game by Score of 22 to 9.

AT Y. M. C. A. GYMNASIUM

Hope Boys Surprised the Crowd by Putting Up a Good Showing in Their First Real Game—Second Half Was Really Close and Also Very Hard Fought.

Decidedly interesting was the opening game of the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League, played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium on Monday between the teams of the Y. M. C. A. and the Hope Y. M. A. Everybody expected the Y. M. C. A. to win and it did but the showing made by the Hope boys, particularly in the second half, was so unexpected that the game assumed a new interest in the eyes of the spectators who crowded the visitors' gallery. The final score was 22 to 9.

In order to give the league a good send-off, George T. Hepburn, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Athletic League of North America, was secured to referee the game and he brought with him two umpires of experience. To the surprise of all, it was the Y. M. C. A. boys who needed the most attention as they had six fouls called on them to the three on Hope.

It was strictly a defensive game with which the Hope boys began. It was their first real game and the strangeness of it all was apparent. It was McCombe and Dilks who bore the brunt of the fight at first. They played a hard, aggressive game. The other confined their efforts chiefly to trying to prevent Y. M. C. A. from scoring. In this they were fairly successful and it was not until seven minutes of play had passed that the association team scored its first goal. There were opportunities but the inaccurate throwing of the Y. M. C. A. players kept down the score. When the first half ended, the Y. M. C. A. had scored six goals, making the score 12 to 0.

A change come over the Hope boys when the second half began. They started an aggressive game and continued it until time was called. Grieb was hurt in a collision with Cahoone and Porter took his place. While Porter lacked Grieb's height, he was quicker and more active. Dilks cleverly landed the first goal for Hope and it wasn't long before Mc Combe had one too. The Y. M. C. A. boys waked up to the fact that they would have to play. After that the game was doubly exciting.

While the fight chiefly centred around the Hope goal, thanks to the superior team work of the association five, the Hope guards managed to prevent much scoring. Occasionally the ball would get down the other end and then it was that Dilks and Whitley distinguished themselves. The play was hard and fast but there were few fouls called and those were chiefly on the Y. M. C. A. team. Of the four called, Hope managed to make three goals.

Denton and Cahoone made the best showing on the Y. M. C. A. team although Giles was very active in the first half. Fair team play was developed but the players were woefully inaccurate in goal throwing. In the second half, the Hope boys showed better form in goal throwing than did their opponents. The one great fault of the Hopes was in leaving their opponents uncovered at times.

The second half was decidedly close, Y. M. C. A. scoring ten points to Hope's nine. Had the brace been made in the start of the game when Hope had the advantage of the clear goal away from the apparatus, a close game would have undoubtedly resulted. As it was Manager Harrison and the Hope rooters were highly gratified with the result.

The summary:

Y. M. C. A.		HOPE Y. M. A.
Denton	right forward	Dilks
Hand, Cahoone	left forward	Whitley
Giles	center	Scall, J. Coe
Gilles	right guard	McCombe
Heinecke, Neal	left guard	Grieb, Porter

Score—Y. M. C. A., 22; Hope Y. M. A., 9. Goals from field—Denton (3), Hand, Cahoone (1), Scall, Dilks (2), McCombe. Goals from fouls—Dilks (2), Coe. Fouls—Y. M. C. A., 6; Hope Y. M. A., 3. ENDEAVORERS HELD A THANKSGIVING SOCIAL Senior and Junior Societies of First Baptist Church United Forces for Last Tuesday.

WAS WELL ATTENDED

A MUSICAL PROGAANME AND AN ADDRESS WAS GIVEN.

By a Strange Coincidence All Those Who Took Part Were From the First Presbyterian Church—The Committee in Charge.

The Senior and Junior Endeavor Societies of the First Baptist church, assisted by some of the members of the Senior Society, held a Thanksgiving social in the Sunday-school room of the church, last Tuesday. Despite the inclement weather there was a goodly number of young folks present to enjoy the programme arranged. It was a coincidence that all those taking part happened to come from the First Presbyterian church. It was a pleasant feature, however, showing the good fellowship existing between the two churches.

The programme included piano selections by Miss Beatrice Miner and soprano solos by Miss Ada Dunham. These numbers were well given and hearty applause was accorded. Miss Dunham sang "O, Happy Day," and "Bedtime's Near," and the rendition was delightful. The selections by Miss Miner were well-chosen and she execution all to be desired. Both these young women were given encores.

A happy feature was the talk by Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church. His remarks were in a happy vein and he told those present many amusing stories, all of which carried a point of truth to illustrate the subject chosen.

Following this programme, refreshments, consisting of pumpkin pie and coffee, were served by the committee in charge. In connection with the affair the decorations should not be forgotten. These comprised cornstalks, pumpkins, American flags, etc.

Later in the evening the young folks played games of one kind and another and thus a pleasant evening was spent. The committee in charge consisting of Herbert DuBois, N. Douglass Drake, the Misses TenEyck, was ably assisted by Mrs. J. B. Probasco.

BURGLARS ACTIVE.

Broke Into Two Residences at Somerville Yesterday and Captured Some Booty.

Somerville, Nov. 26—Several Somerville homes were molested by burglars yesterday morning, but the aggregate of their stealings is not thought to be very large. The residence of M. N. Porter, agent for the United States Express Company, was broken into and an overcoat belonging to his son and about $5 from a pocketbook, also belonging to the young man, were taken. It is believed the thieves were frightened by hearing someone walking upstairs and fled without going above, where they would have found much richer pickings.

The home of J. W. Sullivan, nearby, was also broken into, but it is not known what is missing, as the family is away on a visit. Dogs scared the thieves away from the residence of Charles VanArsdale.

ONLY FIFTEEN KICK AT THE VALUATIONS

Commissioners of Appeal in the Borough Had a Hearing Tuesday Afternoon.

SOME OF THE REASONS

JUST FIFTEEN OBJECTED TO FIGURES FIXED BY ASSESSOR FRENCH.

Some Objected Because Taxes Were Higher, Although Assessments *Weren't Increased—Unnatural*ized Citizens Objected to Taxes.

A meeting of the Commissioners of Appeal was held in the Borough Council Chambers Tuesday which lasted about two hours, during which time only fifteen people applied to appeal from Assessor French's figures. This small number of appeals is quite remarkable when the unsettled political condition of the borough is considered.

There were a number who appeared, not because they thought the assessed valuation was too high, but simply because their bills were higher than they were last year. It was explained to them that the Assessor's valuation was correct and that he had no control over the rate of taxation, as that is fixed by the different governing bodies as the Council and School Board.

A few shareholders of the City National Bank stock wanted to know why their assessments were raised and they were answered that it was because of the fact that the stock had increased its value. This was referred to Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed. Among the fifteen who were present at the meeting were several unnaturalized citizens who, not being able to vote, wanted the $1 poll tax taken off, but it was explained to them that their idea of a poll tax was very much confused and that if they came to this country and did not want to pay for protection and for the privilege of living in a free country, they were not good citizens of the kind that are wanted in the borough of North Plainfield.

After all the appeals had been heard, some of the older bills were taken under advisement and the meeting adjourned until this morning when these were satisfactorily adjusted. The Commissioners of Appeals who were present yesterday were William C. Smith, and Lewis E. Barkelew, the other member, Dr. J. H. Cooley, being absent.

THE WEST END WANTS BRIDGE

Need of Some Means of Crossing the Railroad Between Clinton and Grant Aves.

IT WOULD SAVE LIVES

Councilman Lee Will Champion a Plan to Open Public Right of Way and Build Foot Bridge Over the Tracks—Will Bring Subject to the Attention of the Council.

Residents of the West End who have long been clamoring for some means of crossing the tracks of the New Jersey Central Railroad, between Grant and Clinton avenues, have a champion in the person of Councilman Robert L. Lee. He has given the matter his personal attention and will shortly air his ideas before the City Fathers with a view to having them take action.

The stretch in question is just a mile in length and people living either side of the railroad, wishing to go in the opposite direction, must walk either to Clinton or Grant avenues, where there are bridges, or else cross the tracks with its consequent risks.

The latter is generally done with the result in the last few years that many persons have met death or had narrow escapes from being struck by trains. Pond Tool Works employes have made many paths over the tracks and their footsteps have been followed by pupils of the Irving school living on the north side of the road.

One of the most frequently used is at the head of Albert street and terminates on the opposite side at the west end of the Pond fence. It is Councilman Lee's idea to get a public right of way at this point and as the tracks are in a slight cut, erect a footbridge over them. Officials of the Pond shop are heartily in favor of the project and have signified their intention of granting the right for a path through their property. The bridge could be made of steel at this plant and erected by its workmen at a very small cost, while the benefit to the residents is beyond estimation.

When the Irving school was built at Monroe avenue and Fourth street, members of the Board of Education at that time were confronted with the problem of children getting to it from Front street but no solution was reached. It has since been brought to their notice at frequent intervals and if the Council decides to act upon Councilman Lee's suggestion it will be heartily seconded by the school board.

INJURED AT DETROIT.

Former Pond Employe Had An Arm* Crushed in Machine—Amputated.

Word has been received in this city that Gustav Mailer, who recently re*signed his position at the* Pond Tool Works, met with a serious accident in the Allis-Chalmers Works in Detroit, Mich. His left arm was caught in a machine and was badly crushed.

According to the report the member was amputated and he is now in a critical condition in the Detroit General Hospital. Mailer was sent to this country by the German government in order to study American machinery and spent several months in Ponds. He will be remembered by the members of Hope chapel as the pianist who took part in a recent reception.

Of Interest To the New Woman

ELIZABETH BRYANT JOHNSTON and her two nieces are examples of how talent nowadays often runs in several women of one family. Miss Elizabeth Johnston herself is known best as the author of the textbook, "George Washington Day by Day," and the recent volume of old Kentucky sketches entitled "Days That Are No More." Miss Johnston has two brothers, Anderson and Judge Sanders Johnston. These each have one daughter. Judge Johnston's daughter Mary early developed exceptional power as a singer, which was cultivated abroad, and the young lady became professionally known as Marie Decca, the soprano. She now lives in New York city, where she is established as a singer and instructor in vocal music. Meantime her cousin Frances, daughter of Anderson Johnston, showed a strong bent toward drawing and painting. She went to Paris and studied art two years, even as her cousin had studied vocal music; then she returned to her home in Washington. It was her intention to devote herself to illustrating. As an aid to the accomplishment of her purpose she learned photography, not dreaming of making it other than subsidiary to her picture making by hand. She became so fascinated by the picture taking that she decided to give herself to art photography. She opened her studio in her father's Washington home, and that is her headquarters. But she travels all over the country photographing interesting objects for magazine articles which she herself writes. Thus she has pictured and described coal mines and salt wells and much else of interest. Lately she photographed Booker Washington's school at Tuskegee. She it was who photographed Miss Alice Roosevelt on the debut of that young lady. From the money obtained from the sale of the photographs Miss Johnston built the Alice Roosevelt wing to her studio.

If a majority of the women of your club fail to see things as you do, don't you pop up in meeting, tear off your club badge, fling it at somebody, resign your membership and dash out of the meeting with the grace and celerity of an infuriated cow, making of yourself, of women's clubs and of all womankind a laughing stock in the eyes of gods and newspaper reporters. If you must disagree seriously with your sisters, and most of the time this is quite unnecessary, do it with ladylike dignified approval in a cool, ladylike way. Then, if you decide that you must resign, send in a letter, dignified and calm—always that—expressing your regret that you must leave the club.

Don't become excited and sputter, whatever the provocation. Scolding and sputtering are marks of a feeble mind.

May Hopkins, who herself established a most successful business in New York city, says that when she worked for other people she was never afraid of doing more than she was paid for.

If you must do something you don't like, don't make a noisy, scolding, impotent fuss over it. Go and do it cheerfully and don't say anything about it, and by and by you will come to the point where nothing you have to encounter is really very disagreeable to you.

A writer, speaking of Lida Rose McCabe, the journalist, says that, "for a woman, she is full of exceptionally bright humor." Dear, dear! The conceit of a certain sex, which shall be nameless, is monumental.

The women's dog show in Madison Square Garden, New York, proved that the breeding of fashionable canines is profitable. Many animals of the popular breeds sell for from $50 to $500 apiece. Besides, here is a field of industry in which women can be as successful as men. For generations English ladies of the highest social standing have kept kennels and reared blue blooded dogs.

In the recent political campaign in New York one of the leading anti-machine, Morris Byk, was vigorously aided by his four pretty sisters. They made a house to house canvass of the district, sent letters to wavering citizens, lobbied their brother in giving their speeches and made telling little arguments for him. Now, if women had the ballot in New York the four pretty Byk sisters could not only have done all they did do for their brother, but could have deposited four plump, round tickets to his count also.

One of the most pathetic and tragic stories I ever heard is that recently a farmer's wife killed herself by drinking carbolic acid because her husband drove her to incessant labor like a beast of burden. She was forced, or thought she was forced, to do a man's work in the fields and a woman's work in the house. So one day, after finishing the harrowing of a field, she went home and at one stroke put herself beyond the reach of the slave driver forever. But she would have done vastly better just to sit down flat and say to her master that he might chop her into mincemeat, but she would not work in the field. He would not have harmed her.

CHANGES IN FASHION.

Ways In Which a Last Year's Gown Can Be Altered.

There is a marked change in the fashion of skirts as well as in that of bodices. It has been threatened for some time past, but the authorities are keeping to graceful, becoming lines, and only occasionally do we see the very wide skirt, and a little fullness to the skirt is a decided improvement; but women, particularly the stout ones, should beware of many folds and shirrings around the hips. Some of the prettiest models of the hour, however, though more trimmed, have the skirts fairly long and rather plain to the knees.

Of course it is difficult to alter a last year's skirt, though it is quite possible to make a success of it. The excessive plainness can be taken off by a shaped basque of velvet. Whenever it is possible lift the skirt up at the back so as to gain more fullness and insert a little stiffening. In evening dress this can be obviated by the addition of two long soft sashends, always an effective mode.

The dinner gown shown is of crepe de chine and alencon lace. The brunelle sash is of pink satin edged with sable. JUDIC CHOLLET.

CLOTH AND FUR STYLES.

Cloth Coats Trimmed With Strappings—Fur Models.

Cloth much trimmed with flat braidings, grouped stitchings or strappings of the material is quite the fashion for coats, and some models have an addition of fur. Furriers are showing less of the bushy type of furs, and ermine is again modish, but is used chiefly as a garniture for dark furs.

White and blue fox figure on sumptuous evening wraps and as stoles and boas with velvet and fur cloth gowns. The tender graduations of gray shown in chinchilla and moleskin are more artistic when combined with cloth of similar tones and relieved by slight touches of color.

The fur coat is mostly becoming in sack form to wear over a slightly fitted skirt, but the petite woman is better suited by a bolero with a well fitted back and shaped belt.

The taffeta stole shown in the cut is composed of a double frill over the shoulders trimmed with lines of open fagoting done between bandings of narrow ribbon. The hat is of moire with a band of silk around the brim to match the stole, which band is ornamented with ovals of silk braid.

WHAT WOMEN WEAR.

Three Cornered Hats—Picture Millinery.

The three cornered hat is again in vogue. It comes well down on the hair at the back of the head and is elevated by a bandeau in front, taking a peculiarly beautiful line when the hat is equally well understood by both the designer and the wearer. Some very smart examples of this are in green and in black beaver.

Fashion decrees that the tailor made hat shall match the gown with which it is worn, but there is still a great liking for black, and with best gowns particularly picture hats can be very pretty and smart when all black.

The fashion of wearing headgear is also undergoing a change, and the tendency is to wear the hat much more off the face, so that it shows a great deal of the hair. The desired effect is gained by means of a high headband; otherwise the hats are flat, and the most chic are those with very little trimming. These hats with little in the way of decoration must be perfect in curve, with bold outlines. In fact, many of them are copies of the hats seen in Romney and Gainsborough paintings.

The cut shows a smart hat of black panne, with a lining of tucked chiffon. It is trimmed with a ruche of satin ribbon and a long, drooping ostrich plume. JUDIC CHOLLET.

DAINTY TOUCHES.

Little Things Which Transform a Gown.

There is a pretty notion in Paris just now to take away the straight appearance of the collar by little clusters of velvet ribbon on each side toward the front.

It is easier to remodel an old costume this season than ever before. For instance, an old sleeve may be made quite modish by cutting it at the elbow and putting in a puff of silk or lace.

The wide collars so universally becoming are a little out of date, but practically the same effect can be gained by strappings of velvet across the shoulders and a wide effect in trimming. High collars are the regulation thing, and only a few collarless models are seen, principally for evening wear.

The dainty house gown is of yellow net tucked and banded with ecru insertion. The fichu is edged with a wide ruffle of mechlin lace. The sleeves may be elbow length or have the two puffs shown with the ruffle at the wrist.

OLD FASHIONS THAT LIVE.

How Elizabethan and Medici Ruffs Appear in Modern Modes.

Rejuvenated fashions of long ago are much in favor. The high Elizabethan and medici ruffs are handsome and stately arrangements and are calculated to set off the beauty of woman. They are seen today in the round and high collars called medici and storm collars. If the ruff is on an outdoor garment, it is called a storm collar because it can be brought up against the face, protecting the neck and ears. If it is arranged for indoors, it is of lace or some delicate or else superbly rich material, but whatever may it is employed the collar makes a frame for the face, which women know is a great beautifier, and therefore they are loath to allow anything to take its place. As a dark and rich background gives a new value to a portrait, so does the medici frise, as it was called in the olden time, add to the delicacy of a face.

In an old book of costumes beginning with the first invention in the way of Queen Margot. An old and modern ruff. Queen Elizabeth.

Medici frise. Marie Stuart.

OLD FASHIONS THAT ARE USED TODAY.

dress I find the pictures herewith, and think them of sufficient interest to women to present them here. One picture shows Queen Elizabeth, and her sleeves are of peachblow satin, puffed and quilted with black velvet ribbons, which were as much liked in those days as now. Shoulder puffs added height and dignity, and these were crossed with satin straps which were held together with pearls. The wrists were finished with upturned cuffs of fine lace, and lace also edged the ruff, which stood high and wide in the back. Another picture shows the medici frise, the ends of which are square, while the Elizabethan comes to a point at the neck. A fall of fine lace finishes it. Another collar shown is still smaller and is matched in material by a pretty and becoming Marie Stuart cuff. There are several of these arrangements now made and being made for some of the smart set in New York, and they are to be worn at grand opera and many grand day functions. The woman of today seeks from every age and nation things for her own embellishment, and it seems that nothing comes amiss provided it has not become common. The Marie Stuart point over the brows has always been liked and is now about to have a real vogue in regular coifs. Another shape of a coif is shown, and this is made of rich blue velvet with strings of pearls around the edges and crossed on the soft, high crown. A small aigret of white marabou is placed at the left side. This picture represents the Queen Margot, and it is here also that the box of today had its origin.

Boas of lace, tulle, chiffon and liberty, to say nothing of feathers, are exceedingly fashionable, and probably they will be so all winter, for there is much more warmth in them than the lay mind would believe.

After them come the fur boas, which differ materially from those of last year. They are longer and fuller and larger around. It would never do to allow the fashion to remain exactly the same, for where would the fur dealer find his account if they did? There are tippets, and they look just like those that are found in the same old book as dating from the sixteenth century. There are muffs of every kind known, from dyed possum to sable and velvet with ribbon and fur trimmings.

The storm collars and collarettes are distinctly those of the old days, but copied in fur. The medici and Elizabethan shapes are as distinct now as then, which goes to prove that women are not so very fickle, after all, when they stick to one fashion for over four centuries.

These fur storm collars and collarettes are certainly pretty and convenient. They have some new grace this season, though it is difficult to define it, but perhaps it lies in the clever way in which different furs have been combined. The body of the collarette will be of some close fur, like lamb, astrakhan or seal, and the border will be of mink, marten, Hudson bay sable, Alaska sable or some other soft and deep fur.

Some of them have seal for the center and miniver or chinchilla for the facing of the collar and revers. In one or two cases I saw fine black broadcloth for the outside of the collar, with the finishing of rich skunk or Alaska sable. HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

DRESS FOR SERVANTS.

What Maids Should Wear In a Well Conducted House.

The appearance of the servants shows the social standard of the household. If the maids are untidy and slipshod, it is usually the fault of the mistress. During the morning, when the hard work is being done, all the maids should wear wash dresses, preferably dark blue and white. These dresses should be plainly made and on no account should the skirts touch the ground. A white turndown linen collar and linen cuffs, together with a triangular cap, complete the morning costume. In the afternoon a plain black alpaca or wool gown is the correct thing. With this should be worn an apron of fine lawn, prettily trimmed, and a fluffy cap. Starched linen collars and cuffs are also necessary.

The children's nurse may wear the same style of cotton gown as the other maids, with the addition of a long plain white apron made with a high bib. Her cap is larger than that of a waitress, and for street wear she puts to it a large Alsatian bow, with streamers reaching far down in the back. Her street gown in winter is black and in summer may be of white duck or any other white material.

AFTERNOON COSTUME.

The cook's cap is sufficiently large to completely cover her hair. She has also a white apron of butchers' linen the length of her skirt and reaching completely around her.

The lady's maid should wear a soft dress of black material. Her apron is a dainty French affair, with a large pocket. Around her neck a soft lawn silk or lace neckband is allowable. When the maid accompanies her mistress shopping, she wears a plain tailor made dress, with nothing to indicate her position.

The mistress should always insist on neatness of appearance, on the maid's hair being properly brushed and the caps and aprons being scrupulously clean. BEATRICE MILLER.

A PEACOCK ROOM.

A Quaint and Up to Date Blue and Green Scheme of Decoration.

"The originality of treatment in this guest chamber will doubtless appeal to many who delight in quaint and pretty things. The furniture is of mahogany, inlaid with holly wood stained blue, and pewter, the latter being used for appropriate mottoes such as "Fine Feathers Make Fine Birds" on the wardrobe and "If This Is Vanity, Who'd Be Wise?" over the mirror of the dressing table. The idea of vanity is ingeniously illustrated throughout by means of peacocks inlaid in pewter on the various pieces of furniture, appliqued on the blue linen bedspread and prominent on the well executed frieze in the design of a garden with hedge and clipped yew trees. The plain, dull blue paper shows up to good advantage, and the coloring of the carpet, the settle, the short window curtains and the hearth tiles contribute to the harmonious scheme.

The fireplace is especially quaint and worthy of notice.

R. DE LA BAUME.

Furs For Winter.

Mink is a handsome, refined and always fashionable fur, and many beautiful garments and pretty neck pieces, including stoles, are made of it. Mink, sable and skunk are all of the same family, the furriers tell us, but they are too thick for anything in the way of a tight garment, and so *are mostly for capes, mantles, trim*mings and fancy neck pieces. Nearly all the stoles are made quite flat around the neck and without any kind of attempt at a collar, storm or otherwise. Collars for children are made in the same way. Tails are put upon the neck pieces with a reckless disregard of natural history. Muffs are quite large, mostly plain, but there are some enormous ones to match long coats and also others with all sorts of fancy ruffles made of the fur.

A Woman of Enterprise.

Here is a little story. Read it: Some years ago a Penny Scudder went from Chicago to Texas as a governess. Four years ago she got the post of fence rider and cattle guard for Horseshoe ranch. She attended to her duties and likewise killed wild animals for whose scalps the state offered a bounty. She obtained $1,251 in this way and invested it in cattle. Now she owns over a thousand head.

GARDENING SCHOOLS.

Where Women Learn to Raise Fruit, Flowers and Vegetables.

The Rock Island Railroad company has a woman landscape gardener, Mrs. Annette McCrea. It is the duty of Mrs. McCrea to visit station after station of the road and plan the decoration of the grounds around each, likewise superintending the planting of flowers, trees and grass and seeing that all are kept in perfect order. This appointment is a eminently fitting one. It is only the beginning of what is to follow. Women will more and more become gardeners of all kinds. Fruit, flower and vegetable raising is well suited to woman's delicate perception and gift of patience in small things. In England a society of ladies some years ago established a school of horticulture for women, and it throve from the beginning. Its pupils are regularly graduated after they have learned horticulture and landscape gardening. In Great Britain the women landscape gardeners soon find good places. They are useful aids to village improvement societies.

A HOME GREENHOUSE.

One or two of these trained English women gardeners have migrated to the United States and found employment. In the planning out and superintendence of the work of parks, cemeteries, fair and country casino grounds, as well as of villages laid out on the park system, women succeed perfectly. There are now so many large ornamental estates in America that here is a field of itself for the landscape gardener, and here, too, women have been tried and proved themselves entirely capable.

If, however, a city woman, born and bred, with a few hundred dollars should essay to make a living in this to her untrodden field, the first thing she would be almost dead sure to do would be to lose all the money she had and still be ignorant of her trade. The right thing in such a case would be first to attend a school of practical gardening, even spending all her money in getting the necessary knowledge. At the end she would at least know how and be ready to go to work.

Here again, though, there is difficulty, for the United States is almost destitute of schools of horticulture. At some of the state universities and agricultural colleges are gardening courses for both sexes, and these are better than any other kind. At the same time it is beyond doubt that if a school of horticulture for women were started in every state in the Union it would prosper from the beginning.

Enterprising and up to date farm women who know the practical part of gardening might everywhere earn a good sum annually by taking a few boarding pupils into their homes and instructing them in this sure way of earning a good living.

One gardening school for women has been established at Groton, Mass. It is called the School or Horticulture and Landscape Gardening For Women and was founded and is conducted by a woman, Mrs. Edward Gilchrist Low. The seat of the enterprise is an old farm with a good orchard upon it. Greenhouses have been built around the home structure. The successful gardener near a good market now gets profit all the year round. The raising of radishes, lettuce and cucumbers in greenhouses is pleasant work and as easy as flower culture. There is a woman near Boston who has a handsome income from the culture of winter cucumbers.

The southern states constitute an especially favorable region for the exploiting of women's schools of horticulture and landscape gardening. The northern market for southern grown fresh vegetables is a good and constantly increasing one. Southern women, with their habitual outdoor activity, make excellent gardeners.

Meantime women at home on farms and in villages can make profit from this industry to a much greater extent than they do. They can learn from a reliable gardening book and from experience. Few women have knowledge of the use and beauty that can be got from even one acre of ground. A German woman who knew her business has this season filled 100 cans with fruit that grew in her own yard of less than one acre. Besides the fruit she raised all the vegetables the family wanted. Anywhere in the northern states a lean-to greenhouse for growing winter things may be attached to the home dwelling without great expense, particularly if the dwelling be of brick. In a good local greenhouse violets and carnations yield an enviable profit in winter. MARCIA CAMPBELL.

WOMEN IN BUSINESS

EVERY man has more respect for a woman, even his own wife, if he knows she has financial ability and can make her own way and more, too, in the world without depending on anybody. The true way to settle the woman question is for women to become financially independent. Money talks." Thus, too, talks Mrs. Lucia E. Blount of Washington, whose husband says she is a shrewder and more successful investor of money than he himself is, which is saying much. But Mrs. Blount is living her own teaching. She might be merely a fashionable society woman. Instead of that she is studying out practically the subject of profitable business investments for women, with a view to helping her sex achieve the financial independence she preaches. Mrs. Blount's inclinations lead her to mining investments, in which thousands of women have swamped their all. But this business woman does not listen to the persuasions of honey tongued mining promoters, half of whom ought to be hanged, if anybody ought, for the way in which they swindle women. Mrs. Blount herself goes in person to the exploited mine and examines it thoroughly before risking money on its chances of paying.

Mrs. Blount quotes with zest the example of Miss Mary Garrett, who gave a vast sum to Johns Hopkins university on condition that women should be admitted. And this shrewd benefactor added the proviso, "If ever in future there comes a time when it is *deemed expedient to close Johns Hop*kins against women, then this money shall be returned to the donor or her heirs." Johns Hopkins' doors will not be closed to women, Mrs. Blount declares it to be now the duty of rich *women when they make large invest*ments in any company or corporation to make the legal proviso that women shall always be on the directing board of such organizations.

Women are succeeding wonderfully in business enterprises of all kinds. They prosper as practical experts in the mining industry. That is a pleasant true story of the woman in Arizona who prospected her own claim. Her husband earned barely enough, work*ing early and late, to support the large* family, and the wife did the housework for them all. But day by day in the brief intervals she could snatch from cooking and baby tending she went to her claim near their cabin and *worked with pick, shovel and drill, do*ing everything, even to the dynamite blasting, with her own hands. Not for months only, but years, this dauntless woman kept to her task till she thoroughly prospected her claim. Not long ago she struck a silver vein that assayed $3,000 to the ton. She still works her mine, but now as superintendent, with a squad of men doing the manual labor.

It is now time for women to begin to establish industrial enterprises of their own and cease as generally working under others for small wages. Where they branch out for themselves intelligently and cautiously they almost invariably succeed. In New York city Miss May Hopkins, though only twenty-five years old, is at the head of a highly prosperous educational agency, which she established and built up entirely herself. She provides teachers for places where they are needed.

There, too, is Mrs. Coggin of the Sisseton country, one of the leading lumber operators of the Pacific coast. Her husband, who began the enterprise, died before his plans were finished. His wife, who had been his comrade and adviser throughout, continued them and proved herself even more capable than he had been. At the coming St. Louis fair will be exhibited some marvelously beautiful art ironwork from the factory of Mrs. Annes-Lyle, ironmaster of Thornhurst, England. Plucky, persevering women win in business all above the line.

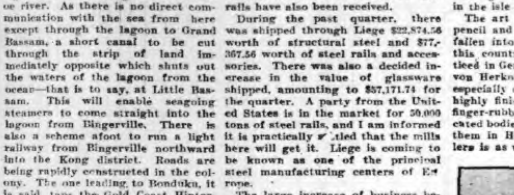
In Other Countries Than Our Own

THE DOINGS OF THE PEOPLE OF MANY LANDS CHRONICLED IN SHORT CORRESPONDENCE.

The Ivory Coast of Africa is a French colony lying on the west of the Gold Coast. The boundaries between the two colonies were defined in 1893, as the result of a convention which was drawn by an Anglo-French commission. Since then both colonies have shown the usual tendency to push into the hinterland, with the inevitable result that more delimitation has had to be done. An Anglo-French commission accordingly landed at Axim, in the Gold Coast colony, last autumn, and is proceeding inland as far as the ninth parallel—that is to say, about 300 miles inland. The Ivory Coast became a separate French colony in 1893, it having previously been under the jurisdiction of the governor of Senegal. Towards the interior it included, as a protectorate, the Kong territory, and thus, like all other French colonies in this region, joins with the French Soudan, and now includes the districts of Odjenneh, Kong and Bonna, which formed part of that territory. The two principal French towns are Assinie and Grand Bassam., The latter town is on the coast, and was, until lately, the seat of government. Owing to the unhealthiness of Grand Bassam, the governor now resides at Bingerville, in the Bay of Abidjean, an inlet on a *lagoon communicating with the Com*oe river. As there is no direct communication with the sea from here except through the lagoon to Grand Bassam, a short canal to be cut through the strip of land immediately opposite which shuts out the waters of the lagoon from the ocean—that is to say, at Little Bassam. This will enable seagoing steamers to come straight into the lagoon from Bingerville. There is also a scheme afoot to run a light railway from Bingerville northward into the Kong district. Roads are being rapidly constructed in the colony. The one leading to Bonduku, it is said, taps the Gold Coast Hinterland, and there is the beginning of the matter to be settled. Bonduku is fast becoming the center of trade between the French Soudan and the coast.



THE CHIEF OF BONDUKU ON HIS WAY TO VISIT THE FRENCH COMMANDANT.

The last British consular report draws attention to the trade of Bonduku, and goes on to say that French firms appear to be taking the place of those of other nationalities on the Ivory coast. Recent visitors to the Ivory coast describe the colony as one huge gold mine. The Ivory Coast colony possesses the peculiarity of being one of the few French colonies which receive no assistance from the home government, but, on the other hand, pays a small contribution to the mother country.

Foreign Commerce of German Southwest Africa.

The foreign commerce of German Southwest Africa made favorable progress in 1901. The exports increased from $214,200 in 1900 to $297,500. This increase consisted chiefly of guano, which is almost exclusively in the hands of a large English establishment in Cape Town. Ostrich feathers are rapidly becoming an article of export. In former years the natives were in the unrestricted possession of firearms, and it was their chief delight to shoot these profitable birds. To-day, the natives are permitted to have arms only in limited quantities, therefore the ostrich culture is beginning to revive. The imports into German Southwest Africa increased from $1,666,000 in 1900 to $2,380,000. The chief articles imported are railway materials, bridges, cement, lumber, beer and coal.

Government Control of Railways in Mexico.

The Mexican government has purchased the major part of the recent issue of the Interoceanic Railroad company's bonds, thus obtaining the controlling interest in the road.

The bonds were bought at 98¼ per cent. of their nominal value, and bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. annually. Payment was made from the reserve fund of the national treasury.

In commenting on the transaction, the public press says that the president and secretary of the treasury have been actuated by motives of the greatest importance to the welfare of the industries of the country, not in seeking a profitable investment for the reserve funds in the treasury, but in trying to prevent the formation of "pools" and "trusts," with a view of controlling the import and export traffic of the republic. The Mexican government being in control of a railroad of the first importance, like the Interoceanic railroad, all freight discriminations to the injury of native manufacturing and commercial interests will be prevented.

The railroads of the peninsula of Yucatan, Mexico, with the exception of the Southern railroad, have recently effected a combination, to be operated under one general management, and this has now been joined by the company owning the general or "final" wharf in the harbor of Progreso, there being left but one wharf, owned by the "Canton Wharf company," outside of the above combine.

At Merida, the capital of the state of Yucatan, there is an active movement on foot to organize a company for the purpose of establishing an electric power plant to furnish motive power for the street railway service in the city and suburbs.

Industrial Conditions in Liege, Belgium.

The industrial outlook here has greatly improved in the past few months, and the backbone of the hard times for this part of Europe seems to be broken. The United States has done much to stimulate industries. Three steel plants here are working on a 50,000-ton order of steel rails for Mexico, and a contract has just been closed for 27,000 tons for a road in Maryland; many smaller orders for structural steel and rails have also been received.

During the past quarter, there was shipped through Liege $22,874.56 worth of structural steel and $77,367.56 worth of steel rails and accessories. There was also a decided increase in the value of glassware shipped, amounting to $57,171.74 for the quarter. A party from the United States is in the market for 50,000 tons of steel rails, and I am informed it is practically settled that the mills here will get it. Liege is coming to be known as one of the principal steel manufacturing centers of Europe.

The large increase of business between this district and the United States is not all on one side. There is more inquiry for American goods than ever before, and the people seem to be in earnest. The greatest demand is for farm and industrial machinery, electrical supplies, and canned and dried fruits. The openings for these lines are good, but the merchants here want to open direct connections with the manufacturer and producer.

Lapse of Concession to Honduras Syndicate.

On account of the failure of the company styled the "Honduras Syndicate" to carry out the terms of its contract, the concession granted to it by the government (to contract an interoceanic railway, settle the foreign debt, and establish a bank) has lapsed. The syndicate was composed of Americans, and the contract was entered into in 1897. The syndicate was bound by the contract to construct a bridge over the Ulua river within four years, and having failed to do so, it was expected that the government would, in May, 1902, take possession of the road. The syndicate has, however, asked for a prorogue; the request was presented to congress, which adjourned without taking action. It is expected that the matter will be settled at the next session, which will be held this winter.

German Capital in Foreign Countries

Until 20 years ago, the German empire was one of the worst nations financially; but now, instead of being in need of foreign capital, Germany is following the example of England and France, and is loaning and investing money in foreign countries. According to a recent semi-official statement, there are about $2,000,000,000 of German capital invested in the United States and Mexico. It is estimated that another $2,000,000,000 are invested in Central and South America, some $250,000,000 in Turkey, some $1,000,000,000 in Africa, Australia and the far east. In addition to this, it is claimed that $3,000,000,000 are invested in stocks and bonds in different countries.

Fish Not a Brain Food.

Some people think that to eat an enormous quantity of fish will give them an enormous quantity of brains, but, according to a medical paper, this is a great mistake. The dwellers by the sea—the Eskimo and the fishermen of Labrador—have not shown any preponderance of brains. And because stale fish shine with phosphorescent light in the dark we must not think it particularly rich in phosphorus. As a matter of fact there is more water than phosphorus in fish.

ALLERS, THE ARTIST TRAVELER AND HIS WORK

A GERMAN PICTURE MAKER WHO HAS PAINTED THE PEOPLE OF ALL LANDS.

It is strange that a traveling artist, so admirable and so well known in his own country as Christian Wilhelm Allers, should be practically unheard of in the United States, where, among the numerous art students, at least, much attention is usually given each aspirant for fame along unique lines. It cannot be due to any jealousy on the part of our artists, for they have none of that, but are always willing and eagee to recognize merit wherever found, and are not prone to the ability only in the old masters. They seek the modern rather than the ancient in art, and worship at the shrine of the living rather than the dead, and care not from what country they come.

Yet few draughtsmen of modern times could surpass him in his own way with the pencil, and fewer still could match him in observation and humor. Nevertheless, not one in a thousand among the students or the art lovers have heard his name in this country. This may be, in part, because despite his popularity in Germany, he did not appear to champion his country in the Paris exhibition of 1900. But at that very time he was making beautiful character drawings in the isle of Samoa.

The art of drawing with the lead pencil and with the chalk-point, long fallen into comparative desuetude in this country, has always been practiced in Germany. In England, Prof. von Herkomer and his pupils have especially delighted in the work—the highly finished head with plenty of finger-rubbing, and roughly indicated bodies, are such as we often see them in Herr Allers' work. But Allers is as various in the details of his ding. "Our Navy," "The Germany Hunting Book," "The Club Entrance," "Things Unpoetical," and the like, give proof of a talent which belongs rather to a man of quick observation and humor than of imagination or creative power. But is not that what we must say of the older German school as a whole—even if it comes to it, of the hand which in the bright pages technique as his subjects themselves. But look at it closely and you will find echoes, as it were—proofs of *sympathy with many a notable draughts*man. Close observers will sometimes see the influence of M. Renouard; still more often Von Menzel has been the master; now there is the handling and even the eye of Oberlander, or of Wilhelm Leibl, or again of Max Klinger, or of Segantini, the Italian. Who then is the celebrated yet mysterious artist? He is a man 46 years old, a native of Hamburg, who began life as a lithographer (like Jules Cheret), and so gained his extraordinary facility of finger and wrist. After studying in the art school of Carlsruhe, where he learned drawing from Poecht and painting from Ferdinand Keller, he painted many portraits and life-size genre pictures (such as his "Life in Capri"), which are now all in private hands in Dusseldorf and Hamburg. But until he began to produce his numerous sketches, with their keen insight into life and character, he could not be said to have become famous. Now he is among the most popular of German graphic humorists, and widely accepted as an admirable artist. His clever works include studies of extraordinary excellence in their way—"Renz's Circus," "Behind the Scenes," "The Silver Wedding," "Our Navy," "The Germany Hunting Book," "The Club Entrance," "Things Unpoetical," and the like, give proof of a talent which belongs rather to a man of quick observation and humor than of imagination or creative power. But is not that what we must say of the older German school as a whole—even if it comes to it, of the hand which in the bright pages of Jugend struggle to be unconscious of their effort, and brush up old motifs till they think they are original? As if unconscious originality were a deliberate thing!

The great moment in Allers' career was when he determined to make a protracted tour around the world and draw the people of all countries. From Italy, where he was in 1896, he made other longer journeys—he was in Ceylon in February of 1897, and in Egypt later in the year; in Cairo, on the Nile, in Assouan, and then in Philae. The year 1898 was a fruitful one; India, Java, Bangkok, China, Japan, produced a cloud of studies of street characters and street scenes in Kobe, Yokohama, Hankow, Canton, Hong-Kong, Tingtau; and in 1900 many beautiful drawings of Samoa bring us back once more to the gentle native and to Robert Louis Stevenson. It is a wonderful record, and delightfully set down, as may be seen in the three examples issued herewith.

The artist sought to give not only the types of the various nationalities among which he has passed, but has recorded also characteristic occupations and customs. The Japanese mandarin girl, and Egyptian water carrier, the Tyrolese eagle slayer, the Assouan warrior, the Chinese missionary and public letter-writer, and the lemonade seller of Cairo are recorded with a truth equally felicitous and keen. The views in Japan, land*scape and street scene, are masterly* in pictoral arrangement and vivacity of suggestion, and the technique is so good that there is little of the drawing-master element about them such as we used to see in the old days. These drawings, no doubt, recall a good deal of the work of our great lithographers, for this is the style which made the stone so popular in the middle half of the nineteenth century, but the freedom of pencil upon paper necessarily exceeds the greater deliberation of the "greasy chalk" upon stone. And modern process has come to assist the artist in a way which lithography could rarely do.

ABBEY'S EARLY LIFE

Famous Artist Was an Indolent and Careless Youth.

Finished Sketches Only When Necessity Knocked at the Door—Always Was Industrious, But an Extravagant Dresser.

That success does not alter inborn character is proved to the satisfaction of C. R. Kelley, of Chicago, at all events, when he reflects on the habits and customs of Edwin Austin Abbey, R. A., and compares them with that famous artist's recent utterances.

Years ago, before Mr. Abbey ever thought to be selected to paint the coronation scene by royal command, he and Mr. Kelley were fast together, and the latter consequently had ample opportunity to study the painter's many idiosyncrasies.

That was 25 years ago, a time long enough to win for one fame or two competitors in a mighty wielder of the brush and to elevate the other to a high place in the ranks of Chicago republicans.

"I well remember Mr. Abbey as a youth of 18," said Mr. Kelley to a Chicago Chronicle reporter. "He was my roommate in Williamsburg then and seemed to spend more time in dreaming than in work. Often he would say to me: 'My board bill will be due to-morrow, and I must get out a sketch for Harper's to-night.' Then he looked over a pocket sketchbook in which he was continually jotting down what seemed to me to be mere lines, but to him incidents found in his daily life. Something would be selected and the next morning Harper's would hand him a check for $100 in return for it.

"Abbey found a sale for all the sketches he could do for Harper's Weekly, and much of his work found its way into the monthly. Yet while he was in receipt of a large income he seldom had any money and was indolent to the degree of being lazy.

"His money, however, was not spent with evil companions or in saloons, for I do not remember that I ever saw him take a drink or smoke a cigar. Instead, any article of wearing apparel that pleased him would be purchased without regard to price. Silk underwear, hose and fine furnishing goods were his hobby.

"His particular forte was in facial expressions, and I imagine that this specialty will be well brought out in his work on the 15 panels depicting the 'Search for the Holy Grail,' which he is working upon for the new Boston public library.

"I can see Abbey now as he used to appear to me in the old boarding house, sketching on a piece of cardboard with some 30 faces traced out under his skilful hand and no two of them at all alike. When he had finished he would sit back and laugh at his work.

"Abbey could always see something worthy of his pencil in the serio-comic side of life and this little notebook was full of such eccentricities. The value of his work was shown in a roving commission given him by Harper's to go abroad on a salary of $10,000 a year. Specimens of his early work may be seen in the draperies for the Vanderbilt library, *for which it is said he received $50,*000. I was not surprised to learn that he had been selected to paint the coronation scene, for I always believed him to be destined to become the greatest painter of modern times.

"This further reminds me," continued Mr. Kelley, "of his early hopes to one day attain the fame and money necessary to become a member of the famous Artists' club in New York. His marriage to Miss Gertrude Mead, of Greenwich, Conn., whom I had known as a child and who I had no knowledge that he had ever met, is another link in our lifelong acquaintance. While he was indolent in his early career, possibly a characteristic of Philadelphia birth, I believe his objection to living in America is due to a desire to study English home life and obtain greater conveniences for his art studies, for he is thoroughly American."

In a recent magazine a notable tribute is paid the American artist in the following terms:

"Saturated with English literature, domiciled in an English village, fond of English rural life, Mr. Abbey stands out as more British in sympathy and manner than the British themselves. In the coronation he has great opportunity."

SULTAN SULEIMAN the Glorious—may Allah grant him peace!—once upon a time disguised himself and, accompanied by his grand vizier, also in disguise, traveled through the country to acquaint himself with the sentiments of his subjects. Upon a winter day, just before sundown, he encountered an old man who, in spite of the cold, was busily plowing his sterile bit of land. The sultan stopped, blessed the labor and looked on for a few minutes without saying a word. When the peasant turned his weary oxen homeward, the sultan spoke:

"Whence comes the snow upon these mountains?"

"From the hard times," replied the old man.

"And do the bears have dens in the forest?"

"Just as large as God has made them."

"Are you in the habit of skinning your asses in this country?"

"Whenever the opportunity offers, Effendam."

In the meantime the peasant had finished his preparations for going home. The two wayfarers accompanied him. When they arrived at the gate the old man invited the strangers to enter. His wife brought food and drink and prepared a bed.

The grand vizier could not get the questions which the sultan had put to the peasant out of his head. Finally, he could no longer control his curiosity and asked his imperial master for an explanation.

The sultan looked at the vizier and shook his head.

"How is that, Muharem; you, the grand vizier of the Sublime Porte, have not understood my questions? Miserable wretch, if you cannot answer them by morning your honors will be taken from you." Thereupon the sultan lay down and soon was lost in sound sleep.

Muharem tried to think what the snow, the bear and the asses could mean. The longer he thought, the more confused became his brain. At last, when the melodious snore of his lord and master revealed that he was sleeping the sleep of the just, he arose and aroused the peasant who was resting in the adjoining room.

"Old man," whispered Muharem, "what did my master mean by the snow on the mountain?"

"He referred to my white hair, Effendum; which, I told him, came from the hard times."

"Very well; and now about the large dens of the bears?"

"He asked for a resting place for himself and you in my house. I told him that we must put up with what Allah has given us."

"Excellent; most excellent. But now about the ass who is being skinned hereabouts?"

"That, Effendum, is a great secret which I will not reveal to you."

"But if I shall beg it as a favor, old man?"

"Not even then, my lord."

"Here is a gold piece. It is yours if you will answer me."

"That I may not do, Effendum."

The grand vizier continued to implore, but the peasant remained inexorable. Muharem at last sought his humble bed, still searching for an explanation of the riddle. Soon the cock began to crow—he was no wiser than before. The fear of losing his wealth and honors was constantly before his eyes. In his despair, he ripped open his belt and took out enough gold pieces to fill his turban. With this heavy load he once more entered the old man's room, aroused him, and said:

"All this is yours. What did my master mean when he spoke of the opportunity to skin the ass?"

With a smile on his face the peasant took the treasure, and said:

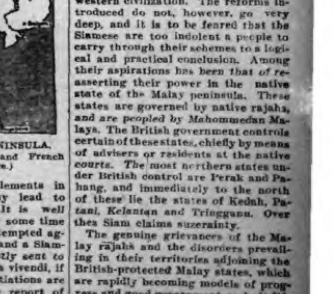
"See now, Effendum, the opportunity has come."

FRANCE IS EXCITED.

Views with Alarm British Aggressiveness in Siam.

Situation Is One That May Lead to Serious Trouble—Brief Resume of a Peculiar Diplomatic Entanglement.

ALTHOUGH there is only the shadow of a foundation for the report, recently published in Paris, that a regiment of Sikhs had "occupied" Kelantan (a Malay state under Siamese suzerainty), yet there are elements in the situation which may lead to awkward consequences. It is well known that Siam has for some time been resitive under the attempted aggressions of the French and a Siamese envoy has been recently sent to Paris to arrange a modus vivendi, if possible. While the negotiations are still going on comes the report of this "occupation" by Sikh troops, supposed to have been dispatched from Singapore and immediately the colonial party in France clamor for similar advances from the French sphere. Only a few weeks ago French Chauvinists got up a scare on account of the supposed employment by Siam of 1,500 Sikh soldiers under British officers. This report as founded on the fact that about 150 Indians were engaged at Bangkok on police duties under a couple of civilian police officers. The present army of occupation is found on inquiry to dwindle down in the same way to 30 Punjabis employed by the rajah of Kelantin as a guard.



SIAM AND MALAY PENINSULA.
(Map Illustrating British and French Spheres of Influence.)

These exaggerations and misunderstandings, absurd as they seem, have their origin in the unsatisfactory and unstable condition of Siamese affairs. Ever since the signature, in 1896, of the "declaration" by which Great Britain and France guaranteed to Siam the integrity of the territory embraced in the basin of the Menam and neighboring rivers, together with the coast line from Muong Bang Tapan on the west to Muong Pase on the east, France has regretted her share of the bargain, for the sphere of which she gained possession has proved of little worth, and at the same time she has eyed with disfavor the growing influence of Britain in Siam.

Siam is the last remaining tropical oriental kingdom to retain its independence, and with the example of Japan it has made efforts to preserve its national existence by adopting western civilization. The reforms introduced do not, however, go very deep, and it is to be feared that the Siamese are too indolent a people to carry through their schemes to a logical and practical conclusion. Among their aspirations has been that of re*asserting their power in the native* state of the Malay peninsula. These states are governed by native rajahs, and are *peopled by Mahommedan Ma*lays. CHANCE TO REFORM.

A New Resident of the borough halted at the southeast coner of Jackson avenue and Somerset street the other day and inquired of An Old Citizen as to the location of Park place.

"It's right across the street," replied An Old Citizen.

"This is Jackson avenue," protested A New Resident.

Then had to come the explanation that there wasn't a street in North Plainfield which had the same name east and west of Somerset street. Nobody has ever been able to give an rational explanation of why this state of affairs exists but it has been allowed to continue simply because no one has ever made any effort to do away with a decidedly misleading arrangement.

That affluent the city of Plainfield is showing North Plainfield an excellent example in reforming its street names. LaGrande avenue is to be wiped off the map and East Seventh street is to hold forth where it should have long ago. Because certain of the thoroughfares in the city running east and west, which have numbered titles, happen to carve from their natural path in the eastern end of the city, new names are given them in order to do away with the confusion of having numbered streets cross each other. There is no need, however, of changing the names of the streets which pursue the proper path. East Seventh street was called LaGrande avenue for no particular reason as East Ninth street became Franklin place and East Eighth street Crescent avenue before they crossed it. Now the Common Council is about to change the name back again as it should be.

North Plainfield has not even the excuse of curved streets for changing the names east and west of Somerset street. Under the existing conditions, the stranger is simply lost in the borough on account of the peculiar arrangement of the street names. If the Borough Council desires to greatly improve local conditions besides simplifying its street directory, it will eliminate a host of titles for streets and allow one to do duty for an entire thoroughfare.

WEAK ARGUMENTS.

It was not to be expected that any such important municipal improvement as the establishment of a system of sewers in North Plainfield could be made without opposition, even though it is apparent to every fair minded person that sewers will be of decided benefit to that community. Even now at the mere mention of the subject there comes objection from a few. Arguments are advanced against the establishment of the sewer system but they are not the kind that are going to appeal to a progressive community.

First, it is argued that because North Plainfield has existed without sewers so long, there is no need of ever building them. Arguing on those premises, no public improvement would ever be made and progress would be an unknown quantity. If the borough is going to keep pace with the city, sewers must come and without delay. It the present conditions continue, the prosperity which is visiting this section is going to keep on the south side of Green brook.

Another argument advanced against the present movement is that B. A. Hegeman, Jr., who is chairman of the Borough Sewage Commission, has had no experience with such municipal problems and therefore is not qualified to serve at the head of such an organization. Mr. Hegeman is a former mayor of North Plainfield and is particularly well acquainted with the conditions there. He is a successful business man and has already shown his wisdom in this matter by consulting the best authorities on the subject. While he may not be an expert, he is better qualified to judge what will be to the best interests of the borough than some comparative stranger or one who knows little or nothing about the municipal affairs of the borough.

Sewers in the borough must be built. It is only a question of time. A few men cannot block the prosperity of that community. As long as North Plainfield is not a part of Plainfield it is compelled to compete with the city. In order to compete it must offer something like equal advantages. Every modern community has sewers nowadays and the suburban resident is not going to the place that does not have them.

The New Jersey Training School for Feeble-minded Girls and Boys at Vineland is doing a most efficient service, in spite of the fact that there is a constitutional provision which prevents the State from giving the full support to the institution that it deserves. All the buildings, lands and improvements at the school have been provided by the charitable people of New Jersey. There are now in the institution 280 children, and of these the State supports 236 on a per capita basis per annum. The other fifty-four inmates are either private pupils or are maintained by charity. The institution has an endowment fund, which is, as yet, inadequate, and for which contributions are desired. Appeals to the public for aid in this great work are made by the board of trustees of the school, at the special donation days being Thanksgiving and Christmas, when gifts of any character are acceptable.

The Consumers League of New Jersey has an open letter to Christmas shoppers in another column. It asks them to make their purchases early in the season and in the daytime aiming to relieve the overworked conditions of the holiday season for the employes at the various stores. This request to purchase early finds the heartiest response from the merchants. It would be far easier and much more satisfactory to all concerned if Christmas shoppers would pay their visits to the stores early in the month instead of waiting until the night before Christmas. Those who go early have the pick and they will get far more attention than if they delay until the last moment when everybody and everything is in a chaotic condition.

The Lamp of Steady Habits

The lamp that doesn't flare up or smoke, or cause you to use bad language; the lamp that looks good when you get it and stays good; the lamp that you never willingly part with, once you have it; that's

The New Rochester.

Other lamps may be offered you as "just as good" —they may be, in some respects, but for all around excellence, there's only one. To make sure the lamp offered you is genuine, look for the name on it; every New Rochester lamp has it.

PROGRAMME IS ARRANGED

FOR MEETING OF NEW JERSEY HIGH SCHOOL TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

1. W. Travell, of This City, is President—The Programme is Given in Brief.

Arrangements have just been completed by the New Jersey High School Teachers' Association for its fourteenth semi-annual meeting. It will take place in the assembly room of the public library building, of Newark, on Friday and Saturday, December 5 and 6. Principal I. W. Travell, of this city, is president of the association and A. B. Meredith, of Nutley, formerly science instructor in the City High School, is treasurer.

The Friday session will begin with a reception in the parlors of the Continental Hotel, on Broad street, at 6:30 in the evening, after which dinner will be served in the banquet hall. At its conclusion an address will be made by Professor Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University. Saturday the members will re-convene at 9:30 in the morning and the following programme will be followed out: Paper, "High School Mathematics," Eugene R. Smith, Montclair; address, "The Qualifications and Training of High School Teachers and Principals," by Prof. Paul H. Hanus, of Harvard University; discussion, led by Dr. J. M. Green, Trenton Normal School; question box on High School problems by Prof. Hanus; election of officers; paper, "State Supervision of High Schools," by Dr. C. J. Majory, of Newton; discussion led by Dr. F. E. Spaulding, Passaic, Hon. Charles J. Baxter, State superintendent of education, and Dr. Louis Bevier, Jr., of Rutgers College and member of the State Board of Education. Adjournment will be made at 12:50.

WITHIN AN HOUR.

Borough Mayor Bought Lot and Broke Ground Without Delay.

North Plainfield may be said to be rather slow in some things but it can take comfort in the fact that it has an enterprising mayor. Saturday afternoon Mayor Newton B. Smalley purchased a building lot on Mercer avenue through the agency of the real estate dealer, George F. Brown, and within an hour afterward he had broken ground for a handsome new house. The lot adjoins the house of Mrs. Darby on Mercer avenue.

Going to South Africa.

Albert E. Woltmann, son of Emil Woltmann, of West Seventh street, sails this week for south Africa, where for the next three years he will have charge of the Standard Oil Company's interests. Mr. Woltmann is a graduate of the Plainfield High School class of '94 and was one of the whist "four" which last represented the Park Club so well in the State contests.

Knocked Down by Wheel.

John Cox, of 316 Berckman street, complains that there are a number of employes of the Aluminum Press Works who daily use his front walk for a bicycle path. Saturday, his son Ernest, was knocked down by one of these wheelmen, who gave his name as Charles Harold. The little lad was somewhat cut and bruised although his injuries were not serious. Mr. Cox wishes that wheelmen would keep off his sidewalk in the future.

Coal for All.

The local coal dealers are not now complaining of a scarcity of coal. The shipments are more regular and nearly every yard has a fair supply of anthracite.

LIBRARY'S BEST AIDS FOR CHARITY WORKERS

Exhibit of Books On "Practical Philanthropy" Held at Public Library Saturday.

THE FIRST OF A SERIES

LIST OF THE BEST BOOKS RELATING TO THIS WORK.

Divided Into Four Sets, Working Classes, Social Reform, Dependent Classes, Christianity and Social Reform—Other Details.

The first of a series of public exhibits to be given at the Public Library attracted a goodly number of people there Saturday afternoon and evening. The subject, "Practical Philanthropy," is just now interesting a great many persons who are engaged in charitable enterprises. As very aptly expressed at the exhibit, the work of charity is today being carried on along vastly different lines than a few years ago. The tendency now is toward the most practical and it was for this purpose that the exhibit was held.

Some of the very best books relating to this work were placed in the exhibit They were divided into four sets under the following captions: "Working Classes—plans for their social and economic betterment," "Social Reform—six good stories dealing with social reform," "Dependent Classes—Ausggestive list of books, especially recommended," and "Christianity and Social Reform." Miss Mary Whitton was in charge of the first division, Miss Florence Tweedy the second, Miss Mary Tweedy the third and Miss Emily Tracy the fourth.

As previously stated the exhibit was one of great suggestive value to all who are engaged in philanthropic or religious work of any sort and had a tendency of enlighten those in this work. These books do not represent the library's entire list of books on this subject but are simply the very best ones. Special mention is made of the proceedings of the National Conference of Charities and Correction, presented by Mason W. Tyler. These are considered the very best authority on this subject.

Among the books shown were those treating with charity organization work for boys and girls, friendly visiting, consumers leagues, settlement work, child labor, housing of the poor, lives of philanthropists, stories dealing with social problems, liquor problem, prison reform, Sunday-schools, etc.

CLASS RECEPTION.

Juniors of City High School Gave a Pleasant Social Gathering Saturday Evening.

Franklin Hall was the scene of a very pleasant social gathering, Saturday evening on the occasion of the sociable given by the junior class of the City High School.

Though the rain kept many away, each of the four classes of the school was well represented and all who came enjoyed a very pleasant time.

In the early part of the evening, several informal charades were given by different members of the class under the direction of VanWyck Brooks, the class president. An informal dance brought the evening's entertainment to a pleasant close.

Candy, cake and lemonade was served by a committee composed of Miss Frances VanDeventer, chairman and the Misses Helen Robbins, Laura Bent, Grace Wilcox, Eloise Haven, Mae Batchelder, and Antoinette Moodey. The committee in charge of the affair was Miss Elizabeth Phillips, chairmas, VanWyck Brooks, Francis Anderson, Miss Mae Batchellor, Harold Fenno and George L. Babcock.

TWO STRONG SERMONS.

Dr. Sanders, of New York, Preached at First Baptist Church.

The First Baptist church was well filled Sunday at both services, when two exceptionally strong sermons were given by Rev. Dr. Henry M. Sanders, of New York. In the morning he pictured man's littleness as compared with the creation of the world, the moon, sun and large bodies of matter, and told how man, through God's help, had been assisted in utilizing the fiery forces of nature. In the evening his theme was along the line of faith and works, showing how the two are inseparable. At the morning service there was a violin solo by Fullerton Waldo, and a soprano solo by Miss Luella Harris.

Clever Amateur Work.

"An Indian Image," a farce dealing with school life, was presented in a clever manner at the Casino, Saturday night, by the Pickwickians, a New York organization. It abounded in funny situations that kept the audience laughing continuously.

Normal Sunday-School Class.

The Sunday-school teachers of the Congregational church have formed a normal class for the study of the weekly lessons. The class will meet every Friday evening at the homes of the various teachers.

New Electric Light.

The new electric light ordered by the Council has been located on West Front street near the First Baptist church. It is a great benefit to people passing at that point.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement has recently been announced of Miss Clementine R. Yates, of East Seventh street, to Clarence Dudley Holman, of Pittsfield, Mass.

In Justice Nash's Court.

The case of Baldwin against Masker has been adjourned in Justice Nash's court for one month.

ALIS TEAM OUTPLAYED ORANGE FIELD CLUB

Crack Junior Team Went Down Before the Superior Strength of Alis' Eleven.

THE SCORE WAS 19 TO 0

PLUCKY FIGHT PUT UP BY ORANGE BOYS AGAINST HEAVY ODDS.

Alis A. A. Had Plenty of Substitutes in the Game—Pond Played Great Game—Carrying an Orange Crack Over the Line for a Safety.

The Alis A. A. football team, of that part of it which was not at New Haven attending the game between Yale and Harvard, met and defeated the Orange Field Club Saturday afternoon on Hope Common by a score of 19 to 0. There was a large number of spectators at the game until the rain began to fall after which the game was called just before the end of the second half. The Orange Field Club was very greatly outweighed.

At 3:30 the game was called and Orange kicked off to Alis and the ball was caught by Davis. Then Orange got the ball and tried line plunges. Alis forced the Orange boys to kick.

Orange kicked to H. Smith and the ball being passed to Phillips was carried back forty yards. Cathcart fumbled but finally recovered it at the forty yard line. Then Cathcart, through right end, took the ball for a touchdown but Phillips did not kick the goal. Score, 5-0.

Orange kicked to Alis and Pond, who was being closed in on by the Orange Field Club, made a phenomenal kick in which he sent the ball down to almost the goal line where C. Smith fell on it. Orange tried to work it down the field but was forced to kick. H. Smith made a touchdown and the goal being kicked by Phillips made the score 11-0.

Orange kicked to Alis and Pond ran ten yards and kicked the ball to the goal line where Sherwin fell on it. Orange punted to the twenty-five yard line and Wilson ran it back twenty yards, when Pond, through center, made a run of ten yards. Pond kicked the ball from the thirty-five yard line but the Orange getting the ball rushed it back fifteen yards. Pond then made his humorous play by kicking one of the O. C. men up and shoving him across the line thus making a safety which gained the Alis two points, making the score 13-0.

Orange Field Club kicked to Alis and then when the ball came back into the hands of the Orange boys the game was called for the first half.

Orange kicked to Alis and then Phillips made a clever run and tossed the ball to Pike who scored a touchdown. The goal being kicked by Phillips made the score 19-0. The game then continued for few minutes when, on account of the rain, the game was called.

The lineups were:

But One More Opportunity to Play for Golf Committee Cup at Hillside Club.

CONTEST A LIVELY ONE

SATURDAY'S PLAY GAVE NEWKIRK LEAD BY TWO-THIRDS OF A POINT.

Contest Will be Concluded Next Saturday—W. T. Glenney Can Not be Beaten for Boys' Cup Now—Saturday's Scores.

The friends of Howard deP. Wright were disappointed in his play for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course, Saturday. He held the lead with twenty and one-half points, but E. T. Newkirk won first honors and he now is in the lead with twenty-one and one-sixth points, while Wright drops to second position. There were only five contestants for this cup, Saturday, and Wright finished last. Second honors fell to Olaf Saugstad, who made a net score of 77, while H. W. Beebe secured third honors with a 79.

The scores for the Golf Committee cup are as follows:

THEY HONORED HER MEMORY

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. STEBBINS HELD MONDAY.

Six Hundred Employes of Pond Tool Works Attended Funeral—Rev. Mr. McKelvey Officiated.

The funeral services of Mrs. Albert C. Stebbins were held on Monday from the late home on West Seventh street, where an unusually large number of people gathered to show their respect and esteem to one who was greatly admired for her true womanly character. All of the employes, six hundred, from the Pond Machine Tool Works, of which Mr. Stebbins is the vice president, attended the services, showing their high regard for their esteemed employer in the sad hour of his bereavement.

The services were conducted by Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, who spoke impressively. During the services, "Nearer My God to Thee" and "I Do Not Understand," were sung effectively by Elmer E. Runyon, Elmer D. Cutting and Wm. N. Runyon.

There was a profusion of floral tributes from a great many friends, the most noticeable of which were two handsome pieces from the employes of the Pond Machine Tool Works. One was a column, six feet high, made up of sacred lilies, American Beauty roses, stervia, white narcissus, smilax, violets, ferns, galax leaves and tied with white satin ribbon. The other piece was a large pillow consisting of most of the flowers of which the column was made. On each piece was the inscription, "From the Employes of The Pond Machine Tool Works." They bore silent, but impressive testimony of high esteem in which Mrs. Stebbins was held.

The interment took place in Hillside cemetery. The pall-bearers were Elliott T. Barrows, W. A. Pinto, Isaac W. Rushmore and I. L. Manning.

BAPTIST CHURCH FAIR CAME TO A CLOSE

Three Days Bazaar at Old Rockfellow Store Will Net Over $400 for Church.

SATURDAY ENDED IT

F. T. OSTROM CONDUCTED THE AUCTION WHICH WAS A FEATURE.

Was Given by the Ladies' Aid Society, Assisted by Members of Christian Endeavor Society of Park Ave. Baptist Church.

The bazaar, which was conducted by the women of the Park Avenue Baptist church, for the benefit of the church, during the latter part of the past week, came to a successful close Saturday evening in the store formerly occupied by G. W. Rockfellow at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street. Considering the stormy weather, the attendance was large and, as was the case during the entire run of the fair, the patronage was generous. When the fair had closed and the proceeds had been counted up for the three days' run, it was found that the women had taken in a little over $500, which was better than they anticipated. Out of this amount the expenses will have to be aid which will leave a net profit of about $440.

A feature of the closing of the fair was an auction, during which those articles which were not disposed of during the term of the fair. The auctioneer was F. T. Ostrom, who brought good prices as a result of his clever manner of presenting the goods for sale. After the auction sale it was found that there were a few fancy articles which remained unsold and these will be disposed of at a tea which the women of the Ladies' Aid Society will hold after the holidays, when the bride doll, which was to have been disposed of Saturday evening, will be sold.

The bazaar was held and conducted by the Ladies' Aid Society, assisted by the members of the Christian Endeavor Society. The officers of the Ladies' Aid Society, who planned the decorations which, as described in The Daily Press, were distinctly unique and very attractive, were: President, Mrs. F. T. Ostrom; first vice president, Mrs. L. A. Udele; second vice president, Mrs. Walter H. Freeman; secretary, Miss Carrie Dunham; treasurer, Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson.

SOLDIERS BEATEN IN RAIN

COMPANY K'S FOOTBALL ELEVEN DEFEATED BY WESTFIELD TEAM.

Score Was 5 to 0—Touchdown Made by Adams Who Secured Ball on a Fumble.

The football game between Company K, of this city, and the Westfield eleven was pulled off, Saturday afternoon, and resulted in a score of 5 to 0 in favor of the Westfields. The game was not finished owing to the heavy rain.

The game was played at Westfield and a large number of people witnessed the game. Tobin, Dewey, Trainor and Adams did the star playing for the Westfields and it was through the clever run of the Westfield quarter back that the single touchdown was made. Adams took the ball from a fumble made by one of the local players and rushed it down the field in the first half and scored a touchdown. As Adams was unable to kick the goal the score remained 5 to 0.

It was shortly after this that the first half came to a close and then the rain began to fall in torrents and by common consent the game was called about the middle of the second half.

The lineups were:

ABOUT THE ROGERS SUIT

WHAT JEWELERS' CIRCULAR HAS TO SAY ABOUT IT.

The International Silver Company is Going to Fight Plainfielder in Higher Court.

The following taken from the Jewelers' Circular, a weekly publication, regarding the famous suit of the International Silver Company against the Wm. H. Rogers Corporation, of Plainfield, will be of interest to many. It was published in last week's issue and is as follows:

"John P. Bartlett, of Mitchell, Bartlett & Brownell, counsel in New York for the International Silver Company, when seen Thursday by a Circular-Weekly reporter in regard to the refusal of Vice Chancellor Stevens, of the Court of Chancery, Trenton, to grant a temporary injunction in the suit of the International Silver Company against the William H. Rogers Corporation, to restrain the latter from the further use of the name Rogers on silver plated ware, said that in reviewing the memorandum filed by Vice Chancellor Stevens he is inclined to believe that the only grounds upon which the refusal was based was that of laches.

"However," continued Mr. Bartlett, "the decision was only in regard to the temporary injunction, and we hope to be successful in our efforts to obtain a permanent injunction. We will begin on the final hearing for this injunction as soon as we can get the necessary evidence and can take testimony.

"If the final injunction is denied as we still have the United States Circuit Court in which to begin action against Rogers' customers. If we cannot stop him from manufacturing goods with our stamp on them, we can enjoin his customers from using them when they are made, and thus bring him to a halt.

"Mr. Bartlett appeared to be slightly surprised that the New Jersey Court did not follow the precedents established by the United States Courts, which have already settled the points in another controversy, in favor of the International Silver Company."

THEATRICAL.

As usual, the Keith bill for the coming week will be note-worthy both for quality and quantity. WHY THIS COUNTRY SHOULD BE GRATEFUL ful progress in this country," the pastor said, "and today a man must strive harder to remain an ignoramus than he would to acquire knowledge in America. Colleges only a few decades ago were for gentlemen of wealthy parents, but now it is possible for any one to receive an education, in fine colleges where opportunities are offered to young men, both poor and wealthy, and correspondence schools which enable those studiously inclined to advance rapidly. It was a studious rail splitter which became the prophet of his country and it is the poor boy today that is bound to advance to prominence.

"The daily newspaper and the magazine and periodical which are read at home are sources of information as well as the free lectures which are given in all our large cities. These have taught the farmer to sow his seed scientifically instead of the haphazard manner in which he used to sow it, and creates a natural telephone which enables him to know what kind of seed the ground in a certain field prefers. Alexandria boasted of 400,000 volumes in its library but today we have in our homes throughout our country millions of volumes. These with the papers and magazines shows education at the feet of the ignorant and for this fact, if for no other we have reason to give thanks to God."

The pastor touched on the bountiful supply of food in this land. "Which," he declared, "enables us to not only feed our own people but to supply the world besides. We have occasion to be thankful for peace and prosperity," said the preacher, "for peace is the Gibraltar of America. When we should be especially thankful for eyesight, hearing, clothing, and all the other blessings which are wonderful blessings but which we become so accustomed to that we are inclined to consider them as being commonplace, but once deprived of them we would at once realize the value of tehm."

"The infidel and the unbeliever," said the pastor in closing, "will say there is no God, and it is written that 'the fool in his heart has said that there is no God.' The world may be going to the devil on a mad gallop and cannot be stopped by the saiyngs of athiests and infidels. We must not forget to thank God for the work being done by the missionaries at home and abroad, so on Thanksgiving Day let us thank God from whom all blessings flow."

The ceremony took place in the West Troy, N. Y., Episcopal church, Sunday evening, the bride being Miss Maude Quinlan, of Glens Falls, N. Y.

A reception was given the young people at the home of the bride's uncle after which they returned to this city. For the present they will reside with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Brokaw, of Columbia avenue.

ART AND MUSIC COMBINED

NEW PRODUCTION ARRANGED BY J. FLETCHER BILLETT.

Illustrated With Over a Hundred Dissolving Views—It is Called "Immanuel."

Much interest has been manifested in a Plainfield production of art and music which has been copyrighted by J. Fletcher Billett, of this city. The composition includes the works of Handel, Beethoven, Gounod and others, presenting the choicest of sacred composition, including the pastoral symphony and other prominent numbers from the "Messiah," Beethoven's March, Gounod's "Sacred Head Now Wounded," and "Unfold Ye Portals Everlasting."

These compositions are illustrated by over one hundred dissolving views presenting the artistic work of the world's famous artists, including Dore, Hoffman, Zimmerman. These make a strong combination of art and music, which will present the most realistic life of Christ. A short introductory is given at the opening of the programme, illustrating Dudley Buck's "Rock of Ages," Leibe and Schilling's "Nearer My God to Thee," and "Ninety and Nine," by Campion.

"The programme of "Immanuel," for that is the name given to this work, is divided into five parts: "The Nativity," "The Ministry," "The Rejection," "The Crucification," and "The Redeemer," and includes solos, quartette and chorus selections.

APPRAISERS OBJECT.

Not in Favor of Plan to Merge Drake Land Companies Into Another Concern.

Aaron Turnstall and Christopher Carthlige, of Trenton, recently applied to Vice Chancellor Pitney for the appointment of appraisers to appraise the stock of the land companies represented by S. D. Drake. This application resulted in the appointment of J. Wesley Johnson, of this city, and Mr. Fell and Mr. Hartley, of Trenton. It has been said that the appraisers were not in accord with the merger plan, whereby these various companies were merged into the Columbia Realty Company.

As a matter of fact, it is said, that Mr. Turnstall is a director of the four companies mentioned, an officer and voted at each meeting for the merger. He is also a director of the Columbia Realty Company and voted at a meeting of that company for the combination. This action does not affect the business of the company. The stock is valuable and will doubtless become more so. Mr. Drake has engaged A. A. Clark, of Somerville, to represent the company in the matter.

MUHLENBERG GRADUATE WEDS NUPTIAL KNOT QUIETLY TIED

MISS VIRGINIA STRYKER MARRIED TO SOMERVILLE BUSINESS MAN.

Ceremony Took Place at Bride's Home at Monmouth Junction November 19.

Monmouth Junction, Nov. 20—A wedding of considerable interest took place last evening at the home of De-Witt Stryker, when his daughter, Miss Virginia Stryker, and Lloyd Gamble, of Somerville, were married in the presence of sixty guests from Philadelphia, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Plainfield, Somerville and this place. The home was prettily decorated for the affair with roses and autumn leaves. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Reed, of the Reformed church.

The bride wore a handsome traveling gown with white silk waist and she carried bride roses. She was attended by Miss May Kernan, of Plainfield, as bridesmaid, who wore a gown of blue cloth and carried white chrysanthemums.

After the wedding a reception was held during which the couple received the hearty congratulations of all. Later in the evening they departed for a wedding trip and upon their return will reside in Somerville.

The bride is a trained nurse, having been graduated from the training school at Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, in the class of 1900. During her professional career she lived in Plainfield, where she was very popular. The groom is engaged in the wholesale furniture business and is a prominent citizen of Somerville.

Among the guests present from Plainfield were Mrs. Manning, Miss Margaret Cramer, Miss May Kernan, Miss Elsie Stewart, Miss Donghty, Mr. and Mrs. Gildersleeve, John P. Powers and Dr. A. H. Dundon.

ENJOYABLE TIME AT THANKSGIVING SOCIAL

It Was Held in the Parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Nov. 19.

SERIES OF TABLEAUX

GIVEN BY THE WOMAN'S SOCIETY FOR CHRISTIAN WORK OF CHURCH.

Thanksgiving Affair With Puritan Waitresses and Harvest Home Decorations — Tableaux and Musical Selections Given.

A good old-fashioned Thanksgiving social was held in the parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Nov. 19, under the auspices of the Woman's Society for Christian Work. The rooms were attractively decorated with cornstalks, pumpkins, and vegetables of all kinds, presenting a harvest home appearance.

The programme, which was in charge of H. M. Maxson, was opened with a piano duet by Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard and Mrs. William C. Hubbard, followed with trombone solos by Kenneth Shupp. The third number was "The Courting," James Russell Lowell. The story was read by Mrs. J. E. Kimball, and the tableaux were given in a realistic manner by Miss Bessy Fitz-Randolph and George L. Babcock. The platform was arranged to represent a home scene with an old-fashioned fire-place.

The next selection was a soprano solo, "My Jo-John," by Mrs. Frank Clawson. Frank Clawson took the part of "Jo-John." This was followed with "The Witch's Daughter," represented in tableaux. Mrs. Evelyn DuBois Benton read the poem, and those who took part in the various scenes were Miss Evelyn M. Lewis, Miss Mildred Green, Miss Mary St. John, Miss Cornelia Miller, W. C. Hubbard, J. Stanley Mosher, Paul Whitford and George Clark. The scene represented an old barn.

The last number on the programme was a Thanksgiving song by Miss Evaloise St. John, Miss Helen Rogers, Roy Titsworth and Harry Manley, after which refreshments were served by the following waitresses: Miss Bessie Dunham, Miss Marie Rogers, Miss Eva Rogers, Miss Nellie Williams and Miss Isabelle Randolph. They were dressed in Puritan style.

Miss Ernestine C. Smith was chairman of the entire affair and she and her assistants, Mrs. J. E. Kimball, Miss Jessie Utter, Miss Ida Spicer and Miss Bessy Fitz-Randolph, deserved much credit for the success of it, as does also Mrs. W. H. Rogers, chairman of the refreshment committee. Miss Jessie Utter was the accompanist of the evening.

MARRIAGE OF MISS FLORENCE MAY SYMONS TO EDWARD P. SHEARER.

Ceremony Took Place at the Bride's Home November 19—Will Reside in Plainfield.

The home of Paul Symons, of East Third street, was the scene of a pretty wedding, November 19, when at 8 o'clock his eldest daughter, Miss Florence May Symons, was made the wife of Edward Paine Shearer, of this city. Only the immediate relatives of both families were in attendance. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, was the officiating clergyman.

Miss Symons, who was attired in a gown of white Persian lawn, trimmed with duchess lace and liberty satin, was attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Mabelle Symons. The latter was clad in fawn colored crepe de chine with applique trimmings and carried pink carnations. The bride's bouquet was of white roses. While the young people assumed their places in the music room, the "Lohengrin" wedding march was played by William N. Runyon.

Following the ceremony a short reception was held, after which the young people left on a wedding tour the destination of which will be Mount Pocono. They will be absent one week and will reside in this city on their return. The groom is an employe of the Hibbard-Rodman-Ely Safe Works.

Both bride and groom were generously remembered with the usual array of presents. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome grand piano.

CHANGES AFFECTED HIM.

John A. Koch Compelled to Give Up the Butcher Business.

Circumstances of a peculiar nature have compelled John A. Koch to resign his position with Smalley Brothers, which he has held for many years. The constant passing in and out of the huge refrigerator, resulting in sudden changes from heat to cold, have so impaired his health that his physician ordered the change. He will leave the firm to assume the management of Fowler's confectionery store during the proprietor's absence in the south, this winter.

MADE HOME IN PLAINFIELD

GEORGE JOHNSTONE, WHO SHOT HIMSELF IN NEW YORK, LIVED HERE.

Employed by the American Express Company and Commuted to New York Every Day.

Word has been received in this city of the death, by suicide, of George Johnstone, a former well-known Plainfield resident. His lifeless body was found in Morningside Park, one of New York's small breathing spots, Nov 16, with a pistol clutched in the stiffened fingers. He had sent a bullet crashing through his brain. Owing to the fact that the police reported the suicide as a man named Snow, from cards found in the clothing, it was so mentioned in the metropolitan papers the next morning. It was not until recently that friends here and elsewhere learned the true details and the identity of the man.

Johnstone, who was a young man, lived for a long time at South avenue and later at 431 East Fifth street. He was employed by the American Express Company in New York and commuted. During his residence here he mingled with the young people of the town and was quite popular. He possessed an excellent voice and sang in the choir of Grace Episcopal church.

A few months ago he left suddenly and but very little was heard from him until news of his death came. The people with whom he boarded or his friends know little of his antecedents. Funeral services over the remains were held in New York, yesterday.

THE FUEL PROBLEM.

Science Will Have to Solve It Before Very Long.

World's Coal Supply Nearing Exhaustion—What Has Been Done Toward Discovering Effective Substitutes.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

FIVE hundred thousand tons of coal per day—that is the estimated output of the United States since the settlement of the coal strike. A chunk of the black treasure as large as the Masonic Temple and the Chicago Auditorium combined dug out of the bowels of the earth to-day with only a big hole left—and another chunk as large or larger to-morrow—and so on day in and day out in ever increasing quantities!

This raises the old scare—"How long can it last? When will the coal-less age be upon us?"

Back in the 60's the wise men of Great Britain broached the question. Parliament appointed a special commission which reported that at the then existing rate of increase in coal consumption the world's stock of black diamond would be exhausted in 212 years.

Scientists set about scheming substitutes for fuel. Many of our readers will remember the various machines for storing the rays of the sun; the windmill devices for saving heat. Then came the discovery of enormous coal fields in the United States, Siberia and China. Besides electricity for motor power was developed and largely allayed the fears of an early coal famine.

In the last few months the great coal strikes in the United States and France, backed up by similar troubles in England, Belgium, and Germany, have again brought forward the seriousness of the coal problem. People began to realize what it would mean to live, or try to live, without coal.

The worst scared people of the east are the English. Great Britain, until very recently, was the world's coal producing country. This estimate is put upon the coal in the different European countries:

	Tons.
United Kingdom	190,000,000,000
Germany	132,000,000,000
France	30,000,000,000
Austria-Hungary	17,000,000,000
Belgium	25,000,000,000

To this Asiatic Russia adds a wealth of 300 billion tons of coal. The Spanish-American war first called attention to the United States. Coaling stations and coal supplies were more important to the victors, it is said, even than their better ships. Estimates show that the United States at present has between 1,000 and 1,500 billion tons of unmined black diamond with which to fight the world in war and in commerce. China has almost as large a supply and British journals of the last few months are teeming with these figures to arouse the people to their "rights" in the orient.

The enormous statistics of supply lose their rosy color when the figures showing the annual coal consumption are considered. Last year America used up about 199 million tons of coal. The year before it was only 182 million. This year it will fall short, but in the next twelve months it is expected that 225 million tons will be chopped out of our mines. All over the world there has been an ever increasing increase of coal consumption, so that now about three times as much coal is being used up as 20 years ago. If the increase continues at this rate, scientific journals say, the coal will all be gone before the 21st years named by the British commission.

"Something will have to be done," said the traffic manager of one of the largest railroads of the country.

NEEDS OF CHILDREN'S HOME

VACANCIES AMONG SUSTAINING MEMBERS OUGHT TO BE FILLED.

Twenty-Fifth Year of Work is Completed—No Public Observance of the Event.

One of Plainfield's generous women, a constant friend of the Children's Home for many years, has at her own expense finished a room in the third story of the Home that will give space for four small beds and has also provided for the kitchen a fine new range that was greatly needed. It is hoped that some friends would like to provide a coal fund.

The Needlework Guild has sent to the Home 203 new garments, a most timely and much-appreciated addition to the wardrobe. Since August last the Home has lost by death and removals from the city, six sustaining members, paying $10 each and five paying annual sums from $1 to $5. It is also hoped that there will be friends ready to fill these places.

October brought to close the twenty-fifth year of work for the children, but circumstances prevented a proper celebration of the silver anniversary. However, gifts are in order. Checks or cash donations may be sent to Mrs. Horace Kimball, 326 Central avenue, and all other articles to the Home, 146 Jackson avenue, North Plainfield. The reports covering the work of the Home since May 1900 are in the printer's hands. They will give a brief review of what has been done and of what it is hoped to do in the future.

Aid for Nurses' Home.

When the Harvest Home was held at the Nurses' Home of Muhlenberg Hospital recently, it was the thought and hope of everyone that the next affair of the kind be held in the new Nurses' Home to be built near the new hospital, now in course of construction. PLEASES POLITICIANS.

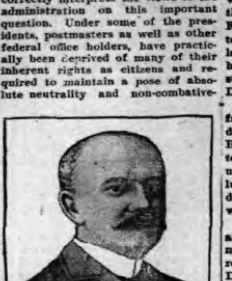
Assistant Postmaster General's Order Relating to Partisan Activity of Office Holders.

The recent order of Assistant Postmaster General Wynne, defining the lengths to which postmasters may go in their desire to render service to the political party of their choice, is based upon a letter written by President Roosevelt, and therefore correctly interprets the views of the administration on this important question. Under some of the presidents, postmasters as well as other federal office holders, have practically been deprived of many of their inherent rights as citizens and required to maintain a pose of absolute neutrality and non-combative-



ROBERT J. WYNNE.
(First Assistant Postmaster General.)

ness in each succeeding political campaign.

According to President Roosevelt's way of thinking, however, the federal office holder has rights as a citizen and will be permitted, within certain broad lines, to exercise them. For instance, it will now be permissible for postmasters—and this ruling will apply to all federal employes—to join political clubs, attend political conventions as delegates, and, should they desire to do so, to contribute to campaign funds. They ought not, however, in the president's judgment, to become unduly active in campaign work. In other words, he would not have them acting as the chairman of political conventions, or of campaign committee, or in any other way setting the pace within their parties as leaders. But as followers—high privates in the rear ranks of partisanship—they will have full rights and be protected in their exercise.

This new ruling is much more liberal than any that has been made on this question for many years, and it will be welcomed by thousands of postmasters, big and little, in all parts of the country.

WARREN B. KNISKERN.

Position of Passenger Traffic Manager Created for Him by the Northwestern System.

It was announced recently from the Chicago & Northwestern railway headquarters that W. B. Kniskern had been promoted to the position of passenger traffic manager of the system, an office created for him.

Mr. Kniskern's long service in Chicago with the Northwestern and his connection with other railroad companies of the country have given him a wide acquaintance. His standing in the railroad world has been of the highest.

WARREN B. KNISKERN.
(Passenger Traffic Manager Chicago & Northwestern System.)

His regular promotions from the small beginning as office boy to the head of the passenger department of the company with which he is now connected is an evidence of the ability and business qualifications which have won him his reputation.

Mr. Kniskern has devoted his entire business life to railway work. He was first with the Illinois Central railroad, by which he was employed as office boy in 1856. His first connection with the Chicago & Northwestern railway was from 1873 to 1876, during which period he filled various clerical positions with the general passenger and general ticket departments of that company.

From 1876 to September 1, 1885, he was employed by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad company at Louisville, Ky., and New Orleans. He reentered the service of the North-western on September 1, 1885, coming to Chicago as assistant general passenger agent. He was appointed assistant general passenger and ticket agent January 1, 1890, and general passenger and ticket agent January 1, 1895. He has held the last named position up to the present.

WEDDING WAS A QUIET ONE

MARRIAGE OF MISS LUELLA R. FRENCH AND DARWIN E. DUDLEY.

Took Place at Home of the Bride's Parents Last Thursday—To Live at Newton.

A very pretty though quiet wedding was that of Miss Luella R. French, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. French, to Darwin E. Dudley, of Boston, Mass., which took place at 1:30 last Thursday at the home of the bride at the corner of West Fourth street and Central avenue, when Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, tied the knot.

The ceremony was performed in the front room which was very pettily decorated with flowers and palms. Both the bride and groom were unattended and after the two had been united in marriage the wedding luncheon was served. The table and dining room were decorated in red with carnations.

After the luncheon was served Mr. and Mrs. Dudley left on their honeymoon, and when they return they will reside at Newton, Mass., where Mr. Dudley is prominently connected with the Mutual Life Insurance Company. Their new home will be at 35 Newtonwell avenue, Newton.

Last evening a dinner was given to Miss French at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. French, of 18 Craig place, in honor of her wedding. It was a very pretty affair. There were twelve people present from Boston, Mass., Summit, N. J., and this city. The decorations at the dinner were of red.

RAILROADS OF OLDEN TIMES

JOHN M. GARRISON, JERSEY OLDEST CONDUCTOR, TELLS OF THEM.

A Primitive Character of the Old Road of Which He First Found Employment.

John M. Garrison, who is still working for the Erie Railroad as a conductor, is supposed to be the oldest conductor in active service, in this part of the country at least. He began his railroad career with the old Paterson and Hudson River Road on November 17, 1846. The road had then been running about six years. It was first run as a horse railroad from Paterson to Bergen, where the cars were run over the tracks of the New Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company to Jersey City.

A year previous to Mr. Garrison's entering the employment of the company, steam was employed as the motive power. The service consisted of three trains, one in the morning, one at noon and one at night. Each train consisted of two passenger coaches and several freight cars, except on holidays, when extra passenger cars were required. The company had three passenger engines and two freight engines, known as grasshoppers, because of their having walking-beams. The passenger engines burned wood, and the grasshoppers burned coal.

The passenger cars were built on the English compartment principle, and the conductor had to collect the fares from the outside of the cars.

The roadbed was of the most premature sort. It was made by felling the cedar trees, which at that time were abundant along the Hackensack river, and laying the logs transversely on the ground. On these trees the stringers were laid, and the flat bar iron rails were spiked. A train off the track was a frequent occurrence, but this was not much thought of, as it was easily replaced.

The running time between Paterson and Jersey City was one hour. The stations were Ackerman's Lane (now Clifton), Acquackanonck (now Passaic), Boiling Springs (now Rutherford) and Secaucus. During the strawberry season the road did a rushing business. Mr. Garrison ran the strawberry train, which left Paterson at 2 a. m. He would generally have eight carloads of fruit on his train.

Baggage cars were unknown in those days, the baggage and mails being carried in lockers under the cars. The passenger cars would hold about forty persons, and were less than half the weight of the modern passenger coach.

Railroading half a century ago was not so strenuous as it is now. It was not an uncommon thing for a train on this road to stop on the meadows, and the passengers get out and hunt for snapping turtles. Time was not so important then as now.

Of the original employes of the old Paterson and Hudson River Railroad Mr. Garrison is the only survivor, and he is still working for the Erie Company.

HARVEST TIDE DECORATIONS PREVAILED IN SUNDAY-SCHOOL ROOM.

Excellent Repast Served to All Who Visited Church—Old-Fashioned Kitchen in the Primary Department Room—Those in Charge.

A genuine New England supper, with all the good things accompanying it, was begun with great success by the members of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church, Thursday, in the Sunday-school room of the church. It was continued the next evening. This annual affair has always been anticipated with the greatest pleasure and the affair of that evening, which will also continued the next evening, was no exception to those of previous years. Not a thing that would add to the enjoyment of those attending was omitted and the young women were substantially assisted in their most worthy work, that of helping to carry the Gospel to both home and foreign mission fields.

The Sunday-school room had truly a harvest home appearance about it with its attractive decorations. The main room was occupied with the tables where supper was served and these tables were very inviting, set with pretty china and silverware, with a bouquet of roses and a candelabra in the centre. About this room there were decorations chiefly of cornstalks and pumpkins. The latter were attractive with their many facial expressions, thanks to the young women artists.

One of the interesting sights was the old-fashioned kitchen. This was arranged in the primary department room. Here there were strung numberless ears of corn, and these together with the cornstalks, the old spinning wheel, the fire-place and the lighted candles, presented a scene that was exceedingly attractive.

Other features were the candy and popcorn and cake tables, which were decorated to harmonize with the general scheme. During the hours, from 6 to 9 o'clock, the room was filled with those who came to enjoy a good supper and at the same time assist the enterprising young women in their efforts.

An idea of the excellent supper served can be learned from the following menu:

Corned beef or roast pork.
Potatoes.
Boston baked beans.
Apple sauce.
Corn bread and brown bread.
Rice pudding, pumpkin pie, or Lemon meringue pie.
Coffee.
Ice cream with cake.

By the time one had partaken of this menu there was a feeling of satisfaction and everyone praised not only the meal but the most excellent service. No one was allowed to go away hungry and there was a special duty of those in charge of the tables, as well as the waitresses.

Too much praise cannot be given the members of the mission band for the success. Everyone who took part worked earnestly to accomplish that which was realized and undoubtedly when the supper is concluded a goodly sum will be found to reward the band for its work.

The main committee having the affair in charge consists of Mrs. Leonard A. Smith, chairman; Mrs. Theodore Mantz, Mrs. George Saums, Miss Minnie Williams and Miss Cora Laire. This committee was assisted by others as follows: Decorating—Miss Cora Laire, Miss Grace Emmons, Miss May VanFleet, Miss Jessie Little, Miss Helen Bogart, Mrs. Clarence Thorn, Miss Mabel Wilson. Cake—Miss Mabel Wilson, Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh, Mrs. Peter B. Hodge, Mrs. Anna E. Leggett. Candy and popcorn—Miss Minnie Williams, Miss Helen Bogart, Mrs. Fred. S. Cutter, Miss Achsah Holmes, Mrs. Harry McDonald, Mrs. Charles Clarke, Miss Mary Pugh. Reception—Mrs. Will F. Williams, Miss Sadie Searing, Miss Ella C. Benedict, Miss Millie Schoellendruesler, Miss Wilhelmina Vroom. Refreshment—Mrs. William H. Olmsted, Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, Mrs. E. Zeiss, Miss Anna Searing, Miss Abbie VanCleef, Mrs. George Saums.

Those in charge of the tables were Miss Lillian A. Force, Mrs. R. B. Rogers, Mrs. Theodore Mantz, Mrs. William C. Startup, Mrs. Clarence Thorn and Mrs. David Krymer and the waitresses were Miss Grace Emmons, Miss Bessie Martin, Miss May VanFleet, Miss Lizzie Bogart, Miss Jessie Hockridge, Miss Kate Bodine, Miss Anna Bodine, Miss Lizzie Davenport. William H. Pope was the efficient cashier. In all 136 suppers were served.

PLANS FOR MAKING FIRST-CLASS THEATRE

Proprietor Sherman Means to Put Stillman Music Hall in the Best of Condition.

BELIEVES IT WILL PAY

PLANS TO OPEN WITH MAUDE ADAMS OR OTHER BIG ATTRACTION.

New Entrance, New Seats and New Scenery All to be Installed... Will Probably Start the Alterations Next Week.

It will be good news to the amusement loving people of Plainfield to know that Stillman Music Hall will again be opened. It is the intention of S. F. Sherman, the purchaser, to completely transform the hall into an attractive place and he will spare no pains or expense in carrying out this project. He is convinced that Plainfield can and will support a first-class theatre and he proposes to do his share in giving the city such a place. The plans as originally drawn for the improvement of the hall will be carried out with a few changes. It will be impossible for Mr. Sherman to build a second gallery for this season but this will be done next summer. If this was attempted now it would retard the opening for the hall for the winter season.

As previously stated, the entrance will be through Frank Rowley's drug store, on the west side. It will be made very attractive as it leads to the lobby of the theatre. Inside the theatre there will be large glass mirrors on the side walls and a steel wainscotting will be placed around the side five feet high. At the top of that will be a brass railing and then above that will be the glass mirrors, four feet high, alternating with handsome pictures of special selection.

The hall will be provided with new seats of the latest approved style, and they will be closer together than those now in the hall. There will also be more seats than before. There will be a handsome asbestos curtain and all new scenery. Just as soon as the contract papers changing the ownership of the hall are signed, which will be next Monday, Mr. Sherman's scenic artists will come to Plainfield and start at once the work of painting the new scenery. A large gang of men will also be put to work cleaning the house and installing an entire new up-to-date heating apparatus. There will be no question afterwards as to heating the hall properly.

Another very desirable feature will be the rooms for the men and women on the second floor. One will be a waiting room for women and the other a smoking room for the men. Both will be substantially and attractively furnished, affording every convenience. There will be three exits by way of iron stairways and iron doors on each side, thus giving people ample room and accommodation for leaving the house quickly and without any disadvantages.

As previously stated, it is Mr. Sherman's idea to open the hall about the middle of January if possible with Maude Adams. If he cannot get her, he will have an attraction her equal. Mr. Sherman will present only first-class plays and he hopes to get the best people of the city to his theatre if this will draw them there.

Operations on New Hospital.

The contractors have commenced the work on the operation pavilion to be erected in connection with the new hospital. It is hoped to have this building enclosed before real cold weather arrives.

Lost at Fire.

At the fire on Rockview avenue a few nights ago the Warren Engine Company lost two steel wrenches and a handsome nickle plated lantern.

Turkey Supper.

A turkey supper will be given in the parish house of the Church of the Holy Cross, Wednesday evening, December 3, from 6 to 8 o'clock.

Cured of Piles After 40 Years.

Mr. C. Haney, of Geneva, Ohio, had the piles for forty years. Doctors and dollars could do him no lasting good. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured him permanently. Invaluable for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, lacerations, eczema, tetter, salt rheum, and all other skin diseases. Look for the name DeWitt on the package — all others are cheap, worthless counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

HELD A SALE OF PITCHERS

AFFAIR GIVEN FOR THE BENEFIT OF ALL SOULS CHURCH.

At Residence of Miss Mary Willard, of Grant Avenue—Those Who Assisted at Sale.

A very well attended pitcher sale was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss Mary Willard, of 804 Grant avenue, the proceeds of which will be for the benefit of All Souls' Unitarian church. The sale was held between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock, during which time the parlors of the handsome residence of Miss Willard were filled with members of the church and their friends.

Here and there about the rooms were arranged small tables on which were displayed a large assortment of pretty pitchers and chinaware, some of which was hand painted. That the affair was a great success is shown by the liberal patronage of those who attended and the rapidity in which the articles displayed for sale were bought up by the patrons.

The sale was arranged and conducted by the women of the parish. Those who assisted at the tables and received the patrons were Miss Emily Hoff, Mrs. Stephen Haff, Miss Alice Reed, Mrs Eedar B Smith, Mrs. Cohen and Mrs. Gates Willard.

NO PROFIT.

Advance in Cost of Hospital Private Rooms is to Meet Actual Expence.

One of the members of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, in speaking of the recent advance in the rate for private rooms at the hospital from $15 to $20, says that when the old price was charged it was done so at a loss to the institution. Now that everything in the line of food is increased in price, it is impossible to continue the use of the rooms at $15 a week.

"This price," the member said, "was about what it would cost a week for a trained nurse, and when her services as well as food is considered, it can readily be understood that the hospital is not making anything."

Like the West.

Wesley Randolph, of North avenue, has received a letter from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Randolph, who recently went to Denver, Col., and they say that they are delighted with the climate and like the western city very much.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 30, "A Cure For the World's Woe"—Text, Isa. xiv, 12-32.

"Look unto me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I am God, and there is none else."

This message was first spoken for the encouragement of a people who had seen their land invaded and devastated, their cities captured and destroyed, their temple and all their ancient sanctuaries of religion defiled or burned, their armies defeated, multitudes slain, themselves driven captive to a faroff land and many made slaves. Desolation of all they held dear and sacred and discouragement of heart was complete. Their case seemed hopeless. Their land was one wide desolation scarcely habitable even for a miserable remnant of people, exposed to constant dangers. Their ancient religion was dishonored. On every side their new temples and continual service of Idols, immense wealth, luxury and the refinement of a civilization ages old were conspicuous in their Babylonian home.

They were but one among many people whom the rapacity of their conquerors had rutined and then proceeded to enrich the lands near their capital. No other people had ever recovered their land, their nationality, prosperity and religion. Others adopted the worship and customs of the new country and gradually became absorbed into the great body of its population, losing all distinctive life.

What better fate than this could be hoped for by the people of Judah? Their only hope lay in the character of their God and by the laws of faith which some of their prophets persistently proclaimed.

This lesson is taken from the midst of a passage unlike almost anything else in the whole range of literature. From chapter xl to lv of Isaiah is the sublimest message of encouragement ever spoken to any people. It seems to have come to the people of Judah in the darkest hour of their captivity, when their trust in the God of their fathers was ready to give way and they seemed about to abandon all their past and lose themselves in the mass of the worshipers around them. Then the great prophet speaks in trumpet tones the message from Jehovah, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people!" There is no engravering in his strong notes. Jehovah is the only God. He rules the heavens and earth. Kings are His servants. Babylon shall soon be punished for her great wickedness and destroyed forever. Watch the ebbing power of Media. Cyrus is Jehovah's servant. Jehovah. Jerusalem shall be rebuilded. Israel shall be once more planted in her own land. Idols are vain, and all who trust in them shall be put to shame. Trust in Jehovah, for He alone rules.

This prophet has a view of Jehovah's purpose done before him had seen. The heathen are no more objects of wrath, merely to be destroyed. There is hope for them also. Israel has been humbled and has learned the lesson prosperity could not teach her, that Jehovah alone can save. She shall now learn her true calling as servant of Jehovah to instruct and lead the people to Him who alone can cure them.

The Degree of Blameworthiness.

The shades of niceties of blameworthiness are infinite even to our dull perceptions. There will be no rough and ready measurements by the wise and patient Christ. It is a joy to remember that it is recorded of Him, He would not that any should bear witness of man, for He knew what was in man. Under His wise administration every one will be judged according to his capabilities, motives and deeds. We shall reap what we have sown. But we can be sure there will be the rule. Procrustes reduced all that fell into his hands to one standard, Draco visited nearly every breach of law with great severity, but the Christ, so happily constituted, will be guilty of no such constitute. He will judge righteous judgment.—Rev. W. T. Acomb of Maldstone, England.

A Good Day's Work.

This is the way to do a good day's work: Begin it with God; do all in the name of the Lord Jesus and for the glory of God; count nothing common or unclean in itself—it can be so only when the motive of your life is low. Be not content with eye service, but, as servants of God, do everything from the heart and for His "Well done." Ask Him to kindle and maintain in your heart the loftiest motives, and be as men who watch for the coming of the master of the house.—F. B. Meyer.

The Harvest of Action.

Nothing with God can be accidental. Every sequence, good or bitter, is the harvest of sown action. God has no favorites who can hold fire in the hand and escape pain or harrow and till without treasure. Heaven here, or yonder is the place of ends, the harvest home with its garnered sheaves, accomplished triumph, transport of self completion.—Clarence Lathbury.

A Universal Sin.

Unbelief is the most universal of all sins. It is wider than infidelity and more subtle than atheism. Indifference can express it. Where one exists the other is sure to be.—Presbyterian Journal.

The Greatest Problem.

There are great problems ahead of us as a nation, but the really greatest problem is the problem of making better men and better women of all of us. —President Roosevelt at Dover, N. H.

The Master's Work.

The Master's work may make weary feet, but it leaves the spirit glad.—Episcopal Recorder.

LITERARY.

The December (Christmas) number of "Success" seems to anticipate and meet the wants of a large number of readers. No one who has followed "Success" closely for the past year can fail to have noticed the progressive appearance of the periodical, from a literary as well as a pictorial point of view, and now it seems to be worthy of its claim to the "first home publication in America." The current issue contains six really good stories. One of them, by Samuel Merwin, who may be called America's industrial fictionist, is entitled "B. Carter," and it is a fine picture of modern hustle. In "The Staff That Stands," Cy Warman gives a success sketch of a prominent Western railroad man. This issue contains two full-page illustrations: "Is Santa Claus True?" by Herman Heyer, accompanied by a charming sketch by Marion Foster Washburne, and "Washington Irving and His Friends at Sunnyside," which contains some of the best known faces in American literature. Henry van Dyke, Susie M. Best, Roy Farrell Greene, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Christine Terhune Herrick, Henry Wallace Phillips, William J. Lampton, and Joseph Bletben are among the other contributors. Two important features are, "A Memory of the Boer War," by the late Adolph De Wet, and the first of the "Success" series of a college course at home, entitled, "If You Can't Go to College."

For a year Dr. S. Weir Mitchell had sent to him from one of the clipping agencies all the reports that could be found in the American daily papers of heroism in every-day life. Dr. Mitchell has written an article for the December Century giving the results of this search. One of the surprising facts is the many instances of heroic acts by children. Of fifty-three trustworthy statements of children under fifteen who have tried to save others from water, fire or other danger, twelve concerned girls who tried to save drowning persons previously unknown to them. In three undoubted instances little boys of four, five and six years of age respectively risked their lives in saving others at fires.

THEATRICAL.

The Academy of Music, New York, has been crowded to the extreme limit at every performance since the opening night of "The Ninety and Nine," and this state of things, judging from the present indications, is bound to continue for some months to come. No drama produced on the Metropolitan stage has made the instant and impressive hit achieved by this new play by Ramsay Morris. Aside from its marvellously dramatic effects; it's clean, wholesome and absorbing story, with its delightful vein of genuine religious sentiment, has won its public unmistakably. As to the now famous fire scene with a real locomotive and cars tearing madly through a blazing forest on a rescue trip, no previous sensation on either the foreign or American stage can be gin to compare with it for realism and daring. It throws the audience into a panic of excitement, bringing men and women to their feet in wild enthusiasm, and makes the Academy ring with hurrahs and bravos. The Metropolitan critics are unanimous in declaring that this scene pronounces the play far behind it all competitors in the field of melodrama.

"The Silver Slipper," the latest musical play by the authors of "Florodora," has been playing to record breaking audiences at the Broadway Theatre, New York, for the past four weeks. It was predicted that this new play would be a successor to tuneful "Florodora" and the large and fashionable audiences that have attended every performance since the opening night, shows that "The Silver Slipper" has already proven a worthy successor of that other popular and tuneful English musical play. "The Silver Slipper" is replete with the tuneful, catchy music of Leslie Stuart. The piece is an exceptionally strong one, including such well-known players as Sam Bernard, who has the leading comedy role, Snitz Edwards, Cyril Scott, Mackenzie Gordon, Harry Darcher, Josie Sadler, Maido Villier, Helen Royton, Susan Drake, Daisy Greene and last but by no means the least, dainty Edna Wallace Hopper, who for the first time in five years has cast aside skirts for just a few moments and appears in the first act in a boy's suit.

One Minute Cough Cure

Is the only harmless cough cure that gives quick relief. Cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, pneumonia, asthma, lagrippe and all throat, chest and lung troubles. I got soaked by rain, says Gertrude E. Fonner, Muncie, Ind., and contracted a severe cold and cough. I failed rapidly; lost 48 lbs. My druggist recommended One Minute Cough Cure. The first bottle brought relief; several cured me. I am back to my old weight, 148 lbs. One Minute Cough Cure cuts the phlegm, relieves the cough at once, draws out inflammation, cures croup. An ideal remedy for children. L. W. Randolph.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 30—Consecrated by Rev. E. M. Doyle.

Topic.—Missions; a meeting in the interests of foreign missions. The world for Christ—Isa. xiv, 12-28.

The Christian church should desire to win the whole world to Christ, because the world needs Christ as its Saviour. "There is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" except the name of Jesus. The world is in sin and needs a Saviour. Not only did the gentile world sink into corruption and into sin, but even God's people wandered away from Him, so that "there is none that doeth good—no, not one." The world stands judged and condemned because of sin, and this judgment can only be set aside and condemnation averted by faith in Jesus Christ. But many have not heard of Christ, and therefore the church should bestir itself to send the gospel heralds everywhere that men may hear and believe and be saved.

Christ's command, as well as the world's need, should inspire Christian people to interest in and support of worldwide missions. "Go ye into all the world," said the Master, "and preach the gospel to every creature." In the face of this command no Christian should hesitate to respond. How can we claim to be Christians if we disobey? Have we any right to elect to obey some of Christ's commands and to disobey others? Yet many who could not be induced to neglect the command, "This do in remembrance of Me," will lightly declare, "I do not believe in foreign missions." In the same breath that he said, "This do in remembrance of Me," also said, "Preach the gospel to every creature."

But can the world be won for Christ, and, if so, how? As we review the labors of the past nineteen centuries the task seems almost too great. And yet it can be done and must be done. The divine edict has gone forth that unto Christ every knee must bow and every tongue confess that He is Lord. God's prophecy must be fulfilled. From a human standpoint it may seem next to impossible, yet all things are possible to God. Moreover, what has been done is an earnest of what may be done if Christ's church would only be true to Christ. A small band of devout and consecrated disciples of Christ preached the gospel to the world of their day, when Rome was the world and the world was Rome, and what has been done can be.

The church of Christ in the world could and should evangelize every creature. It should tell the story of the cross to every living human being. If our great Christian denominations were greatly aroused and would march forth in the spirit of a Paul, a Livingstone and Judson and Carey and Brainerd, God would bless their efforts, and the whole world would be reached. The only way to win the world is to win it. Men must be sent. The church must send those who are called in other way. Will the church realize its privilege and rise to its responsibility?

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. iii, 7; Nah. i, 15; Ps. ii, 1-12; lxxii, 1-11; Matt. xxviii, 19, 20; Acts i, 8; xiii, 1-3; Phil. ii, 1-11; Rev. xxii, 17.

Christian Endeavor Abroad.

The Rev. Francis E. Clark, who recently returned from Europe, in speaking of Christian Endeavor work abroad says: "In London I found about 700 societies, with a membership of 50,000 persons. This carries it ahead of our two leading cities, Philadelphia and Chicago, in each of which there are about 600 societies. In Great Britain there are, all told, about 10,000 societies, with a membership of about half a million. On the continent I found that the movement was making great strides in Germany, where there are many societies. France also is making rapid progress, the adaptability of Christian Endeavor to non-English speaking peoples, its spread and the interest with which it has been received are truly wonderful."

Christian Endeavor the Modern Way

The church ought to be abreast of the times. It is folly for us to try to do things the way they did fifty or 100 years ago. We might as well be driving with Elijah's crooked stick, or go into battle with Saul's armor, or prefer a canalboat to an express train, as to be clinging to old things.—Rev. Dr. T. De Witt Talmage.

A Sermon Defined.

"Will you not kindly define a sermon?" was asked Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, D.D., and he replied, "A sermon is anything that puts God's truth into the hearts of men."

Four Missionary Paragraphs.

The power of all mission work is really prayer.—Pastor Storjahann.

Some church members believe in missions, and some in omissions.—Rev. Mr. Ward.

He who is not a missionary Christian will be a missing Christian when the great day comes for bestowing the rewards of service.—Rev. Dr. A. J. Gordon.

A Roumanian said to a missionary: "We are finding you out. You are not as good as your book. If you were as good as your book you could conquer India for Christ in five years." Does not this illustrate the truth of Exod. xxxvi, 23.—Tongues of Fire (London).

PYTHIAN SERVICE AT GRAVE

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL OF WM. H. B. DRAKE HELD THURSDAY.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes Presided at the Services at House—Burial Service at Cemetery.

Attended by the brethren of three organizations with which he had been connected in life, all that was mortal of William H. B. Drake was laid away Thursday afternoon in its final resting place. Two services, one at his late home on Orchard place and the other in Evergreen cemetery, both largely attended, marked the closing ceremony.

At the home, where the obsequies were for the family and immediate friends, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, was in charge, assisted by Rev. Joseph C. McKelvey, of the Farrer chapel. Both discoursed at some length and offered prayer. Two solos, "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Abide With Me," were sweetly rendered by a trio composed of Elmer E. Runyon, William N. Runyon and Elmer E. Cutting.

Following it, the remains were taken to the burial spot while delegations from Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., preceded the cortege. Members of Winfield Scott Post were also in attendance but as individuals. At the grave the impressive Knights of Pythias burial service was conducted for the lodge by Prelate Robert Kenney, of Perseverance. Prayer was also offered by the divines in charge at the home.

The casket was borne by J. B. Higgins and James Patterson, of Perseverance Lodge; Asa Pope and Thomas Osment, of Miantonomo Tribe, and Dr. J. F. Berg and I. L. McVoy, of Winfield Scott Post.

SEVERAL CHANGES.

Made in New Schedule in Effect on New Jersey Central.

The new schedule which went into effect Sunday, on the New Jersey Central has several important changes. There is a new train Sunday morning from Scranton for New York, and a train from New York for Scranton at 1 p. m. Sundays. The Scranton flyer will have a through coach Scranton to New York arriving at 12:40 p. m., and there will be a coach from Scranton on the Harrisburg Express leaving New York at 5 p. m. The Harrisburg Express which heretofore run express to Phillipsburg, will make a regular stop at Somerville, arriving at 6:06 p. m. The schedule on the main line has been somewhat re-arranged to accommodate the public demands, and with the excellent motive power with which the New Jersey Central is now equipped, the road is little short of a model road.

FUNERAL OF CHILD.

Services Over Victim of Accidental Draught of Acid Was Thursday.

Funeral services over the remains of Mary Dorothea Canning, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Canning, of Watchung, who met death Wednesday by accidentally drinking carbolic acid, were held in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, Thursday morning. The chapel was filled with many relatives and friends. Rev. Theodore Duensing, pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran church, was the officiating clergyman. At the close of the obsequies, the remains were interred in Hillside cemetery.

KODOL
Digests What You Eat.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Kodol

Digests What You Eat

Mrs. Loring Nichols of Penn Yan, N. Y., writes: After eating, my food would distress me by making my heart palpitate and I would become very weak. Finally I got a bottle of Kodol and it gave me immediate relief. After using a few bottles I am cured.

Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia, and all stomach disorders, and gives the heart a full, free and unhampered action.

CONCERTS OF SONG.

A. H. Atterburyy Has Arranged Series of Two to be Held This Winter.

It is pleasant to know that Albert H. Atterbury is preparing to give two more concerts of song similar to those of last winter.

Miss Rio, who will sing the soprano parts, is an old favorite in Plainfield and her beautiful voice is always welcome. Mr. Burleigh, the bass, is a member of the choir of Dr. Rainsford's church. He sang at the annual reception of the Monday Afternoon *Club last year and delighted his audi*ence. Mrs. VanDuyn, the contralto, and Mr. Martin, the tenor, are new comers, but they are said to have excellent voices.

The first concert will be on Tuesday, December 3, and the programme will range from the classical "Kennst du das Land," by Liszt, down to "Rory O'More" and "Old Kentucky Home." Subscriptions should be sent at once to Mr. Atterbury.

DEATH OF MRS. STEBBINS.

Wife of Vice President of Pond Tool Works Passed Away Thursday After a Week's Illness.

Mention was made Thursday of the death of Mrs. A. C. Stebbins, which occurred in the afternoon at her home, 835 West Seventh street, as a result of an attack of pleuro-pneumonia. She was taken ill a week ago last Thursday and from the first her condition was critical. Early this week it was believed that she had passed the crisis and her physician had strong hopes for recovery. Her heart suddenly became weak and death soon followed.

Mr. Stebbins, who is vice president of the Pond Machine Tool Works, and his wife came to Plainfield, when the Pond plant was located in this city. They formerly lived at Worcester, Mass. Since her residence in Plainfield, Mrs. Stebbins has made many friends among whom she was highly esteemed. She was an attendant with her husband at the Crescent Avenue church. Mrs. Stebbins is survived by a husband.

YOUNG HUNTER SHOT HIS TOE

Leslie Sharp Tripped While Running a Rabbit and Shot Off His Own Toe.

RIDDLED WITH SHOT

His Companion, Phillip VanArsdale, Stopped Flow of Blood and Helped Injured Lad to His Home Lives at 310 West Front Street —Son of Postal Clerk Sharp.

The second accident of the local hunting season occurred in Washington valley, Saturday afternoon, when Leslie Sharp, the twelve-year-old son of William B. Sharp, the money order clerk of the local postoffice, while pursuing a large rabbit, tripped and shot himself through the right large toe. The member was riddled with shot and was completely shattered.

He was alone at the time; his companion, Phillip VanArsdale, being some distance ahead trying to head off the game. On hearing the cry of pain from his comrade, VanArsdale rushed to his assistance and found that he was bleeding profusely from the wound. He tied a string about the member and thus stopped the flow of blood. He then ran to a nearby house and sent word into town for a cab which met the two lads slowly making their way into town.

The lad was taken to the office of Dr. Hedges where the member was dressed and placed in bandages. Afterwards the boy was taken to his home at 310 West Front street where he is reported to be resting comfortably.

PRIZE GIVEN TO WINNER

AT BOYS' DEPARTMENT SOCIAL AT Y. M. C. A. LAST FRIDAY.

'Twas Too Warm for "Log Fire" Social, But the Boys Had Good Time Nevertheless.

The members of the boys' department of the Young Men's Christian Association, who joined the department since October, enjoyed a delightful social in the boys' rooms of the Y. M. C. A. last Friday, when twenty-eight were present. The affair was arranged and given by the social committee and every detail of the evening's programme was carried out with very pleasing results.

Graphophone selections were rendered during the evening and the prize offered in the boys' ping pong tournament was awarded to William Lambert, who scored the highest points. The prize was a very handsome burnt racquet on which was burnt the words: "William Lambert, Y. M. C. A. Ping Pong Tournament, November, 1902."

Refreshments were served by the committee who were Arthur Van Arsdale, LeRoy Woodhull, William Lambert and Edmund Temple. It was planned to hold a "log fire" social but the weather was so warm that this scheme was abandoned. The affair was a great success. The arrangements were looked after by the boys' secretary, Kenneth Robbie.

Three of them measuring each three feet across, were exhibited at the Trenton and Nazareth, Pa., fairs and secured first prizes.

BARN DANCE FOR SOCIETY

IN AND OUT CLUB HAS ARRANGED ITS FIRST EVENT.

Society Young Folk Have Formed An Organization for the Winter.

The In and Out Club is the name of a new organization recently formed among the unmarried set in local society and they have been actively engaged in preparing a number of indoor and outdoor events for the winter. The first of these affairs will be a barn dance at the Barnaby estate Thanksgiving eve. Those in charge of the affair are Mrs. Edward M. VanBuren, Miss Lucy Otterson, Miss May Evans, Miss Holly and Miss Marguerite Holly.

A big barn has been secured on the Barnaby estate at Oakwood where the cotillion will be held. The decorations for the affair will be very novel and those who are arranging the dance are planning to have many unique features of consequence not only in the favors but in the general idea of the affair. Many of these features will be introduced by Thomas R. VanBoskerck, who will lead the cotillion. The patronesses who will distribute the favors will be Mrs. Frank Austin, Mrs. J. W. Reinhart and Mrs. George T. VanBoskerck.

There are eighty in the club and they are planning some of the leading society functions for the winter. This dance will be only one of many that the club will arrange later when they meet again late in December to arrange for others.

MINISTER BOWEN REFUSED.

Would Not Take Stand of Other Diplomats Regarding Blockade.

Germany, France and Italy, as well as Great Britain, have taken the position that the blockade of the Orinoco river in Venezuela is ineffective and an effort has been made by the European diplomats to persuade Mr. Bowen, United States Minister to Venezuela, to join in the declaration.

Mr. Bowen has given a refusal. He is avoiding the question with a view not to jeopardize American interests and to leave the heads of the Washington government free. Henry E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue, is a cousin of Mr. Bowen, the American minister who has taken this independent position.

RECEIVER FOR HYGEIA ICE CO.

Application Made for Receiver Before Vice Chancellor Emery by Company's Counsel.

APPOINTEE NOT NAMED

Many Prominent Plainfielders are Interested in Company — Object is to Straighten Out Affairs of Company Which Has Had Troubles of Late.

Before Vice Chancellor Emery Tuesday, application was made for the appointment of a receiver for the Hygeia Ice Company, of this city, for the purpose of straightening out the tangled affairs of that company. The application was made by the company's counsel, Reed & Coddington, and was brought about by the suit of Edward M. VanBuren, of this city. Who the appointee is has not yet been made public.

It will be remembered that the Hygeia Ice Company was organized about five years ago, the promoters being men of wealth and prominence in this city. The concern was capitalized at $50,000, all of which was common stock and all but sixty-five shares were sold to prominent local people. The officers who are still at the head of the concern are: President, Harry G. Runkle; vice president, O. T. Warg; secretary and treasurer, DeWitt C. Ivins. The stock holders and directors are all very prominent men in this community.

Shortly after the company was formed a $60,000 ice plant was erected along the railroad on North avenue above Berckman street where ice was manufactured in what is technically known as the "plate" system. The capacity of the plant was sufficient to supply this and other neighboring towns with ice for the entire season. Shortly after the plant was in working order it was found necessary to put in some new machinery and this meant an additional outlay. While the new machinery was being installed the firm was obliged to purchase ice from other concerns which crippled the concern financially.

When the concern was on its feet again it was found that the supply was greater than the demand and although it supplied Metuchen, and even Somerville, not to mention other small towns, it was found that the competition of the natural ice companies was very keen.

At about this time the coal strike began to be felt in this city and the concern found itself paying $7 a ton for coal where it had only been paying $3. It was this state of affairs which proved to be the last straw on the camel's back and the company found itself obliged to apply for a receiver.

It was said last evening that the company would continue to transact business. It was also said that H. G. Runkle was the last one of the stockholders to consent to the concern going into the hands of a receiver as he had kept the company going in the face of the very unsatisfactory condition of affairs until he found that the firm was going behind instead of going forward.

The offices of the company are located in the office of DeWitt C. Ivins, on Watchung avenue where F. T. Ostrom is the general superintendent.

An Open Letter.

To Christmas Shoppers:—The season of Christmas shopping is approaching. "Cruelties, in the form of overwork among children and women, travesty the festival of rejoicing over the coming of the Holy Child."

Its very many cases horses are treated better than human beings. Last year a driver was compelled to work so many hours delivering goods that it was 3 o'clock in the morning before he reached home, while the horse had been changed once en route. The day's work was about twice as much for the man as for the horse. A boy of sixteen, after delivering packages until late at night, was so exhausted that he lay down in the wagon, pulled a horse blanket over him and slept in the stable. He was found frozen to death on New Year's morning.

The Consumers' League appeals to all women to do their shopping as early in the season as possible. Do it early in the day, and do not insist that goods be delivered on the same day as purchased. Do not patronize the stores at night.

An amelioration of the hardships of the holiday season may thus be secured.

Yours, in the name of humanity,
The Consumers' League of New Jersey.

POSED AS A TRAMP.

Well-to-Do Young Fellow Resorts to Peculiar Method to Test the Girl He Loved.

Miss Laura E. Keller, of Montrose, W. Va., a girl of exceptional beauty and a village belle, advertised in a matrimonial paper for a correspondent, thinking to have sport. Two of the replies interested her and she began a correspondence with the writers. Photographs were exchanged and a meeting with the two suitors was arranged.

Prior to the meeting a tramp appeared at the Keller home and procured employment. He was ragged and unshaven, but gave evidence of having seen better days and was genteel in his deportment. He fell in love with Miss Laura and in spite of his being a tramp she returned his love, although she told him she could never think of marrying him.

On Saturday Leary Snodgrass, one of her unknown suitors, appeared and was rejected. On Sunday Harry Williams, the other man with whom she had corresponded, was to appear. But she waited all day and he failed to put in his appearance.

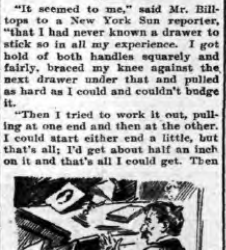
That evening the tramp spoke to her of love and she told him she loved him, but could never marry a poor man. Throwing off his disguise Harry Williams, young, wealthy and dressed in the height of fashion, stood before her. Miss Keller was quite overcome at the denouement, but all obstacles having been overcome she renewed her love vows and they were married. Williams is said to have wealth and social standing, but took the disguise of a tramp to ascertain, unsuspected, what manner of girl Miss Keller was. Both were satisfied and they are now on a honeymoon trip.

THE STUBBORN DRAWER.

One Little Thing That It Is Always Advisable to Do Before Going for the Old Ax.

"It seemed to me," said Mr. Billtops to a New York Sun reporter, "that I had never known a drawer to stick so in all my experience. I got hold of both handles squarely and fairly, braced my knee against the next drawer under that and pulled as hard as I could and couldn't budge it.

"Then I tried to work it out, pulling at one end and then at the other. I could start either end a little, but that's all; I'd get about half an inch on it and that's all I could get. Then



ALMOST UPSET THE BUREAU.

I tried pounding on it the way you do on car windows when they stick, but it was no use; it wouldn't move it. After that I tried the straight pull on it again, and almost upset the bureau this time. I did joggle some things off the top of it and then I was meditating on going for the axe when Mrs. Billtops passing the door, looked in.

"'Tis the drawer locked, Ezra?' she said."

"And by Jiminy hoe-cakes, the drawer was locked. The key was in the lock, and somebody had some time or other turned it, and it had never occurred to me to try it now. In fact, I never thought anything about the key or the lock at all, one way or the other; but when I turned that key the drawer opened just as easy. And I made up my mind that hereafter the first thing I should do when I came across a bureau drawer that stuck would be to see if it wasn't locked."

STABBED WITH FILE DURING SHOP QUARREL

Anton Vodecreek Taken to Hospital, While Tony Marello Was Put Under Arrest.

IS ADJOURNED A WEEK

MARELLO CLAIMS VODECREEK THREW SAND IN HIS EYES.

And That, Blinded by It, He Seized Upon First Thing Which Came Handy and Threw It at Vodecreek—The Case Adjourned.

While working in the foundry department of the Scott Press Works, last Friday, Tony Marello and Anton Vodecreek, two employes, became involved in a quarrel. Vodecreek, it is alleged, threw some molding sand in his companion's eyes and the next instant received a stab wound in the side with a sharp pointed file. The wound seemed to be of such serious proportions he was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Today it was reported he was greatly improved and, provided blood poisoning did not ensue, there would be no serious results.

Marello was placed under arrest by Patrolman Vanderweg and this morning was arraigned before City Judge Runyon. At the request of his counsel, the case was adjourned for one week. The defendant was released in the custody of D. C. Smalley. Marello admitted the stabbing but claimed that the sand thrown in his eyes so blinded him that he could not see and the file was the first thing he picked up.

DANGERS OF HOLIDAY TIME

CHIEF DOANE ISSUES WARNING AS TO CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS.

Annual Warning in Regard to Use of Inflammable Material— Must Not Use Cotton.

Holiday time with its flimsy decorations of cotton, paper and greens is generally productive of many fires and Chief Doane has issued his annual warning in regard to the use of inflammable material for this purpose. The chief places a ban on the use of cotton and states that in its place mineral wool can be used with perfect safety and gives better results, especially at night. Care should be used in placing Christmas greens near gas jets as they become very inflammable within a short time.

In no case, the chief declares, should electric lights be covered with colored paper or cloth, unless the material be kept clear of the bulbs and space be left for the escape of hot air. It is also a dangerous practice to light Christmas trees with candles and care should be taken that no draperies are near to be blown toward the taper flames.

In summing up, the chief says, extreme caution should be used at all times when decorations are used and it may be the result of saving much property and perhaps human life.

CLASS ...NS.

Have Been Select... by Seniors of City Hi... School.

The class of 190... senior class of the City High School, has decided on a design for its class pin and will probably receive the pins in the course of a few weeks. The design represents two triangles, one smaller than the other, so placed upon each other that the vertices of the smaller rest in the center of the sides of the larger. The letters P. H. S. in gold on a white ground are placed one in each of the three small triangular spaces formed by the superposition of the triangles and the smaller triangle bears the class numerals, '03, in gold on a dark green background. At the top of the pin is a small gold owl with wings spread.

BARN FULL OF HAY BLAZED VERY MERRILY

Conflagration in Barn on Milliken Property, 830 Central Avenue, Last Evening.

THE DAMAGE WAS $1,000

TWO VALUABLE MOOSEHEADS WERE SAVED FROM THE FLAMES.

Telephone Alarm Was Given and a General Alarm From Box No. 36 Soon Followed—Loss of $1,000 Was Covered by Insurance.

Sparks from a burning brush heap set fire to a large barn on the Samuel Milliken property, at 830 Central avenue, last Friday night, resulting in a $1,000 conflagration. The structure is two stories in height but the greater part of it was used as was also a barn on the premises of Fred H. Andrews, less than fifteen feet away. The loss is covered by insurance.

Headquarters was first notified of the blaze by a telephone message from F. H. Andrews and the apparatus was at Eighth street and Park avenue when box No. 36 was pulled. The property is at present occupied by Archibold Henderson, a New York broker, but his horses and carriages are still in the metropolis. The only thing in the barn was a ton of hay and this was mostly consumed. It had to be gone over thoroughly and it was 9:30 before the firemen left the scene.

Before the department arrived, Roy T. Phillips, Jacob Kirkner and Patrolman Saunders did good work in taking out a number of valuable decorations, including two large mooseheads. They had much difficulty removing the latter as they were fastened to the wall with wire.

PICKED COMPANY FOR DRILL

CITY HIGH SCHOOL BATTALION WILL BE REPRESENTED IN CONTESTS.

Major Murphey Will Command— He Has Temporarily Appointed His Officers.

The members of the City High School battalion have decided to form a uniformed company from among the members of the several companies, and with this company they propose to enter several of the military contests to be given throughout the winter by the various military organizations of neighboring cities. They will attempt to hold competitive drills with several cadet corps of the vicinity.

In order to enlarge the size of the company, the non-commissioned officers of the battalion have consented to act as privates during the competitive drills. The company will drill Monday afternoons for several weeks to come. The drilling will be entirely voluntary on the part of the boys.

Major Murphey has made the following temporary appointments for officers in the company, which in all probability will be commanded by himself: First lieutenant, adjutant George L. Babcock; second lieutenant, Lieut. V. B. Miner; first sergeant, J. L. Tweedy; company quartermaster-sergeant, E. I. Weseman; sergeants, H. Thompson, H. Fenne, F. Lock and H. Slauson; corporals, L. Slocum, S. Bogart, E. Daniels, H. Lavell, S. Freeman and H. Lapsley.

FOOTBALL NOT TO BLAME.

Although Arthur Williams Had It Under His Arm When He Fell.

Arthur Williams, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Williams, of Plainfield avenue, is detained at his home from the result of a peculiar accident which befell him Saturday afternoon.

He was running out of F. C. Lounsbury's yard, carrying a football. While passing down the front walk, which was a trifle slippery owing to the presence of moss, he fell on his shoulder and fractured his collar-bone. Young Williams was accompanied by companions, and the injured lad was taken to his home at once. He suffered intense pain, but it was not until Dr. Boone was the extent of the injury known. The physician discovered the break, reset it and now the lad is doing as well as can be expected.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXV. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1902. NO. 49

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities".—Madison.

TROUBLE OVER THE OFFICIALS

Hope Y. M. A. and Alia A. A. Take Decided Stand on Request of the Y. M. C. A.

WILL NOT GRANT IT

Physical Director Heywood Notified Them That Y. M. C. A. Would Not be Allowed to Play Unless He Was An Official—The Request Will Not be Granted.

Although the next game in the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League is scheduled to take place at the Hope gymnasium Friday night, there is a possibility that the game may not be played. According to the schedule, the fives of the Hope Y. M. A. and the Y. M. C. A. meet that evening. The hitch will be over the question of officials.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the league, Monday night, the officials for that game were fixed as follows: Referee, Robert A. Meeker; umpires, S. B. Joseph and Charles B. Morse. Tuesday Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood, of the Y. M. C. A., notified the managers of the other teams that hereafter the Y. M. C. A. team would be allowed to play in no game in which he was not an official. As far as Friday's game is concerned, it is not likely that any change will be permitted as the request of Geo. P. Smith, representative of the Alia A. A. on the executive committee, that the officials for last Monday's game be changed around was refused.

Mr. Heywood's name was suggested as an official several weeks ago but both of the other clubs objected on the ground that it would not be proper to have the physical director and manager of any interested organization officiate. Members of the Alia A. A. have expressed regret at the stand taken by Mr. Heywood but say that it will be impossible to allow him to officiate.

The matter was brought before the Hope Y. M. A. at its meeting Tuesday evening, and the members unanimously voted to allow no official connected with an organization supporting a team, to take part in the games as referee or umpire. Their stand was not aimed particularly at Mr. Heywood but simply to abide by the league rules which do not permit officials acting in that capacity. While it was the expressed opinion that the association was desirous of preserving harmony in the league, the members were open to declaring they would not be already stated.

If the Y. M. C. A. refuses to play unless Mr. Heywood officiates in Friday's game, the game will probably be defaulted to the Hope Y. M. A. Then either out-of-town officials will be secured or the Y. M. C. A. will withdraw, and the other two clubs will continue as a dual league.

Mrs. Campbell, of Westfield, will entertain the club next Wednesday evening.

EVENING OF MUSIC GIVEN AT CASINO

Seventh Subscription Concert, Arranged by A. H. Atterbury, Was a Success.

A PLEASING PROGRAMME

IT INCLUDED QUARTETTES AND SOLOS BY TALENTED VOCALISTS.

Those Who Took Part Were Miss Anita Rio, Mrs. Marian VanDuyn, Ernest T. Martin and Harry F. Burleigh.

A music loving audience of society folk listened to the seventh subscription concert, arranged by A. H. Atterbury, at the Casino, last Tuesday and departed well pleased with the vocalists and their selections. The programme included quartettes and solos by Miss Anita Rio, soprano; Mrs. Marian VanDuyn, contralto; Ernest T. Martin, tenor; Harry F. Burleigh, bass. D. Asaph Evans acted as accompanist.

In excellent time and with voices well blended, the quartette's work was very pleasing. All of its five selections were distinctly successes, Schubert's "Serenade" meeting with the most favor. Miss Rio, who has been heard here several times before, increased her popularity, if such a thing were possible. She had a sweet, well-trained voice and sang with much feeling. Specially impressive was her "Sands of Dee." There was a warm welcome awaiting Mrs. VanDuyn and her numbers were well calculated to display the beauty of a full, rich voice. She appeared equally at home in Italian and English.

Ernest T. Martin was a stranger to most of the audience but his clear, well modulated tenor won him a cordial reception. His concluding number "Rory O'More" was a bit of the evening. Harry F. Burleigh, while he did not possess a voice of the power of some of the bass soloists that have been heard in Mr. Atterbury's concerts, has a fine quality of pleasing. His notes were clear and sustained and his enunciation excellent. He showed his ability by the variety of his selections. Most unusual of all was "Hag' mir Seikos," which was given with a feeling and vigor that won for him an enthusiastic ovation. Mr. Evans' accompaniments were all that could be desired.

TO BUILD SYNAGOGUE.

Congregation Beth Tefelah Isho Yental Has Purchased Lot and Expects to Build There.

The congregation Beth Tefelah Isho Yental, of this city, recently purchased a piece of property on New street upon which the members expect to build a synagogue. The property has been paid for by the contributions and subscriptions of its membership, which is limited in number. This congregation has no place for worship, except a temporary hall, and they are anxious to proceed as soon as possible in the erection of a synagogue.

The committee in charge of this enterprise consists of M. Leichtentritt, Kalmen Rottberg, H. Goldstein, Samuel Dasler, S. Frucht, Jacob A. Fass and J. Sigel. Morris Abrams, of 229 West Front street, is the treasurer, to whom contributions should be paid.

Twice a Grandfather.

Doorman Thomas McCue, of police headquarters, has been made grandfather twice within two weeks. A baby boy arrived at the home of his son, Edward McCue, of West Fourth street, Thursday, and Sunday, his daughter, Mrs. Jeremiah Elliott, of New London, Conn., gave birth to a daughter.

Groom Knows Hers.

A fashionable wedding took place last evening in All Souls' church, Washington, when Miss Anna Marshall, daughter of Mrs. Lodiska J. Hays, and Frank Cory Bliss, both of the Capitol City, were married in the presence of a large number of friends. The groom is a nephew of Mrs. L. J. Denton, of Washington avenue, and has visited Plainfield a number of times.

To Divide Into Lots.

David S. Drake, of Pride place, has purchased a number of building lots in the borough of George W. Boyd for $3,000. The plot of ground is located near the corner of Harrison avenue and Jefferson place. It is the intention of Mr. Drake to sell the lots after they have been divided into lots of suitable size.

WANT TO BAR FOREIGN LABOR

Representatives of the Local Trades Unions Talk of Organizing For That Purpose.

LISTENED TO SPEECHES

The American League of Workingmen Proposed to Work Against Unnaturalized Foreign Labor—All Local Trades Were Represented—Another Meeting.

The question of foreign labor entering into competition with American labor was the important topic discussed with considerable force and emphasis at a meeting of members of all the trades unions in the city, Tuesday evening, in Trades Council Hall on West Second street. Every one of the eighteen unions in the city was represented at the meeting, there being fully two hundred men present. A. C. Rogers, a member of the Carpenters' Union, was chairman of the meeting and was the one who first conceived the proposed plan for the laboring men of Plainfield.

The object of the meeting was to enlist the sympathy and support of all union men in an effort to bar out unnaturalized foreign labor. He quoted many figures to show that the percentage of this kind of labor is increasing and that now is the time for the American workingman to act and thus protect himself as well as his trade. He told how this foreign laboring man would come to this country, earn a few hundred dollars and then take it back to his old home, thus taking American money out of the country. He cited $1,000 as an amount considered a competency for this class of labor.

Mr. Rogers stated that the plan proposed was to thoroughly organize in this city all union men for the purpose of shutting out the unnaturalized foreign laborer, and then to form county, State and National organizations. This plan met with hearty approval, judging by the amount of enthusiasm shown on the part of those present.

James E. Martine was then introduced and he made a stirring address on the subject of labor unions. He said he agreed and endorsed heartily such organized labor and believed that it is up to them to educate and protect the American workingman. He said that he was not opposed to immigration, but he was bitterly opposed to the importation to this country of the scum of foreign countries. He favored an inquisitorial bureau, where all immigrants should be obliged to declare their intentions as soon as they land in this country. Mr. Martine likened this class of immigrants to sponges and leeches and in ringing tones urged all American workingmen to band together and stand together for their rights and in protecting their trades.

Mr. Martine compared the immigrant of years ago with those of today and said that he believed that those now coming to American shores are a far better class. He urged the compulsory ballot, whereby every American citizen should be compelled to vote unless he could produce unquestionable reasons excusing him from this bounden duty. The speaker deplored the fact that many rich Americans are leaving this country and taking their millions to some foreign country. He believed this practice should be discouraged. Regarding the poorest class of foreigners coming to America he said that drastic measures should be taken to stop this flow of filth to the shores of a free country.

Frequently throughout Mr. Martine's address, there were outbursts of applause and his suggestion that the new organization be known as "The American League of Workingmen," was received with the greatest approval. It is likely that this name will be chosen.

Following Mr. Martine, a few words of encouragement were spoken by Rev. John MacMurray, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church. He said that he favored labor unions, provided they are conducted on right principles. He distinctly stated that he did not favor them in their acts of abuse, but in the line of what had already been said, he stated that he thought the time had arrived for action in protecting the American workingman. He said that immigrants must make

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE READ

Sent to Congress When Senate and House Assembled Tuesday Noon.

TEXT OF THE MESSAGE

President Roosevelt Has Something to Say About Trusts and the Tariff—Isthmian Canal Referred To—Needs of Army and Navy Other Subjects Discussed.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

We still continue by a period of unbounded prosperity. This prosperity is due primarily to the fact that wisely and fortunately the laws under which we work have been instrumental in securing the conditions which make it possible and by unwise legislation it would be easy enough to destroy it. There will surely be periods of depression. The wave will recede, but the tide will advance. This nation is suited for a great destiny by its great oceans. It is composed of men the descendants of pioneers, in a sense, pioneers themselves, of the bravest and most adventurous spirits that came from among the nations of the old world by the energy, boldness and love of adventure found in the strongest and most masterful. Such a nation so placed will surely wrest success from fortune.

Such a people have played a large part in the world, and we are bent upon making our future even larger than the past. In particular the events of the last four years have definitely decided that for weal or for woe we must be great among the nations. We may either fail greatly or succeed greatly, but we cannot avoid the struggle. Personally I do not believe failure or great success must come. Even if we would we cannot play a small part. If we strive to play a large part we feel sure we will succeed, and even if we fail we would play a large part honorably and shamefully.

But our people, the sons of the men of the civil war, the sons of the men who had iron in their blood, rejoice in the present and face the future with high heart and resolute will. Ours is not the spirit of the voluptuary, the weakling or the coward; ours is the spirit of hope and of triumphant endeavor. We do not wish merely the struggle before us. There are many problems for us to face at the outset of the twentieth century—grave problems abroad and still graver at home—but we have faith that we shall be able to solve them well, provided only that we bring to the solution the qualities of head and heart which were shown by the men who in the days of Washington founded the republic and by the men who in later years preserved it.

No nation has ever occupied a higher plane of material well being than ours at the present moment. This well being is due to no sudden or accidental causes, but to the play of the fundamental forces in our country for over a century; to our laws, our sustained and continuous policies; above all, to the high individual average of our citizenship. Great fortunes have been won in the past, and more will be won in the future, in many industrial developments; but as a rule these fortunes have been won not by doing evil, but as an incident to doing good. The wealth acquired by the individual has normally been the reward for action that has benefited the community as a whole. Never before has material well being been so widely diffused among our people. Great fortunes have been accumulated, and yet in the aggregate, the number of people who have died when compared to the wealth of the country has been small, and the average well being of the mass of our people has been higher than ever before. The fortunes that have been made in the years that are past have been largely made honestly, and the wealth gained by the people as a whole in the years has been enormously greater than the wealth gained by the few individuals who have become rich. Moreover, the prosperity has been general. All callings have shared in it; not merely the callings that make the big profits, but the callings that secure only moderate profits. Indeed, the middle class, the wage workers, and the tillers of the soil have profited more than those who have become very rich.

Of course, this general statement is subject to many modifications. There are sections of the country where agriculture has been depressed for a number of years. There are callings in which over-crowding has gone on until profits are very low indeed. There are individuals who fail in every calling, no matter how prosperous the average man in that calling may be. But the general fact remains that our wonderful material prosperity during the past five years has been shared by all our people in a remarkable degree.

Two matters connected with our present prosperity should be treated at the outset of this message because of their importance—namely, the question of the regulation of the big business industries commonly doing an interstate business, and the question of the proper limitation and exercise of the power of taxation.

In my message to the present congress at the first session thereof, I discussed at length the question of the relations of the general government to the great corporations known as trusts. I shall not now repeat the recommendations then made, but I call the attention of the congress to them as being in the opinion of the executive the most important legislative proposals now before the congress. Since the congress met in December last the investigation of the Department of Commerce and Labor into the Standard Oil Company has been completed, and a report will be laid before you in due course. This report shows conclusively the enormous prejudice done to the general welfare by the methods employed in conducting the business of the great combinations, and shows the need of additional legislation to correct the evils. Such legislation can only come from the congress, and it is therefore a matter of importance that the congress should realize the exact facts which make this legislation necessary. The business public should understand that the investigation is not being conducted in a hostile spirit, that we are not trying to hamper or cripple any honest business concern, but that we are trying to find out the truth, in order that we may intelligently apply the remedy where the remedy is needed. Publicity is the only sure remedy which we can now invoke. What we need is knowledge, not guesswork. We are not attacking the rich, we are not trying to pull down big fortunes; but we are determined to find out whether or not certain big combinations are hurtful to the general welfare. Such combinations are sometimes hurtful to the general welfare, and it is certain that some of the worst are so. Publicity is the only weapon which we can efficiently use against the evils in question. Our aim is not to strike down wealth, but to see that wealth is honestly acquired and honestly used. We are fighting for the rights of property as against communistic disturbers of property rights; but we are also fighting to prevent the misuse of property, and we hold that the right to regulate the use of wealth in the interest of the public welfare is the essential and indispensable complement of the right to hold property at all. Corporations and especially combinations of corporations should be subject to proper governmental supervision and regulation. Such supervision can best be secured by the action of the national government. In my judgment we should not attempt to forbid by law the existence of these big concerns. Experience has shown that combinations in restraint of trade are sometimes beneficial to the public as well as to the shareholders, and that the mere existence of great wealth does not necessarily imply that it has been gained wrongfully. The publicity produced by the mere power to make these combinations subject to examination and regulation will tend to minimize the evils, and the real owners of the property, if deprived of the power to do wrong, will be protected from unjust suspicion. The first essential in determining how to deal with the trusts is knowledge of the facts—publicity. In the interest of the public, the government should have the right to inspect and examine the workings of the great corporations engaged in interstate business. Such inspection should be primarily for the purpose of ascertaining the facts and reporting them to the public. Some of the combinations are subject to the supervision of the interstate commerce commission. Others should be subject to a similar supervision. The supervision need not go into minute detail. Indeed, it should not go into detail at all. It should not extend to the routine business of the concern. But it should embrace the essential facts as to the business done, the prices charged, the profits secured, the methods by which competition is conducted, the treatment of employees as regards wages, hours and conditions of labor, and the effect of the business upon the general welfare. Publicity can do no harm to any honest corporation. We can not make any man honest, but we can make it so that dishonesty will take the form of honesty. Under such a system of publicity as I advocate, the officials who exercise supervision would not have power to make the reports public, but they would have power to call the facts before them and to compel the officials to explain any seeming irregularities. Artificial bodies, such as corporations and combinations, should have no secrets from the representatives of the people, chosen by the people to obtain for the people the needed information concerning them. Such publicity would tend to prevent the commission of crimes against the people, because the records would be open to the fearless light that beats upon the throne of tyranny. Such publicity would tend to show conclusively whether the business man is honest or dishonest in his methods, whether he is a good citizen or a bad citizen. If he is a good citizen, the conditions under which he works should be such as to encourage him to do well; if he is a bad citizen, he should be forced to do well or else to retire from business. Such publicity would tend to show whether or not our laws are defective, and to point out the way in which they should be changed to meet the needs of a complex industrial life. Such publicity would tend to show whether or not the various officials charged with the execution of the laws are executing them honestly and efficiently. Such publicity would tend to make the course of the judges clear in all matters affecting the great combinations of wealth. Finally, such publicity would show whether or not the interstate commerce commission has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers already conferred upon it by the congress. Such publicity would show whether or not the department of commerce and labor has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers conferred upon it by the congress. Such publicity would show whether or not the department of justice has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers conferred upon it by the congress. Such publicity would show whether or not the department of the treasury has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers conferred upon it by the congress. Such publicity would show whether or not the department of the interior has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers conferred upon it by the congress. Such publicity would show whether or not the department of agriculture has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers conferred upon it by the congress. Such publicity would show whether or not the department of the navy has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers conferred upon it by the congress. Such publicity would show whether or not the department of the army has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers conferred upon it by the congress. Such publicity would show whether or not the department of the treasury has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers conferred upon it by the congress. Such publicity would show whether or not the department of the interior has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers conferred upon it by the congress. Such publicity would show whether or not the department of agriculture has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers conferred upon it by the congress. Such publicity would show whether or not the department of the navy has been able to secure all the information necessary to enable it to exercise the powers conferred upon it by the congress. WESTFIELD WON THREE STRAIGHT Defeated Park Club in Opening Series in The Daily Press Bowling League Last Night.

ROLLED AT WESTFIELD

Plainfield Bowlers Were in Poor Form—Badly Beaten in First and Third Games, But Lost the Second by Margin of Twenty-Three Pins—The Scores.

The opening series in The Daily Press Bowling League resulted in the defeat of the Park Club bowlers last night at the Westfield Clubhouse where they played against the Westfields. The local team went down like pins before the fearful rolling of the Westfields who lead almost all through the three games by large majorities.

The playing was very interesting and was witnessed by a large number of people, many of whom were women. The alleys were in excellent condition.

Townsend, of the Park Club, rolled high in the first game but did not make such good scores in the second. In that game Peck rolled 45 higher than any man on his team but in the Westfield score, Forster did the high playing in both games. In playing the last game the Park Club scores were exceedingly low. The local players fell behind at the opening of the game and were unable to rally. Townsend was left behind and Dumont did the star playing for the Parks but while the Park's highest individual score in the last game was 145 for Dumont, Hageman, who played against him in the Westfield team, made 154 and his was next to the lowest score made by Westfield in that game. The highest individual score for Westfield was 179 which was made by both Smith and Condit.

In the first game the total of the Parks was 162 pins below that of the Westfields. In the second game the local players were defeated by twenty-three pins but in the last game the Westfields outplayed the local players by 196 pins.

The individual scores made at last night's games were as follows.

SENIOR PLAY.

City High School Seniors Will Give "Midsummer Night's Dream."

The senior class of the City High School will give an amateur performance of Shakespeare's comedy "Midsummer Night's Dream" at Franklin Hall on Saturday evening, December 13. The cast has been selected and is holding regular rehearsals. The performance will be somewhat abridged but will include the best known and most characteristic parts of the play.

An Old Time Minstrel.

James Dougherty, of the Hotel Kensington, who rendered several solos at the smoker of the Democratic club, Thanksgiving eve was at one time a member of French's old time minstrel troupe and some of the selections rendered Wednesday evening were some of the most popular songs which he sang while on the road. He was wildly enchored at the smoker.

Miss Josephine Petrie will speak on "Home Missions" at the Crescent Avenue church Friday evening under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the church.

Epworth League Entertainment.

An entertainment entitled "The Crasford" will be given in the Monroe Avenue church, Tuesday evening, December 9. It will be in charge of the Epworth League.

LAYING ASIDE FUNDS FOR CAMPING TRIP

Hope Y. M. A. Establishes a "Camp" Fund to Receive Contributions This Winter.

GOING TO BUILD LODGE

GEORGE M'COMB, WAS APPOINTED A PHYSICAL INSTRUCTOR AT GYM.

New Apparatus Installed and Four Classes in Physical Work to be Organized—Other Business Done.

Although not in keeping with the present season, the members of the Hope Y. M. A. at their meeting, last evening, promulgated a scheme tending to give them added enjoyment in the coming summer. It was the establishment of a "camp" fund, which has for its object the laying aside of small sums by the young men during the winter until they accumulate enough to bear the expenses of a trip such as was had last season. J. Fred Wharton was elected treasurer of the fund.

Last summer's camping excursion at Lake Hopatcong proved so successful that the association has in contemplation the acquirement of enough land on is banks upon which to build a lodge. This will be kept open all the summer. A committee will be appointed at a future meeting which will visit the lake region and secure options on suitable property.

A lot of new apparatus was installed in the gymnasium last night and George McComb appointed physical instructor. He will meet the young men, Thursday evening, and form classes in physical work which will continue in force until spring.

The troubles in the basket ball league were discussed and the association took a decided stand in the matter. The action taken will be found in another column.

Other business transacted during the evening was the election of four new members and the receiving of several propositions. The next meeting is to be held next Tuesday evening.

MORE BOOKS.

Public Library Directors Appropriate $500 for That Purpose —Other Business.

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Library was held last night. Those present were, M. W. Tyler, J. Evarts Tracy, Alexander Gilbert, J. Herbert Case, W. H. Larrabee and H. P. Talmadge.

After the transaction of the regular routine business, the request of the chairman of the literary committee for an appropriation of $500 for the purchase of books for the general library was granted. The motion was made and carried that the fund to the credit of the Babcock Library, now with the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company be transferred to the Plainfield Trust Company after January 1, on condition that an equal rate of interest be allowed by the latter.

A communication from Maxwell E. Perkins acknowledging the receipt of the copy of the resolution adopted at the last meeting, was read and ordered on file.

The application from the New Jersey Library Association for an institute to be held in this city was read and referred to the president with power. After which the meeting was adjourned.

HEARD FROM PRESIDENT

Acknowledges His Election as a Vice President of the North Plainfield Athletic Club.

The North Plainfield Athletic Club entertained the football eleven last evening at the home of Edward Koechlien, on Somerset street. There was an entertainment consisting of vocal selections by the Bon-Ton quartette, and various games were played. A feature was a tri-city chess match between three members of the club and three outsiders. The home team won 3 to 0.

During the evening there was read a letter from President Roosevelt, acknowledging the honor conferred upon him in being elected a vice president of the club. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of H. C. Bross, Edward Koechlien and Wm. Nischwitz.

BOY ENDED HIS LIFE WITH ACID

Harry Levine, Aged Seventeen, Drank Carbolic Acid and Died Soon After.

THE CAUSE IS DOUBTFUL

Supposed to Have Quarrelled With His Stepmother—Lived at 527 West Third Street—Staggered Into Home Late Tuesday—Cause Not Known at First.

For some reason yet to be ascertained, Harry Levine, a seventeen-year-old boy living at 527 West Third street, swallowed a quantity of carbolic acid, late late Tuesday which resulted in his death. He staggered into his apartment after an absence of several days, presumably in Brooklyn, and the family with which he lived summoned Drs. VanHorn and Carrie under the impression he was afflicted with a fit. The physicians worked over the lad for some time without learning the real cause of his agony, as the lips were not burned to any extent. He died shortly before 2 o'clock next morning.

Patrolman Charles Flynn was summoned and making a search of the apartments found two bottles, one of which was filled with carbolic acid and the other containing a small amount. The fatal bottle contained the label of a local druggist and it was said today that he was seen in the pharmacy at 10 o'clock, last night. The partially empty bottle, from which he evidently drank the fatal dose, bore no indentification marks.

Levine, who was an intelligent boy, has lived in this city for a year far more and has been learning the trade of tailor with Julius Sigel, with whom he lived. Sigel said today that he could assign no cause for the suicide beyond the fact that he had quarrelled with his stepmother, who came to this city from Brooklyn, last Sunday. He went away with her that night taking $50 of his savings and nothing more was seen of him until he staggered in his bedroom, Tuesday night.

He evidently drank the acid outside the house or on the stairway. The $50 was missing from his clothing and also a trip ticket which he secured from Kalmon Rottberg. Sigel vouchsafed the opinion that his stepmother took the money and ticket from him and that it caused him to become moody.

The remains were viewed by the county physician today and a burial permit was issued. In response to a telegram, the boy's father came here this morning and will complete arrangements for the funeral service. The remains will probably be interred in a local cemetery.

Removed From Hospital.

The condition of James D. Macnab, commercial instructor in the City High School, was so far improved as to warrant his discharge from Muhlenberg Hospital last Saturday. Mr. Macnab has been operated on for appendicitis and underwent the operation so successfully as to warrant his discharge in a little over two weeks. He will probably resume his duties at the High School after the Christmas vacation.

Date is Fixed.

The Fad and Fencil Club has fixed upon Wednesday evening, December 17, as the date for its reception and dance in the I. C. T. Club rooms. The committee having the affair in charge promises that it will be unique in many particulars. Invitations are now being sent out.

Miss Honeycutt to Wed.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Marie Honeycutt, of Washington Park, and Lieut. Frederick W. Henricks, of the U. S. A. The affair will be celebrated Wednesday, December 24, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, on Rockview avenue.

For Winter Cruise.

Among the members of the New York Yacht Club whose yachts are to be fitted out for winter cruises, it is understood that Pliny Fiske's steam yacht Riviera is to be prepared for a cruise in southern waters.

Settled Out of Court.

The case of Keller against Mulford, on contract, which was to have been tried before Justice Mosher had been settled out of court. The plaintiff was represented by Attorney William G. DeMeza.

FOR EVENING WEAR.

Soft, Delicate Materials Are the Proper Thing.

Evening toilets are invariably made from soft fabrics, and silks which stand alone are no longer fashionable. Crepe de chine is an ideal material for evening wear and is now produced at quite reasonable prices, with all its softness and much of its silky effect retained. Pale delicate colorings are exquisite in crepe de chine, and either chiffon or lace with touches of colored velvet is lovely for trimming purposes.

A most stylish evening gown can be made from black crepe de chine and if arranged with a short, loose bolero cut low in the neck can be converted into a dinner or day gown by having one transparent slip and another with full tucked sleeves and a yoke.

This type of gown is most useful during the season and can be so arranged that the only expense arises from the slip bodices, which may easily be made at home and which do not take much material.

A dainty gown for a young girl is here shown. The material can be any dotted thin goods. It is made over pale blue silk and ornamented with narrow blue ribbons. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHION NOTES.

The New Tailor Made Suits—Accordion Plaited Flounces.

Accordion plaited flounces are being revived or the plaited skirt is set into a fancy yoke covering the hips and made perfectly tight fitting. Tightly shaped skirts of lace finished in deep scallops flow out over underskirts edged with many frills of chiffon or soft satin.

The new tailor made suits are models of daintiness, and none is complete without some trifling touch of embroidery applique.

Stiff costumes have been relegated to the past, together with other mannish styles. The costume of the moment is tucked, bloused and so designed that it shows to the best advantage the curves of a supple figure. Seven, nine and even eleven gored skirts are being cut, and perpendicular tuckings and strappings are, taking the place of the circular flounces women have grown tired of.

Fancy collars and odd shaped revers of panne are combined with black broadcloth, and little fancy vests of flowered silk add to the dressiness of such costumes.

The shirt waist in the illustration is of pin dotted moire. The stock is of taffeta. JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE WORLD OF MILLINERY.

French Combinations of Color—Fur Muffs Revived.

The favorite color in Paris is the new cerise in a rather paler shade than of yore. This is mixed with the reddish pinks, which form a beautiful study in color. However, such a shade is not always becoming, and for more general wear there are delightful green and blue mixtures, with dashes of yellow, in beaver made up into large toques or small hats, the only decoration being a glace rosette or some silk tassels.

Smart toques, too, are made of cloth to match frocks, the brim lined with some dark colored velvet. Nearly all women are wise to keep rolls of dark velvet near the face. It is infinitely more becoming in the gray autumn days, and nothing is softer than velvet.

Hats of beaver, threaded through with glace ribbon, are extremely popular.

Fur hats will be more worn this winter than ever. The principal skins used are chinchilla, mink and squirrel.

A pretty chinchilla hat trimmed with two white ostrich plumes is shown in the sketch. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FUR GARMENTS.

They Are Made Up In Very Striking Fashions.

Fur garments are very sumptuous this year, or, rather, sumptuous looking, for the most inexpensive furs are now being made into ideally lovely garments. Women have hitherto looked with contempt upon marmot and squirrel, but these now figure in chic little boleros. Squirrel has to be treated with care and is greatly improved by the addition of some ermine edging and some good lace guipure.

There is a perfect craze for velvet, both plain and spotted, for day and evening wear.

The rough fur coats are mostly three-quarter length for motoring and other purposes. The more sumptuous forms of carriage wraps are full length, which is a wise proceeding, as they can then be used for evening coats.

EVENING GOWN OF BLACK NET.

There is a fancy for brocade linings, but most people remain faithful to the pure white and pearl gray satins.

Furriers are adopting the full pleturesque sleeves. Some fall over the wrists into a neat cuff, while the long carriage coats show fascinating ruffles of lace inside the bell sleeves.

The pretty decollete gown shown is of spotted black net over white silk. The skirt is particularly smart.

Literature as a Trade.

To write successfully requires to serve a long and hard apprenticeship. It means to do many things badly in order to learn to do a few things well; to read many authors, and good ones; to live with words till one knows their value, and it means, too, that one must know something about the reality of life. In short, writing is a trade, just like bookbinding or typesetting. It is different, of course; it has a higher side. We believe, but to think only of the higher side and ignore the trade part of it is to prepare oneself for a great disappointment. Decidedly the novice should not expect to earn pin money by setting down her day dreams when successful authors are obliged to slave daytime and nighttime in order to learn the mechanics of the art.—Woman's Home Companion.

FOR HANDSOME GOWNS.

Embroideries, Ribbon Work and Fringing Are All Used.

Embroideries of every description are used on day gowns, but the raised ribbon work is not very popular. Scrolls, sprays and leaves cut from velvet are applied on this material, and of these black marguerites of velvet with centers of yellow beads are quite charming on pink and yellow gowns.

Lace is also cut in medallions and outlined with passementerie or a combination of jet and fancy stitching.

Colored velvet ribbons are much used, especially to run through lace or to form stripes between tucks or plaits.

EVENING GOWN.

The latter are connected with herringbone stitching, which has a pretty effect over the colored velvet. A great deal of ruching in silk and chiffon is used, and fringe is revived and attached to lace with a handsome effect.

An elaborate Parisian gown is here shown. The material is white crepe de chine inlet with Persian medallions. The lace is a delicate cream.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

SMART COSTUMES.

Braiding Is Being Revived—A Harmony in Gray.

Braiding is revived, and graduated lines of waved braid have a novel effect on a skirt. This method is repeated on the blouse and sleeves. Bunches of tassels, fringes and tags are much used, and those tiny buttons which have the effect of nail heads are still in vogue. Parisians are fond of tassels and fringes, and a smart model made for a recent wedding had the deep overskirt edged with a handsome gray fringe to match the faced cloth and beaded by a border of Irish lace dyed to a soft fleelie tint.

The entire costume was a harmony in gray and fleelie lace, the gray shades varying in tone and the whole completed by touches of orchid pink and an exquisite stole and bag muff of chinchilla fur. The hat, quite flat and spreading, was of dark mouse colored velvet draped with old lace falling in ends at the back and fastened with a choa of silver spangled tulle in a paler gray and a big brush osprey in white under the left side, which was slightly raised. Inside, the projecting front folds of the pink velvet were caught down with two small glittering buckles.

The automobile coat in the illustration is of mastic cloth lined with fur and having fronts and revers of sable. The toque is of sable, with a lace crown. JUDIC CHOLLET.

High Praise.

Barber—What do you think of this soap?

Victim—Never tasted better. Life.

ACCESSORIES OF DRESS.

Sashes and Flower Ornaments—Sleeves of Net and Tulle.

Net skirts are extensively flounced at the edge, but three godet frills forming an entire skirt are fashionable and are of the three tier type, each frill bordered with wide lace or with medallions or vandykes. Lace flounces are extremely fashionable, but the majority are straight at the top, and the godet flounching of lace is shown in imitation of handsome lace.

TAILOR STYLE.

Russian Blouse Costumes Are Very Popular For Young People.

The Russian blouse costume is decidedly popular with the young and slender, and there are many charming novelties to make and finish. The newest Russian blouses have hoodlike collars with trimmings around the shoulders or are collarless and trimmed flat, and this fashion admits of charming little chemisettes which have a very smart effect when the fur boa or stole is removed. The furs set much better over the flat plain blouse.

The tightly draped collars are often made to turn up at the edge, a method which accentuates the effect of a hood. Now that light colored gowns are worn during the winter, borderings of dark fur are in request, and brown skunk is a very handsome fur and smart on mastic and antelope cloth, while it is also used on opera coats of light satin cloth.

Dotted white point d'esprit is the material of this simple but effective evening gown, which is trimmed with bows of black velvet.

SAM WARD'S RECIPE.

It Made Terrapin Stew Famous the World Over.

Epicures Pronounce It the Greatest of Culinary Triumphs of Taste for the Amphibian as Acquired One.

[Special Washington Letter.]

TERRAPIN time has come again. This delicacy of the rich and epicurean is becoming well nigh extinct. Systematic cultivation alone has prevented the entire disappearance of the once numerous amphibians.

Terrapin farming—that is, the "planting" of terrapin as it would be known in oyster terminology—is not by any means new. About twenty-five years ago a man of the name of Dorlin established a terrapin pound just below Mobile where he kept young terrapin for growth, and where he claimed to be also raising terrapin from the egg. The report of the fish commission, however, denies that he did any breeding. The Dorlin terrapin farm was destroyed by one of the terrific Gulf storms, and was never reestablished.

Every year there is a scare throughout the eastern country, particularly in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, over the likelihood of the disappearance of terrapin. Last year the report was spread at the beginning of the fall and winter season, and the wealthy were obliged to pay enormous prices. They were the more anxious to have terrapin at any price, because dealers said that another winter might come and no terrapin would be served. The report again went all over this section late the past summer when the farmers and fishermen of Maryland and Virginia were impounding terrapin for the coming winter trade. All along the shores of Chesapeake bay supplies of terrapin are being collected for the market of the immediate future. There are laws against impounding terrapin, but they are ignored.

Although there is no sale for terrapin until snow flies, which is about Christmas time, the farmers of the states contiguous to the bay are constantly on the lookout for stray terrapin, which they pick up and take home, where they hold them for the season. They do not fatten them on the contrary they seldom feed them. Terrapin hibernate. When he has had his spring or summer feed he can be put in a pen or barn and left for two or three months. He will not die. A Baltimore dealer sailed one time box and left him there for three months, at the end of which time he claimed that the captive weighed one ounce more than he did when he was imprisoned. This story is one which is well verified, and there are other tales of terrapin longevity, which are regarded by some as of less credulity. Scientists all admit, however, that the terrapin is a hibernating amphibian.

In the neighborhood of Chincoteague island, near the eastern shore of Maryland, in Chesapeake bay, there are several houses where from 200 to 1,000 terrapin are stored in straw in good seasons. They are very curious looking fellows of all sizes and are a sight to behold. Whenever the owner wants to display them he raps hard on the side of the house before opening the door. Each terrapin sticks his head out of the straw to see what the noise is about. They have very acute hearing and manifest great curiosity whenever any unusual noises are heard. Down south they are lured to destruction by this trait. A fisherman rowing over the mud banks raps on the side of his boat. Water carries the sound, and the terrapin comes to the surface to see what made that noise, and the fisherman very promptly satisfies the curiosity of the inquirer.

The officials of the fish commission do not believe that the terrapin will become extinct so long as systematic farming is carried on, but they believe that this industry should be increased very largely.

Washington and LaFayette, Cornwallis and Tarleton knew the quality of terrapin stew, but they ate it sometimes for want of something better, and not as a luxury. Terrapin stew was one of the hardships of their military environments occasionally. There was at one time a law in Maryland providing that a man should feed only so much terrapin to his slaves, for even the slaves rebelled against such a diet. And, for that matter, no civilized white man really likes terrapin when he first eats it, but acquires the taste because it is fashionable and expensive, and because everybody tells him what a grand luxury it will be when he becomes accustomed to it. All of which is true, for the taste once acquired is everlasting.

The farmers and fishermen along the bay shores ate terrapin because it was economical to do so. The crop was so valueless that they would not take the trouble to gather any more than was sufficient for the use of their own families during the season. Naturally they would expect their slaves to take to the same kind of food, but the slaves were right out in open rebellion against terrapin. They were docile enough and endured all sorts of hardships, and injustices, but when it came to terrapin for a steady diet they declared they could not stand it. Consequently the law was enacted limiting the amount of that sort of food for the slaves. But, beginning with terrapin for the sake of economy, the white folks acquired the taste. Senator John M. Clayton, of Delaware, was very fond of terrapin. He usually bought an ox load of them for a dollar, and had them shoveled into his cellar like coals. His own people regarded his taste for terrapin as so peculiar that it became a tradition of his state until everybody began eating terrapin.

Although the negroes do not care for terrapin they are great hunters and cooks of the toothsome amphibian. They liked nothing better than to get away from plantation work and go hunting terrapin, and they are still so inclined. There was no commercial demand for terrapin previous to 1850. The waters of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina fairly swarmed with them. They were unmolested except for home tables. But when the people of northern states began to acquire the taste the fishermen began bringing them to market. Then there was a system of southern hospitality, which was exceedingly shrewd. Relatives and other visitors from northern states were entertained lavishly, and they were given terrapin everywhere. They are regaled with stories of how to make the stew, and had indulged later their appetite until they went back north talking terrapin and nothing else.

Sam Ward, once known as the king of the lobby, was successful in all his schemes before congress primarily because he was a continually extravagant entertainer. He studied all of the epicurean artifices and was himself one of the best of cooks. His terrapin stew was famous, and he always either made it himself or personally supervised its making. Here is his recipe: "Immerse live terrapin in boiling water. Let it boil half an hour. Then take out, remove lower shell, carefully cutting out the meat. Take out gall bag without cutting or breaking, and throw it away. Remove liver and cut it into cubes. Remove meat from upper shell, disjoint and place in iron pot with the cubed liver and a pint of the liquor in which terrapin was boiled. Watch carefully and cook until tender. Serve in a sauce made of two ounces best butter, a pinch of flour, half pint cream, cayenne pepper and salt. On the bottom of each plate place a piece of bacon cooked crisp, so that it will easily break all to pieces."

It was with that recipe that Sam Ward captured the prince of Wales, and until this day King Edward has his terrapin stews in season, made on Sam Ward's recipe. Until the day of his death John Chamberlin, the famous restaurateur, served terrapin in the same way. After his death the rich and extravagant guests of his house said that they could not get any terrapin fit to eat there, and so John Chamberlin's famous place in this city has long been closed. It was literally built on terrapin.

Terrapin are found only in America. From Long Island sound to Texas they are to be found, and a very few have been taken on the Pacific coast. The terrapin of the northern waters receive the preference of epicures, because their flesh is more delicate. That is because they develop more slowly than the terrapin of the southern waters. The most prolific waters are those along the Virginia shore just below the mouth of the Potomac river. The terrapin of Maryland waters bring better prices than the Virginian because they are finer, but Virginia produces by two-thirds more of the terrapin in the market. The diamond-back terrapin of Chesapeake bay is the best of all, and therefore the most costly. And the most desirable diamondback is the six-inch fellow. After them are the heifers and the bulls; the latter being cheapest and used in restaurants for terrapin soup, a very inferior imitation of the genuine stew of the tables of the rich.

Suppose you save up your extra pennies, and have a terrapin stew instead of turkey for your next Christmas dinner?

Girls Who Make Their Opportunities

ONCE upon a time there were two girls. Both were forced to earn their living. The first girl had a good education, she was naturally brilliant, and things came easily to her. She obtained a position which gave her a certain amount of spare time, much more than falls to the lot of the average worker. Did she profit by this to increase her talents, to make herself more valuable in her present position, to guard herself against the time when that position might be no longer hers? Not a bit of it. She lived to the full extent of her income and even a trifle over, she spent her money on dress, on little dinners—she wasted it in a thousand foolish ways. Ultimately what might have been expected happened. Through a succession of changes she was suddenly put out of her position. There were no offers of that kind open to her. Her several other talents were in that crude condition where they were of no use to anybody. She had no money to perfect herself in any of them; result, a life ruined.

Girl No. 2 started out with a severe handicap. She could barely read, write and spell, but she was brave and ambitious, which means nearly everything in this world. The only position she was able to find was one in a shop, a very inferior position, too, where the hours were long and there was next to no opportunity to rise. Did she become discouraged? Not a bit of it. Instead of wasting her time evenings she attended a night school where she learned advertising, besides improving her much neglected education. Today she is advertising manager for a large dry goods house at a good, big salary. And yet she began with practically nothing.

Yet another case: Two girls came to New York; neither knew a soul. At the end of two years one girl had a nice little circle of good acquaintances, the other is still complaining of the coldness of the big city toward strangers and the temptations with which it besieges a lonely girl. The reason is not hard to find. The first girl went to a good church, became introduced to the pastor and through him was given an opportunity of joining one or two of the church societies, where she met nice women who helped her in every way they possibly could. She made friends by her goodness, her simplicity and her earnestness to succeed and to do right.

The other girl stayed in her stuffy hall bedroom and waited for fate to help her. When she did go out, it was not to go to church or to cultivate the society of serious minded women who might be of some good to her. Instead she frequented cafes and such places with any man she could coax to take her, and she found a few worthless fellows attracted by her pretty face and amused by her foolish ways. The few women acquaintances she made she treated with indifference. They were no good, hadn't enough money, couldn't give dinners or introduce her to men. She lost sight of the principle that it takes time and patience to make the right circle of friends, and also that the right sort of man, the man who is safe to marry, is not found floating about town, but is met at the houses of women friends. Result, she is obliged now to confine herself entirely to Bohemian circles, not a very satisfying element for a girl brought up as she has been.

It all comes to this—there is hardly a girl who has succeeded who has not owed it to herself; on the other hand, hardly a girl has failed but it is largely through her own fault.

There is no reason why any right minded girl should be lonely even in a large city. With care and patience she can form a circle of friends if she seeks them in the proper way and treats them properly.

There is no excuse for any girl not succeeding in this world, provided she has ambition, health and an ordinary amount of intelligence.

Don't tell me you haven't the opportunities. Make them for yourself!

MAUD ROBINSON.

REED RULES DOOMED

Congressmen Are Tired of Being Bossed by the Speaker.

Col. Henderson's Successor Will Be Simply a Presiding Officer and Not the Autocrat of Congress.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"AND now, in accordance with the constitutional duty devolved upon me, I declare this house adjourned without day."

Exactly at noon on March 4, 1903, those words will be pronounced by Speaker Henderson, the heavy gavel will resound and the fifty-seventh congress will come to a close. Speaker Henderson, who retires to private life, will be the last presiding officer of the national house of representatives who shall wield imperial powers over his colleagues.

The rules of the house of representatives, which have become known as the Reed rules, ever since they were promulgated in December, 1899, have given autocratic power to the speaker. Time and again efforts have been made to change these rules, but to no purpose. The republicans have always pointed with pride to the great advance made in national legislation while Reed was speaker; and both parties have agreed that Reed was right in declaring that "a viable quorum was the constitutional quorum which could proceed "to do business."

But a majority of the house of representatives has been in favor of changing the rules, in some particulars, for at least six years. Congressman Hepburn, of Iowa, has been the leader in the attack upon the Reed rules, and he will continue to be the leader in the fight. It is well known that Col. Hepburn had a majority of the republicans in caucus assembled, in December, 1899, and he could have then forced important changes in the rules, but he forbore. His colleague and friend, Col. Henderson, had just been selected for the speakership, and it would have seemed exceedingly ungracious in a member from his own state to have insisted on curtailing his powers before he was inducted into his high office. If any other than Col. Henderson, who succeeded to the speakership in December, 1899, the rules would have been surely changed.

There is a great deal of speculation already concerning the speakership of the next congress. One thing may as well be regarded as settled, and that is, no matter who secures the prize of that exalted position, he will be simply a presiding officer, as the constitution intended it to be, and not a ruler of representatives selected by sovereign constituencies precisely as he was himself selected. The rules will be carefully amended, the main point to be observed being that each representative shall really be a representative — one whose voice and vote shall command attention and respect.

Speaker Reed was autocratic. Speaker Henderson has not been. No more conservative speaker ever occupied the chair than Mr. Crisp, of Georgia, for he was not autocratic. There is no complaint concerning the man who may have been, or who may be, speaker of the house of representatives. Criticism exists concerning the rules rather than concerning the man who enforces them. Tom Reed not only ruled the house, but rudely ruled it, at times. But his majority was slender, and he had to be a big boss, or no boss at all.

Whoever shall be chosen for the speakership when the new congress shall have convened on the first Monday of December, 1903, will in all probability be allowed the power of the appointment of the committees and committee chairmen; and that will be power enough for one man to wield over his fellow representatives. But he will not be allowed to command all legislation through the committee on rules. There is where the representatives will check the one-man power which so many have complained during the past six years.

It is well remembered that Speaker Reed blandly smiled when a petition signed by a majority of the house of representatives was presented to him, praying for consideration of the bill for the Nicaraguan canal. Remember, a majority of the members of the national house of representatives—think of it! That majority had elected, had created the speaker, but under their rules those representatives were obliged to petition their creature, the speaker, and pray for permission to legislate as a majority desired to represent. And what came of it? Speaker Reed said that he would "give it consideration." He was as good as his word. He did give the matter consideration until the close of the congress, but he did not permit the majority to rule. He never allowed the bill to come before the house at all.

Now it does not require a constitutional lawyer to explain that the constitution of this republic of the people never intended that one man should throttle the representatives of the people, and prevent them from legislating. That is the stand which is taken by Col. Hepburn and a majority of the house; and that is the reason that it is easy to fore-

HON. CHAS. E. LITTLEFIELD.
(Maine Congressman Who Wants to Succeed Speaker Henderson).

see that the rules will be changed, so that no man who may occupy the chair of the speaker shall have such imperial power in the republic. It is barely possible that the house will agree its own committees, as the senate does; but that reform is not so imminent.

So long as the speaker is permitted to name the committees and doit out the chairmanships there will be deals possible in contests for the speakership. For example, four years ago, a New York man was a candidate for the speakership, and if he had succeeded, a Kansas man would have taken his place as chairman of the committee on Indian affairs. Naturally enough the Kansas man supported the New York man for the speakership, and there by consulted his own self interests.

Under existing rules no representative of the people is allowed to lift his voice in debate, no matter what outrages (according to his opinion) may be under contemplation. The speaker sits in his exalted position, and never sees nor hears any representative of the people who may clamor for recognition, unless the representative shall have previously called and stated his business and secured permission from the speaker to address the house. In that event, if the speaker fully understands the situation and agrees to "give recognition," as they term it, the representative of the sovereign people may be recognized and heard.

It will be news to a majority of readers that the representatives of the people do not present anything at all under existing rules in the house of representatives. The member of congress is regarded as a great man at home, but as he nears Washington he shrinks. When he gets here, he finds that he is only a small herd of individuals who have no rights whatever, except which are accorded charitably by the older members and the speaker.

Under existing rules every bill offered is referred to an appropriate committee for consideration. That looks well on paper. But the presiding officer scans the bills, and informs the chairman of each committee which bills shall be considered and which shall not be considered. To such an autocratic condition have the rules brought the house that not even before a committee of the house does a representative of the people have any chance of success, without the consent of the speaker. For example, you or some friend may have a bill providing for the payment of a claim arising out of the civil war. A bill is introduced and referred to the committee on war claims. Your bill may not amount to more than $1,000, and it may be a just claim. But the speaker tells the chairman of the committee that the claims in all similar bills amount to upwards of $9,000,000, and that none of those bills shall be reported. The chairman who is appointed by the speaker, does as he is ordered; and your bill dies with all others by that peremptory order—no matter whether right and justice are on your side.

After the damnable outrage of the centuries, the villainy of all cycles of civilization, the explosion of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor, while all of our people were clamoring for vengeance, determined upon war to drive from this continent the nation that had requited our friendly visit with assassination, Speaker Reed refused the petitioners of the house permission to consider resolutions for the declaration of war. On that occasion the people rose over the speaker and his rules, because the provocation was so great.

But, ordinarily, the speaker rules congress, and the time is not far distant when those rules must be changed.

NAMES AMONG NEGROES.

How So Many Odd and Classical Appellations Came to Be Borne by Them.

There is a good reason for the curious proper names even now in use amongst negroes, says an article on the American negro in Leslie's Monthly. Their native African names were scarcely ever used, owing to both difficulty in pronunciation as well as inability on the part of the blacks to give them when demanded. The Mandingo custom of ordinary names on the arrival of a cargo caused the days of the week, months, numbers, animals, gods and goddesses, heroes, demi-gods, Biblical characters, Shakespearean names and the shorter English and French Christian names of the day to be used over and over again. In every district were dozens of sable workers answering to such names as Tuesday, Friday, July, November, Primus (the second in the day), Sixteen (rare even then), Doe, Hart, Rabbit, Fox (in use now), Jupiter, Pallas, Hector, Venus, Diana (now "Di"), Perseus, Hercules, Aaron, Moses, Pharoh, Romulus, Remus, Hamlets, Othello, Cæsar (a favorite), Jonas, Rose, Priscilla, John, Jack, Lize, Beth and others. Variations were had by prefixing "Young" or "Old" to the name given. The American negroes acquired their surnames rather commonly immediately after the emancipation.

WISE HINDOO STAR GAZER.

Astrologers Who Prophesied the Illness and Recovery of King Edward, of England.

Some remarkable horoscopes of the health of Edward VII., prepared by famous Hindoo astrologers, were published November 4 last in the Hindoo, a native newspaper. These horoscopes were recently reprinted in the same paper after the king's relief with immense relief by the king's loyal subjects in India. These horoscopes are certainly most remarkable, when we remember they were published eight months ago, though we may smile at the cipher suspected in the second.

A Tanjore astrologer predicted: "Our beloved emperor will be soon enthroned (Pattabhi-shekam) and will brilliantly reign over his kingdom for a period of not less than 15 years to come. Some sickness would trouble him, but his majesty's life is secure for many years to come."

A Dindigul astrologer stated: "The position of the planets shows that between the months of March and July the emperor will suffer of boils like car- buncles throughout the body and the conjunction also indicates danger. As a panacea for this evil the emperor is recommended to make gifts of black bulls, as it would give considerable relief and sustenance to him."

TITLE WAS SOON PROVEN.

Uncle Sam Buys Back Land from Man to Whom It Was Sold by Government in 1840.

"You may go back home and prepare the papers for the transfer of your land to the government, making sure that the deed set forth every transfer of the property, and, when this is completed you can obtain the $7,500 which as been accepted as the government price for your site for a postoffice."

"Well, if that's all you want, I can fix that up right quick. Just say that the property is transferred to the United States from John McCusick to whom the land was deeded by the United States in the year 1840."

This is the conversation which took place in the treasury department of the United States Saturday between Supervising Architect Taylor and John McCusick, of Stillwater, Minn., at the consummation of the bargain in which the government secures the title to a postoffice site in Stillwater.

McCusick bought the land from the government at $1.25 per acre in 1840. He has held it ever since, and now he is selling 1358x150 feet of it back to the government for the sum of $7,500.

FORGOT HE HELD A POLICY.

A Burned-Out Boston Clothing Merchant Who Overlooked a Risk of $4,000.

A Boston clothing house was destroyed by fire recently, and in connection with the adjustment of the losses the representative of one of the insurance companies interested discovered that the insured had a policy for $4,000 which had been overlooked. Upon making representations to the firm the proprietor denied that he had any such policy, and it was only on the production of the books by the insurance company when the premium had been paid, that he was convinced that he was entitled to the sum involved. Even then he declared that the insurance concern had made a mistake, but if it insisted that he was entitled to the money he would take the money. The occurrence was an exceptional that special interest has been taken in the case, with the result that the firm's credit will probably be materially strengthened among insurance men.

Last Indian City Located.

The site of the last Indian city Mascoutens, which was reported as having 200,000 inhabitants in 1675, has been determined by the labors of Thomas Clithero, of Portage, Wis., now extended over many years. It was the largest city in all Indian history, so far as United States territory is concerned, and the descriptions of the Jesuits in the course of the seventeenth century, closing with Marquette and Joliet in 1673, are said to have been verified.

A CORNISH DUSTFALL.

Eruption of Krakatoa in 1901 Scattered Dust All Over Central Europe.

In the course of a paper on "The Cornish Dustfall of January, 1903," read before the Royal Meteorological society at 70 Victoria street recently, Mr. H. R. Mill said that since the Krakatoa eruption in 1883, when the volcanic dust thrown into the air would, itself apparently, for many months all over the world, in a long series of brilliant sunsets, the most remarkable instance of far-traveled dust was that which occurred in March, 1901, reports the London Telegraph, in Italy the rain fell so thickly charged with red sand, that the peasants took it for blood and became panic-stricken. For three days the dust cloud traveled northward over central Europe, substantial traces falling as far north as the Danish islands, and instances in which it reached parts of England and Scotland had been recorded. A large quantity of similar dust fell about January 21 last in Cornwall over an area of 2,000 square miles, and the conclusion seemed to be that about his time the atmosphere over the extreme west of Europe consisted of air which had come from the African deserts, carrying with it a quantity of fine dust, of which a mere vestige—some 100,000 tons or so—had been caught in its fall and carried to the shores of the channel. There seemed to be little doubt that the farmers of the west of England had this spring plowed many tons of the sand of the Sahara into their furrows.

A NEW VEGETABLE SWEET.

South American Herb That May Be Used in the Place of Sugar in Tea and Coffee.

A plant has been found in the northern part of Paraguay whose leaves contain a sweet substance. Small pieces will have the same effect as a teaspoonful of sugar if dropped into a cup of tea or coffee. The stuff is not the same as sugar, though, because it is much stronger and cannot be fermented. The director of the Agronomical institute at Asuncion believes that its chemical nature is different from anything else now known. The herb is a rather common one, and the Germans in that part of the world are about to make some elaborate experiments in cultivating it for the market. It is said to contain no deleterious substance, but possibly the matter has not been investigated sufficiently. Fifteen or 20 years ago Prof. Remsen, now president of Johns Hopkins university, was the first to make the discovery that saccharin, which has been recommended for victims of certain diseases who are forbidden to take sugar, is a coal tar product. The mysterious reason, there has been a disposition in Germany to prohibit by law the introduction of saccharin into beer. Possibly the explanation of this procedure is political, not scientific. The herb which the new plant, botanically known as Eupatorium rebaudianum, will eventually prove a disappointment time alone can tell.

LITTLE SERGEANT MAJORS.

Lively Fishes at the New York City Aquarium That Flock Together Like Chicks.

Among the tropical fishes lately received at the aquarium from Bermuda were 20 or more little sergeant majors, two or three inches in length, which will flock together precisely like little chicks, and with the same confident fearlessness, says the New York Sun.

Let them be scattered through the water in all parts of their tank and let somebody tap gently low down on the outside of the glass and the whole bunch will come a-scurrying, as fast as their fins can drive them, all crowding in together as near those finger tips as they can get.

What draws them on, whether curiosity or hunger, or what, they all swarm at the call. And as little chicks will run, a moment later all together to another part of the field at the old hen's bidding, so will these little sergeant majors rush together again a moment later, at a second gentle tapping on the glass.

ONLY A GIRL'S PURSE.

The Dainty Receptacle Contained Variety of Things Almost Equal to Boy's Pocket.

Poems and stories used to be written about the infinite variety of articles to be found in a boy's pocket. Girls do not have pockets—so much the worse for them, as all things they put away in their pocketbooks would put a boy to the blush, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. A girl emptied her purse the other day. "I have to clean it out," she explained, "every once in a while, just as I do my bureau drawers." These are some of the things that were in it: Two one-dollar bills, a 50-cent piece, two quarters, a five-cent piece (lend) and ten pennies, a "hooky" Italian coin, a Japanese "pocket piece," two receipts, three bills, a parlor car check, four street railway transfers, five mutilated stamps, a pencil stub, matinee coupon, three keys, newspaper clippings and a cleaner's check for gloves. That was the result of a normal case. Almost any girl can match it.

THE DRAKE OIL WELL.

He Was the Forerunner of the Phenomenal Gushers in the Pennsylvania Fields.

One of the strongest, most important battles in the history of commerce was fought by Col. Edwin L. Drake, who, about 44 years ago, went to Titusville, Pa., a poor man, but a man with a scheme in mind which, although received with distrust by strangers, was perfectly lucid to him, and finally resulted in contributing to the wealth, power and happiness of the entire world.

The existence of petroleum, says the Four-Track News, had been known by all peoples since the time of Moses, but the task of drilling into the rocks, and compelling them to give up their treasures was left for the last half of the nineteenth century, and for the American. That pioneer well, on Watson's flats, with a production of 20 barrels a day for a year, was but the forerunner of the phenomenal "gushers" that were to come, and was the beginning of a wonderful industry and one unparalleled in the history of the past. Hitherto worthless lands brought fortunes to their owners; towns sprung up in a night; exchanges were instituted and men were in a frenzy to obtain their portion of the wealth which flowed from the deep confines of Mother Earth. Men such as Drake, those whose deeds benefit the human race, are few, and the ones whose likenesses "should be cast in deathless bronze," and whose names should be honored for all time to come.

THE OLD DRAKE WELL.

ANIMALS CAN TALK.

Du Chaillu, the French Traveler and Explorer, Has Heard Them Laugh and Chat.

Paul B. du Chaillu, the explorer, says there is no doubt that animals talk in certain ways among themselves. In Africa he has heard gorillas laugh and guffaw when they came to rob a man's field and found that elephants had already destroyed everything, as if they appreciated the joke themselves. Again, he heard a gorilla, which had found some choice berries, calling another that was a long way off. He saw monkeys apparently deliberate for a long time before making some move. These animals, by the way, rarely drink water, but eat juicy berries and fruits instead. Du Chaillu was impressed by the fact that even in a tropical forest animals have to work hard for a living. Some of them travel miles every day to get food, and have all kinds of trouble in finding a safe place to spend the night. Even elephants are very careful about their sleeping places. They hate snakes, and before lying down they carefully trample over a large area to kill or drive out reptiles and rodents. And big as they are they go in herds for greater safety.

Translator Was Staggered.

A Frenchman was engaged in translating an American novel and came to a description of a man "hitching his horse to a locust." This staggered the translator as he had never heard of the locust tree; but he was equal to the emergency and in good faith rendered that "sauterelles" or grasshoppers grew to an immense size in the United States.

The Holy Ghost Plant.

The Holy Ghost plant, a product of Mexico, Central and South America, is so called because of the shape of the flower, which has the appearance of a dove with extended wings.

The Latest in Soothsaying.

As a living insurance John Fitson, a farmer of Eminence, Ky., holds the record. During a prolonged fit of sickness his wife placed 48 eggs in bed with him, and in due time 44 chickens emerged.

PEACH STONES FOR FUEL.

They Have Been Utilized by a Baltimore Family as a Substitute for Coal.

The strike and the increased cost of coal incident thereto has directed much attention to other materials for fuel, and a Baltimore man says a good substitute for the black diamond is dried peach stones. The only objection to their use is their scarcity, which depends entirely on the size of the peach crop. Frank Hall, the Baltimorean referred to, says his family had used peach stones as fuel for years until about three or four years ago, since which time the supply has appeared to have decreased.

"We used to get the dried peach stones from Mr. Noel, who got them from the different packing-houses and dried them on his place," said Mr. Hall. "I think we paid $2.50 a load for them, the load containing about six bushels. The fuel was used in the kitchen and gave good results. The stones will make a quick, hot fire, and one that will last. One and a half or two buckets of the peach stones will last as long as a bucket of coal. You have to be careful not to fill the stove too full or there will likely be an explosion similar to a gasoline explosion. The proper way to keep the fire going is to put in a shovelful at a time.

"Peach stones thrown into a dam; cellar," said Mr. Hall, "are said to have a peculiar effect on a person. After the stones are in the cellar for some time gases arise, and the fumes will go to one's head and give the same effect as if the distilled product of the peach had been imbibed."

LIVES BY SELLING CANDY.

Business of a Bright Young Syracuse Girl—Customers Help Themselves.

How to make money by selling bonbons and trusting to the honesty of purchasers is a problem that a bright young girl of Syracuse has solved. Her place of business is a little booth where the customer enters and helps himself to what he wants, leaving the price in the till, where he makes his own change. In six months she has sold 16,000 boxes of candy and her losses have been less than five pounds of candy and less than five dollars in cash. She finds that people are generally honest.

Rev. F. H. Towns, Maplewood's newsdealer, has been testing the honesty of Maplewood people in somewhat the same way for several years and has never lost a copper. He leaves the papers on the window sill in his little shop near the Maplewood depot, with instructions for anyone to take a paper and leave the money in the open window to the floor. He has sold hundreds of newspapers in this way and has always found his cash equal to the number of papers taken.

This recalls the sociologist who, to test the question of popular honesty, asked in succession a large number of persons if they had lost half a dollar which he pretended to have picked up on a street in New York. Every one declared that the dishonesty is not so rare a virtue as some suppose.

COLOR-MAKING BACTERIA.

Large Numbers of the Micro-Organisms That Produce Various-Hued Matters.

The micro-organisms are interesting out of all proportion to their size, and not the least interesting phase of their existence is that described in an article in La Nature by Henri Coupin. M. Coupin treats especially of the coloring matters produced by bacteria, some of which are noteworthy for their brilliancy and others for their chemical or physiological peculiarities. Says M. Coupin:

"A large number of bacteria produce coloring matter, sometimes very vivid.

* * * * *

There are two cases. In one, the most numerous, the pigment remains inside the elements that manufacture it; thus the bacteria themselves are colored. In the other the pigment spreads, as it is produced, into the surrounding medium, and this has the characteristic color, while the bacteria themselves are pale or even colorless. Thus the bacillus fluorescens and others are nearly white, while they color the culture medium green."

Every species, we are told, has its particular color: one is citron yellow, another golden, many are brilliant red; one at least is pink, the bacillus of blue milk is sky blue; others are respectively greenish blue, violet and brown. The characteristic diseases of many diseases owe their color to the microbes that produce them.

A Brave Woman.

Millie Hennius, the Indian woman of Vancouver, who recently received the medal of the Royal Humane Society, was going with her husband, her father and children across the narrow inlet, in a boat to the north arm of Burrard Inlet. The boat was overturned in a storm. The husband, weighted by a cartridge belt and heavy clothing, sank at once, followed by the woman. Mrs. Hennius took her 4-year-old child in her teeth, and ordering each of the others to cling to one of her shoulders, swam, keeping the heads of all three above the icy water for over a mile rescue came.

Mustaches in Alaska.

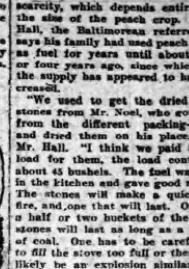
Mustaches are not worn by men exposed to the severity of an Alaskan winter. They wear full beards to protect the throat and face, but keep the upper lip clean shaven. The moisture from the breath congeals so quickly that a mustache becomes imbedded in a solid cake of ice, and the face is frozen in a short time.

SAGE GIVES WARNING.

Rector of Wall Street Sees Peril in Formation of Great Industrial Combines.

Russell Sage holds some positive views on the trust question, which are completely at variance with those held by Pierpont Morgan, America's leading exponent of the trust problem.

Mr. Sage took occasion the other day to utter some emphatic statements concerning the progress of the combination idea. These views, spoken by the aged financier at the time Mr. Morgan began his first full business day after his European trip, were taken by some financiers as a note of warning.



RUSSELL SAGE.
(Rector of Wall Street, Who Is Afraid of Big Trusts.)

that the trust problem is being overdone.

"First, let me say that I am not antagonistic to Mr. Morgan," Mr. Sage explained. "He and I have been very friendly from a business standpoint for many years, but we differ on the trust question. I have been misquoted and my views exaggerated when I was quoted as saying that combinations of all kinds pose a menace to the government. That is not right. I believe those which have been formed with the right idea and on a sound basis will live, but the others will fail or die of their own poor constitution.

"What I am afraid of is the constant formation of inflated securities which are disposed of to the American people with a good brand on them.

"Securities have been made in great quantities and sold at high prices on the idea that economies to be effected will give them the arbitrary value which has been placed upon them. This theory will be exploded later on, for there will always be competition. When the crash comes there will be a national disaster. Everyone will be more or less affected, and the industrial stagnation will be far greater than if half a dozen small concerns became bankrupt. When a great bulk company goes under thousands will have to bear the loss.

"Another thing I fear is the centralization of big industries in the hands of five or six men. The control of the industries of our country should be more widely distributed, but if the trust idea continues to progress at the same speed that it has done within the last year all the leading industries of the nation will be left in the control, as I said before, of half a dozen men."

BABOON AS SIGNALMAN.

Railway Switch Signals Accurately Given by a "Missing Link" in South Africa.

strange railway employe has been seen, is about 23 miles from Port Elizabeth, and Wylde, the official signalman, trained the baboon to such perfection that he was content to sit in his cabin stuffing birds, etc., while the animal, which was chained up outside, pulled all the levers and points, the signalman having certain signs to denote which lever he was to pull. As soon as the last train at night had gone the signalman, who has lost both his legs, fixed a trolley on the rails and sat upon it, while the baboon pulled it along. "I noticed," writes Mr. Fuller (the contributor of the photograph), "that the baboon never started the trolley pulling with its collar, but used to grip its chain and run on three legs until the trolley got into a good swing. It was very fond of a cigarette and to-bacco. If ever it broke away it never associated with the other baboons as it had been brought from some distance and baboons seem very clannish."

DESERVES SUPPORT.

It is to be hoped that Councilman Lee will be successful in his attempt to secure the co-operation of the Common Council in a plan to establish some means of crossing the Jersey Central's tracks between Grant and Clinton avenues. Under the existing arrangement, hundreds of men, women and children daily cross the tracks at the imminent risk of being dashed into eternity without warning. Several people have been struck and it is surprising that with so many trains passing that the accidents are not more frequent. The railroad company is blameless as there is no legal path or right of way at that spot and those who do cross the railroad are really nothing more than trespassers on the company's property.

It is useless to expect that pedestrians will go way round by the way of Clinton or Grant avenues. Employes of the Pond Tool Works, living on the north side of the track, are going to take the nearest route to their work. So are the children bound for school. Nothing occasional will be one of their number will not deter them. The only feasible way, therefore, is to open a right of way at some point of convenience. As the railroad is in a slight cut at that point an overhead bridge would be possible and its erection would be the means of keeping hundreds off the tracks. That might mean the saving of several lives.

Councilman Lee's plan has some excellent features about it and deserves careful attention from the City Fathers. Either this plan or some other should be followed to relieve the present method of its dangerous features. Precious human lives cannot be placed in jeopardy so constantly. It is up to the Common Council to take some means of remedying it without fail.

A GOOD WORK.

Among the many things which the Y. M. C. A. has done for young men of this city, there is probably nothing which really carried more genuine happiness to twenty stalwart young hearts than the Thanksgiving dinner which was given to young men who were comparative strangers here and were unable to return to their homes to spend the holidays. A Thanksgiving Day in a strange city is an experience by no means pleasant to the young man who is accustomed to participate in the usual family gathering on that day. This rather novel affair, given by the Y. M. C. A., was therefore decidedly timely and along the ideal lines laid down for an association aiming to better the conditions of the young men.

This dinner was made possible by the generosity of certain friends of the association. If they could have all been present and seen how effectively the dinner did what it was intended to do, take the place of the family feast and brighten the day for the young men far away from home, they would have declared the money well spent. It was something which it is to be hoped will continue in future years. To Boys' Secretary Kenneth Bohlke is due the credit for suggesting it.

Although Plainfield is freer of temptations to young men than many cities, the Y. M. C. A. has its place here and the success with which it has been met shows that there is need of it. It has done much to give the young men of the city many advantages. Particularly does it appeal to the young man whose home is elsewhere and who is forced to look outside of his boarding place for amusement and instruction. That dinner Thursday evening was a new attempt to reach this element. Its success should lead the old supporters of the association to stand by it and should encourage others to contribute toward its support. It is only by voluntary contributions that the Y. M. C. A. is enabled to continue its work and every additional contribution will permit it to enlarge its field of operations.

A NEW ASSISTANT.

Rev. Father Smith, of Elizabeth, Will Take Father Farley's Place in the Local Parish.

Rev. Father Matthew Farley, who was assistant priest at St. Mary's R. C. church in this city and who has been identified in church work in that parish for several years, was transferred a week ago to St. Joseph's church in Jersey City, which is a very much larger parish than the one in this city.

His successor is Rev. Father Smith, formerly of Jersey City but now of Elizabeth, who will shortly take up his new duties in this city. The transfer was ordered by Bishop O'Connor, of Newark diocese.

during the enactment corporations.

In curbing and regulating the combinations of capital which are or may become injurious to the public we must be careful not to stop the great enterprises which have legitimately advanced the rest of prosperity, not to abandon the plan which our country has won in the leadership of the international industrial world, not to strike down wealth with the result of closing factories and mines, of turning the wage-earner idle in the streets and leaving the farmer without a market for what he grows. Moreover, in the inevitable unseen delay in achieving the possible exercise of the other hand, the stubborn defense alike of what is good and of what is bad in existing systems, the resolute effort to obstruct any attempt at betterment, it brings ridicule to the whole subject and makes impossible the sane advance which wise evolution is the sure safeguard against revolution.

No direct legislation by the Congress will come before the congress than this of the regulation of interstate commerce. The Congress cannot afford to sit supine on the plea that the constitution has given to the government we are helpless in the presence of the new conditions which have arisen and which have grown out of, but whatever evil has arisen in connection with them. The power of the congress to regulate interstate commerce is an absolute and unlimited power, to be exercised in such amount as experience has shown to be necessary and proper for executing this power, and I am firmly convinced that this power is adequate by any legislation now on the statute books. It should be exercised so that evils restrictive of commercial freedom and entailing waste in the use of commerce fall within the regulative power of the government. But it is not to be supposed any law would be a necessary and proper exercise of congressional authority to the end that such evils should be eradicated.

I believe that monopolies, unjust discriminations which prevent or cripple competition, fraudulent stock watering and other evils in trust organizations and practices which injuriously affect interstate trade should be prevented under the power of the congress to "regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states" through regulations which shall operate directly upon such commerce, the instrumentalities thereof and those engaged therein.

I earnestly recommend this subject to the consideration of the congress with a view to the passage of a law reasonable in its provisions and effective in its operations, upon which the question can be finally adjudicated that now raise doubts as to the power of congress to control amendment. If it prove impossible to accomplish the purposes set forth by such legislation, then I shall unhesitatingly shrink from amending the constitution so as to confer beyond peradventure the power sought.

Our present law has not heretofore made any appropriation for the better enforcement of the anti-trust law. It now stands. Very much has been done by the department of justice in securing the enforcement of that law, but much more could be done if congress would make a special appropriation for the purpose to be expended under the direction of the attorney general.

One proposition advocated has been the method of the tariff as a means of reaching the evils of the trusts which fell within the scope of the law prescribed. Not merely would this be wholly ineffective, but the diversion of our efforts in this line from the real and essential remedy in all is evident at once to the least observant. The tariff is one of the great corporations, many of those which would be reached by proper trust legislation scheme of regulation, would not be affected by the tariff at all. Others, included in the tariff, save as such change interfered with the general prosperity of the country. The only relation of the tariff to the trusts as a whole is that the tariff makes manufacturing profitable, and the tariff remedy proposed would be in large degree to make manufactures unprofitable. To remove the tariff as a remedy for trusts would result in ruin to the whole industry of making it impossible to maintain the wages of labor. Moreover, we should not by any such action strike at the trusts as a whole work well and if business has prospered under the tariff, prosperity. It is better to endure for a time slight inconveniences and even slight abuses than to upset business by too quick and radical changes. The only effective remedy to be wished that we could treat the trusts as one great business society of our business needs. It is earnestly to be hoped that partisanship may be entirely excluded from consideration of the subject, but at least it can be made entirely clear that the welfare of the whole country—that is, to the interests of our people as a whole—demands that these business interests will best be served if given the full benefit of the steady system of the tariff we combine a system which shall from time to time make the necessary readjustments of the tariff changes at short intervals. Moreover, if the tariff laws as a whole work well and if business has prospered under the present system, then the wages of labor should not be disturbed unless to meet some obvious change which will not affect injuriously the wage-worker, like the well being of the farmer, of the soil, should be treated as an essential in shaping our whole economic policy. There should never be any change which will jeopardize the standard of wages, of the American wage-worker by any way in which the readjustment sought can be brought about by reciprocal treaties. It is greatly to be desired that such treaties on this subject may be made to widen our markets and to give a greater field for the profitable labor of producers on the one hand, and on the other hand to secure in practical way the lowering of duties when they are no longer necessary for protection among our own people or when the public revenue from any be disregarded for the sake of the revenue. But the executive believes it is a grave impossible to ratify the pending treaties, and he does not feel that he would warrant for the endeavor to execute otherwise than by securing the legislation that they can be ratified, then the same should be done by directly should be met by direct legislation.

Whether these conditions are such that a needed change cannot be made advantage be made by the application of the reciprocity idea, then it can be made with right by a lowering of duties on a given product. Any such change should be made only after the fullest investigation by practical experts, who should approach the subject from a business standpoint, having in view both the particular interests affected and the commercial well being of the people as a whole. The machinery for providing such careful investigation can easily be supplied. The executive department has already at its service ample data for collecting facts and

NEW CHURCH IS DEDICATED

Dedication Exercises Held at Swedish Evangelical Pilgrim Church Sunday.

AT NEW AND SIXTH STS.

English Services Held in Afternoon —Evening Services in Swedish— Dedication Sermon by Rev. C. L. Goodrich—Pastor Reported on Financial Condition.

"In the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost" the recently erected Swedish Evangelical Pilgrim church, at the corner of East Sixth and New streets, was Sunday afternoon dedicated by the pastor, Rev. O. G. Norseen, in the presence of a large audience, and the church was formally given the name of a house of worship. There were two services, one in English in the afternoon and one in the evening when the service was conducted in Swedish.

The church is very cozily arranged and with the decorations of palms and carnations and American and Swedish flags above the desk it presented a very attractive appearance. A choir from the Pilgrim choir of Brooklyn was present at both services.

At 3:30, the services opened with a few words of welcome by the pastor after which Rev. John MacMurray, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, read the passage of scripture from the 84th and 122th Psalms, which was followed by a prayer which was offered by Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church. The choir rendered a hymn in the Swedish tongue which preceded a short sermon by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, where the members of the newly-erected church have been holding services while their new edifice was in the course of construction.

The text of his address was taken from the 84th Psalm, which he divided into three parts, the blessings which comes to those who have their homes in the house of God, meaning those who are interested in the church and shape their lives according to the teachings of the church are blessed; that those who are still outside the church, but who are about to come into the church as members, receive the blessings and joys of the church; and that God Himself showers His blessings upon those who are working for the uplifting of the unsaved. In closing his sermon the speaker said that he hoped that the new congregation would be blessed in their work and in their efforts to save.

A report of the financial standing of the church was read by the pastor, in which he gave a short history of the church which began holding meetings in the fall of 1898 under the auspices of ministers from neighboring towns. These services were held in the Congregational church and at different places in this town, some of the time in the W. C. T. U. rooms and at other times in the Y. M. C. A. parlors. In August of the next year the little handful of people wanted a pastor and a call was extended to Rev. R. O. Tegler, who presided over the struggling congregation for two years. Rev. A. Munson was the successor of Rev. Tegler and later a call was extended to the present pastor, but Mr. Blosser, a seminary student, filled the position for some time until the present pastor was able to take the position. Last October Rev. O. G. Norseen conducted his first sermon when there were thirty members which soon increased to forty-two. Five of these were dismissed by letter.

The church owned property at the corner of West Fifth street and Plain field avenue but secured the present site through donations. The property is valued at $900. There was $275 in the treasury but by subscriptions this has been raised to $1,600. Five hundred dollars has been received in donations from American people in this city making the total amount at hand $1,700. The cost of the church was $5,600, furnished, and part of this amount, $1,000 has been advanced for ten years, without interest by the Church Building Society, of New York. There is still an indebtedness on the church of $500.

After the reading of the report the dedicatory prayer was offered by the pastor followed by the closing prayer by Rev. Edwin L. Earp, of the Grace M. E. church. In the evening the same programme was carried out in the Swedish tongue when Rev. Peterson, of East Orange, and Rev. Engelund, of Perth Amboy, were present.

Refreshments were served after the services in the afternoon by the women of the church the committee being Mrs. B. Brandt, Mrs. Augusta Brandt and Mrs. C. W. Johnson.

The officers of the church are: Chairman, Rev. O. G. Norseen; vice chairman, B. Jorgensen; secretary, Henry Brandt; treasurer, C. W. Johnson, the last three comprising the trustees of the church.

During the service Mrs. F. Feden and A. Okerland, of Brooklyn, rendered several selections.

At present the church has no organ of its own but is using a temporary one. The congregation expects to hold a concert in the near future, the proceeds of which will be used in the purchase of a new instrument.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Consumers' League of New York Appeals to Christmas Shoppers.

To Christmas shoppers:

The season of Christmas shopping is approaching. "Cruelties in the form of overwork among children and women travesty the festival of rejoicing over the coming of the Holy Child."

It some cases horses are treated better than the employes. Last year a driver was compelled to work so many hours delivering good that it was 3 o'clock in the morning before he reached home; the horse had been changed once en route. A boy of sixteen after delivering packages until late at night, was so exhausted that he lay down in the wagon, pulled his own blanket over him and slept in the stable. He was found frozen to death New Year's morning.

The Consumers' League appeals to all to do their shopping soon and early in the day and not to insist that goods be delivered on the same day purchased. An amelioration of the hardships of the holiday season may thus be secured.

Mrs. D. H. Rowland,
Plainfield representative, Consumers' League of New Jersey.

DINED PROGRESSIVELY.

The Guests Had Different Partners for Every Course.

A dinner was given Saturday in honor of the fifteenth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Van-Zandt, of Madison avenue, at which sixteen were present. The dinner was a progressive affair, and proved to be decidedly novel. At each course the host and hostess changed places so that at each course each guest would have another partner.

SAW THEM FIRST.

A bold attempt to rob the house of William C. Kelley, at Oak Tree, was made Saturday evening but the robbers were discovered as they were making their exit. Mr. Kelley pointed a big 44 shooter at the men and ordered them to stop and leave behind their booty.

When the Kelley family retired for the night they forgot to turn on the burglar alarm. Sometime about 12 o'clock Mr. Kelley heard noises down stairs and getting a big shot gun and a pistol he waited until they had filled a bag of articles and then as they were about to pass out of the front gate he ordered them to stop and told them to leave behind their booty if they valued their lives. There were two burglars and Mr. Kelley thinks he knows who they are. They dropped the booty and ran down the street.

PYTHIAN KNIGHTS AT A DISTRICT MEETING

Grand Lodge Officers Present at Meeting Held in Perseverance Castle Hall.

REPORTS WERE HEARD

SHOWED PERSEVERANCE NEXT TO LARGEST LODGE IN THE STATE.

After the Business Session Was Over, Speeches and Musical Selections Were Given—Big Delegations Present.

Grand Lodge officers and members of the order of Knights of Pythias from many parts of the State were in this city, last Friday, attending the meeting of district No. 14, which embraces Unity and Perseverance Lodges. It was called by District Deputy Jeremiah Van Winkle and was held in Perseverance Castle Hall. In addition to the out of town visitors, large delegations were present from the lodges of the district.

The Grand Lodge members who were present were Grand Chancellor P. Hall Parker, of Long Branch; Grand Vice Chancellor Colonel Shanley, of Jersey City; Grand Prelate George Laws, of Jersey City; Supreme Representative Walter Hayhurst, of Trenton; State Organizer Champion, of Atlantic Highlands. In the early part of the evening, these officers conferred the past chancellor rank upon seven applicants from the two lodges.

During the business session reports of the existing condition of the lodges in the district were read by Keepers of Records and Seals Charles McGinley, of Perseverance, and Frank Patterson, of Unity. The former organization showed a gain in the second largest in point of membership in the State, having a total of 297. It has added thirty-nine within the past year. It is also exceptionally prosperous otherwise. Unity Lodge has been retarded in its growth by a combination of circumstances, chief of which was the total destruction of its paraphernalia in the Babcock building fire last March. While no increase in membership was reported its finances are exceedingly healthy and conditions point to speedy growth in every way. The only other item of business was the mentioning of Charles McGinley, of Perseverance, for appointment as the next district deputy.

In the course of proceedings, speeches were made by all the Grand Lodge officers, Chancellor Commander William N. Runyon, Vice Chancellor Charles M. Ulrich, Past Chancellors Stephen Higham and Charles McGinley, of Perseverance, District Deputy VanWinkle and Past Chancellor Horace J. Martin, of Unity. Vocal selections were given by William N. Runyon, Elmer D. Cutting and Thomas Muir and Harvey L. Patterson contributed piano solos.

The Grand Lodge officers and several invited guests were entertained at dinner, last evening, by District Deputy VanWinkle at his home on East Seventh street.

Funeral of F. A. VanNest.

Funeral services of Firman A. VanNest, who passed away at his home on Second street, Friday morning, were held Sunday afternoon from the Baptist church at South Plainfield, when Rev. Mr. Cobberley officiated. The interment took place in the cemetery at Samptown. The pall bearers were David Bush, Frank Runyon, George VanNest, Charles Conover, Henry Overbaugh and James McNee.

American their ideals and he favored the proper development of labor unions along this line. He was heartily in accord with the suggested title of the new organization and he spoke words of sympathy and help to the workingmen present, bidding them God speed in their efforts for right principles.

It was suggested and finally agreed to that the presidents of all the local unions be appointed a committee to formulate plans for such an organization as proposed and another meeting will be held two weeks from last evening, Tuesday evening, December 16, when an organization will be perfected. PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE READ

[illegible] ing at the seamless nearest sanitarium for treatment. This treatment aims to [illegible] labor and for capital now to hold in check the unscrupulous man, whether employer or employe, without weakening individual initiative, without hampering and cramping the essential development of the country; is a problem fraught with great difficulty, and one which it is of the highest importance to solve rightly. It can be solved only by the exercise of sanity and farsighted common sense as we deal with each specific case. This is an era of federation and combination. Exactly as business men find they can often work through corporations, and as it is a constant tendency of modern business to grow larger, so it often proves necessary for workingmen to work in federations, and the question of the relative importance of employer and employe, from the standpoint of the welfare of each individual concerned, is the fundamental question of guidance in the [illegible] of the future. In dealing with it, as with every other matter affecting human welfare, we must constantly remember that the only sure foundation for permanent success is to be found in morality, that is, in the highest individual character. Each man must be guaranteed the largest liberty consistent with the rights of others, and must be judged on his worth as a man. Any other basis of judgment than this, any basis which judges a man because of his membership in any organization, capitalistic or labor, any basis which judges him because of his creed, his birthplace, or his occupation, is a base and unworthy basis. So, finally, is any basis which judges a man because of his connection or lack of connection with any religious organization. Every man must be treated on his worth as a man, without regard to the side issues of his connection or lack of connection with any religious or anti-religious body. Persecution for religious opinions is abhorrent to us, and we must see that it finds no place in our industrial life. Each man must be treated on his merits as an individual, without regard to any organization, religious, political, or industrial, to which he belongs, or to which he does not belong. Finally, and most important of all, each man must be judged according to the way in which he does his duty by the standard of common honesty and common sense, and according to the way in which he treats his fellows, and especially his brother workingmen. Let me add that any kind of organization, whether of employer or employe, which tends to limit the liberty of the individual workman, which makes him the mere servant of the organization, tends to his degradation and ultimately to the destruction of his character as a free man. In the struggle for liberty which has gone on for so long among English-speaking peoples, the effort has constantly been to free the individual workman, whether from the oppression of the government, or from the oppression of his fellows; and any kind of labor organization which forgets this, and which becomes a means of limiting the liberty of the workman, is pro tanto hostile to the principles which lie at the very foundation of our political life.

During the fall of 1903 a communication was addressed by the secretary of war to the governor of Alaska, inquiring whether permission would be granted by the president for a corporation to lay a cable from a point on the California coast via this or that island to Alaska. A number of corporations or firms even with such corporations behind them, or any individual, could not [illegible] a cable was undertaken. [illegible] shortly to convene and Pacific [illegible] Congress for several years [illegible] me wise to defer action upon [illegible] until the next session of Congress, that it might have opportunity to act. The cable [illegible] adjourned without taking any action in the matter in exactly the same condition in which it was when the communication was received.

Meanwhile it appears that the Commercial Pacific Cable company had promptly proceeded with preparations for laying the cable, and in June of the present year the president for access to and use of soundings taken by the United States steamer Nero for the purpose of discovering a practicable route for the cable. Thereupon the company urging that with access to these soundings it could complete its cable in a year, instead of two years required to take soundings upon its own account. Manifest consideration of the matter appeared important and desirable to attempt to secure the right of way for the company to examine and use the soundings if it should be granted.

In consequence of this solicitation of the cable company certain conditions were prepared which, if agreed to, the company was willing to allow access to these soundings. These conditions had to do with the laying of the cable, subject to any alterations or additions thereto imposed by the congress. This was considered necessary chiefly as it was clear that a cable connecting Alaska with China, a foreign sovereign country, was a part of the company's plan. The conditions were in accordance with a line of precedents, including the Hawaiian cable, in which, in the case of the first French cable, explained to the congress in the message of president December, 1855, and the instance occurring in 1869 of the second French cable from Brest to St. Pierre, Miquelon, and Cape Cod.

These conditions prescribed, among other things, a maximum rate for commercial business; that the company should construct a line from the Philippine Islands to China, there being at present but one cable from the Philippines to Manila to Hongkong.

The representatives of the cable company kept these conditions long under consideration, receiving in the meantime to prepare for laying the cable. They declined, however, at length acceded to them, and the cable was laid from the California coast and the Chinese empire by way of Honolulu in the Philippine islands in the thus provided for and is expected within a few months to be completed and ready.

Among the conditions is one reserving the power of the congress to modify or repeal any or all of them. The right to alter conditions is herewith transmitted.

Finally, it is my duty and necessary to say that the prosperity of the island and the welfare of the people have been carefully observed and that the progress which they have been such as to make it serve as an example of all that is best in insular administration.

On July 4 last, on the one hundred and twenty-seventh anniversary of the declaration of our independence, peace and amnesty were proclaimed in the Philippine islands. Some trouble has since from time to time been experienced by the Mohammedan Moros, but with the late insurrectionary Philippines we have no subject for Civil government has now been introduced. Not only does each Filipino citizen enjoy the largest liberty and the pursuit of happiness as he has never before, but he is given constantly increasing part in the islands, but the people, taken as a whole, are more fully enjoying self-government greater than that granted to any other orientals by any foreign power and greater than that granted by any other orientals under their own governments in the past. Self-government can not be gone too far in granting these rights of liberty and self-government, but it can certainly come to the limit that in the islands which are peaceful and prosperous it would entail calamity on the people of the islands. No policy ever enforced into the Philippines has met with universal political favor. This makes it necessary that in regard to it there should be left room for the benefits of theoming part of our economic and social life. From a political point, a shortsighted and mischievous policy for us to adopt would be to leave the islands, when we have not had any right to expect. Too much parks cannot be given to the people of the islands. What it has done in the Philippines both in warfare and from an administrative standpoint has created a reputation for civil government, and similar credit belongs to the army for the way in which they have planted the seeds of future prosperity. The insurrection against civil government, and similar credit belongs to the army for the way in which they have planted the seeds of future prosperity. The insurrection against Spanish sovereignty was practically ended by the work. I urge the adoption of reciprocity with Cuba not only because it is for the interest of our people to control the Cuban market and by every means to secure for ourselves the tropical harbors and waters south of us, but also because it is our duty to our neighbor and ally, and should make all our sister nations of the western hemisphere feel that in addition they will permit it we desire to show ourselves disinterestedly and effectively their friend.

A convention with Great Britain has been practically concluded which will be laid before the senate for ratification, providing for the reciprocal protection of trade between the United States and Newfoundland, substantially like that which existed before the abrogation of the treaty of 1885. The convention formerly negotiated by the secretary of state, Mr. Blaine, for the extension of our trade relations will be greatly to the advantage of both countries.

In spite of the fact that warfare becomes less and less the normal condition of foreign relations, it would be a mistake to suppose a marked diminution of wars between civilized powers. Wherever possible arbitration or some similar method should be employed to settle the many difficulties between civilized nations, although as yet it is rarely possible to dispense entirely with force. It remains true that few indeed have been the instances in which a civilized power has warred against semi-civilized or barbarous forces where there was not much to be said in defense of the course pursued by the civilized power. Our wars against the Indians and in the Philippine islands afford examples in point. On the whole, the treatment of the Indian, important and beneficent work which has been done by the army in the Philippines.

Taking the work of the army and the civil authorities together, it may be questioned whether in all history there has sometimes the world has seen a better example of the way in which a conquering race can govern and has governed the Philippines—in the aggregate—than the way in which we have governed them. The conditions and joined with our representatives to work with hearty good will for the welfare of the islanders.

The army has been reduced to the minimum allowed by law. It is very much less in the size of the nation and most certainly should not be increased except in the line of efficiency. The senior officers are given scant chance under present conditions to command. The same commands commensurate with their rank under circumstances which would at all justify their taking the field in time of war. A system of maneuvering our army in bodies of some little size has always been and should be steadily continued. Within the limits allowed by law the army should be maintained at the highest point of efficiency. The present system of promotion is the cause of constant changes and retirements, which tend to prevent the army from keeping up with the times. The examinations for promotion should be practical and thorough, and the present system under which the examinations are practically a matter of form should be abolished.

There should be no halt in the work of building up the navy, providing every year additional ships to replace the very rich country, vast in extent of territory and great in population, of industry, and moreover, which has an army diminutive for purposes of foreign war, and no navy at all. The Monroe doctrine should be treated as the cardinal feature of American foreign policy; but it could be more effectively upheld if our navy were powerful enough to assert it unless we intended to back it by force. We have always relied mainly upon the gun crews, and especially the gun crews of the militia of the several states, to man our fighting ships in time of war, and the militia of the several states should be trained with this end in view. The militia should be armed and equipped with the best modern rifle, and should be trained to habitual proficiency in rifle practice. Aside from the militia, provision should be made for a thoroughly good navy. A good navy is the surest guarantee of peace. The best way to maintain the peace is to be prepared for war.

The most important unit of our navy should be the most efficient of its kind as regards both material and personnel that it is to be found in the world. I will call special attention to the need of providing for the coaling of the fleet in time of war. In case of threatens us if we cannot do better than we are now doing as regards keeping the service of a sufficient number of the high-class colliers always in readiness. The veteran seamen of our warships are the ships they are in can be found in any navy which is on the waters of the world. They are unsurpassed in during, in reserve, the highest skill in the seamanly sides of their profession. They deserve every consideration at our hands in shore leave. But there are not enough of them. It is impossible to improvise a warship. To build the finest ship, with the deadliest battery, and man it after a time with a raw crew, no matter how brave they were individually, would be to insure disaster if face of average capacity were encountered. Probably in this country, as formerly in England, the navy will be largely improvised when war has begun.

The additional and additional officers in order to properly man the ships now provided for and under construction, and the classes at the naval school at Annapolis should be greatly enlarged. At the same time the line of promotion in the officers' corps should be made more flexible, so that when we need them, we should facilitate the retirement of officers who are not up to the highest efficiency. Only in this way can the present inadequate promotion be remedied. Provision should be made for a sufficient force of marines to be kept efficient.

The lamentable scarcity of officers and the large number of recruits and of unskilled men necessarily put aboard the battleship Maine at the time of the disaster stoned has thrown upon our officers, and upon the petty officers, warrants and junior grades, unusual labor and fatigue and has rendered necessary the details of men for shore duty. Nor is there any way of continuing the present drain. It must continue for some time longer until more officers are graduated from Annapolis and until the regular promotion and skilling the their duties. In these difficulties incident upon the development of the navy the faithful conduct of all our officers has been creditable in the highest degree. The warrants and junior grades in particular have displayed the skill and steadfast courage upon which settle them in an emergency. Thanks at all who realize the disheartening trials and difficulties which they have encountered.

There is not a cloud on the horizon at present. There seems not the slightest chance of trouble with any foreign power. There is every reason to think that this state of things may continue, and the best way to insure peace is to be ready for a thoroughly efficient navy. The refusal to make such a navy would invite trouble, and if trouble should come would insure disaster. Any complacency or vanity or shortsightedness in neglecting to provide for the best navy that can be wielded in such a nation as ours, and past experience has shown that it is folly for us to expect to recognize or prepare for any crisis in advance is practically certain to arise, and we have hitherto never once the crisis has actually arrived.

The steady increase in the business of the postoffice department shows clearly the progress of our people and the increasing activity of the business interests.

The receipts of the postoffice department for the fiscal year ended June 30 last amounted to $121,348,947.26, an increase of $10,214,852.97 over the preceding year. This is the largest increase in the history of the postal service. The magnitude of this increase may be judged by the fact that the entire postal receipts for the year 1860 amounted to but $8,518,000.

Rural free delivery service is no longer in the experimental stage. It has become a fixed policy of the postoffice department, and we fully justified the congress in the large appropriations which it has made for the service. The postmaster reports that the service has increased in extent and in efficiency. There are now awaiting the action of congress petitions for the establishment of 19,748 additional routes. This number could be established at once, and the establishment of the service has met and the need of increasing the appropriation to $40,000,000 is justified both by the financial results and by the practical benefits to our rural population. I call attention to the report of the postmaster general for the details of the operations of the department, and to his estimates for increased appropriations to provide for the proper development of the service.

It is to be hoped that the congress will make liberal appropriations for the continuance of the service already established and for its further extension.

Few subjects of more importance have been taken up by the congress in recent years than the inauguration of the system of nationally aided irrigation of the arid lands of the west. Already a good beginning therein has been made. New States have been admitted to the Union, and have adopted the best of the irrigation and scientific forest protection laws, and within only three years over $4,000,000 of public land subject to irrigation should be provided for the protection of the forests which are the fountains of the streams. The water which will be used for irrigation is to be furnished by the national irrigation law, the remaining public lands in the arid States will be reclaimed by the settler who lives on his land, and for no one else. The settler must pay for the timber and stone law and the commutation money, and the limitations of the law must be observed from the intention with which they were enacted as to permit the settler to get a title to more than a small tracts for other than actual settlers and the consequent prevention of

C. C. BURKE WINS TROPHY AT HILLSIDE

Defeated Dudley H. Barrows in Finals for Holiday Cup Thursday Afternoon.

BOGEY HANDICAP HELD

THANKSGIVING PLAY AT HILLSIDE TENNIS AND GOLF CLUB.

Semi-Finals in Morning and Finals in Afternoon—Bogey Handicap Was Won by Howard deP. Wright—The Other Score.

The chief event of interest at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Thursday was the concluding play for the Holiday cup between Dudley H. Barrows, W. M. Murray, C. C. Burke and George T. VanBoskerck, each of whom had scored a win for the cup. The semi-final play was in the morning, when Dudley H. Barrows defeated W. M. Murray, 3 up and 2 to go. Barrows gave his opponent two strokes, one on the first and one on the eleventh hole. C. C. Burke defeated George T. VanBoskerck, 6 up and 5 to go, the latter giving his opponent six strokes in all.

In the afternoon these was the final play between Dudley Barrows and C. C. Burke. The former gave his opponent 3 strokes and lost 10. Mr. Burke won the cup by 2 up.

Final play for the Gilbert cup, mixed foursomes, was scheduled for yesterday, but owing to the fact that it was impossible to get all of the ten contestants together at that time, this play was put off until next year. The competition will be scheduled for early in the season.

A second event of considerable interest yesterday was a bogey handicap, in which many of the club members participated.

Howard deP. Wright won the bogey handicap, his score being 1 up. George T. VanBoskerck and C. C. Burke divided second honors, their score being 4 down. Some of the lowest scores were Walter Peterson, 5 down; H. R. Stockton, 6 down; Charles A. Stover, 7 down; Arthur Peterson, 13 down.

SURPRISED MISS WINDHAM.

Friends Gathered at Her Home for Pleasant Time Thanksgiving Eve.

A surprise party was held at the home of Miss Lulu Windham, of Fairview avenue, Thanksgiving eve in honor of her birthday. The evening was spent in playing games and musical solos. A piano solo was rendered by Mr. Harold and mandolin solos by Mr. Brodricks. Miss Lavers gave a number of very clever recitations and during the evening a large bouquet of flowers was presented to Miss Windham by members of the Young Ladies' Kaffee Klatsch. The affair was arranged by Miss Le Maire. Refreshments were served during the evening.

After its completion Mr. and Mrs. Clacy left on a wedding trip which will terminate tomorrow. They will reside in this city.

Doing the Right Thing.

The trouble begins with a tickling in the throat and a nagging little cough. Soreness in the chest follows and the patient wonders if he is going to have an all winter cold. Probably if he does the wrong thing or nothing. Certainly not if he uses Perry Davis' Painkiller, the staunch old remedy that cures a cold in twenty-four hours. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'.

MANY GAVE THANKS AT LOCAL CHURCHES

Union Thanksgiving Services Were Held in This City Thursday Morning.

HELD AT TWO CHURCHES

SERVICES AT FIRST BAPTIST AND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES.

Services Were Preached by Rev. E. L. Earp and Rev. George B. Shaw—Other Clergymen Were Present to Assist.

The Union Thanksgiving service of all the churches on the north side of the railroad was held Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock in the First Baptist church. The attendance was encouraging and altogether the service was one of great help and profit to all. The special music was in charge of the regular church choir and aside from the anthems rendered, there were solo parts by Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano; Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto; Geo. Smith, tenor, and Wm. Holmes, bass, while Mrs. Ward and Mr. Holmes sang a beautiful duet selection.

Rev. Dr. J. Yerkes, pastor of the church, conducted the responsive reading from the Psalms and offered an opening prayer. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass read the Scripture selection while Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., offered prayer.

The sermon was delivered by Rev. Edward L. Earp, pastor of Grace M. E. church, and it was a strong Gospel discourse upon the topic of "The Altruism of Jesus." The speaker referred to the relation of the fortunate to the unfortunate and the obligation implied. He told how best the for tunate could serve those who have had the least advantages. He believed that it was in the quality and not quantity that discontent is fostered.

Continuing Mr. Earp referred to three special points to illustrate his text, namely "Selfishness," "Unselfishness," and "Reward." He believed that it is the duty of all Christians to have due regard for others and thus exemplify the ideal altruism represented in Christ. At the close of the sermon, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Yerkes.

One of the largest attendance at any service given in keeping with the day, was the one at the Congregational church, in the morning. It was intended for all worshippers south of the New Jersey Central tracks and many denominations were represented.

Rev. George B. Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, was in charge, and delivered a convincing discourse on the appropriateness of offering thanks. He selected his text from Psalm cvii 2, "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so," and dwelt on the need of expressing gratitude for blessings and not by simple feeling. America's prosperity has been made manifest in many ways, he said, and it is the duty of every citizen to render thanks to the Father who has watched its progress. Prayer was offered by Rev. J. W. Richardson.

Music for the service was furnished by the regular church choir.

THE SPEAKERS.

The Board of Trade has issued invitations for its first dinner to be given in the Hotel Rossil, December 10. Among the prominent guests who will be present and the subjects they are to talk upon will be James E. Martine, "Plainfield of the Present;" Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, "Plainfield of the Past" and William L. Saunders, "Plainfield of the Future."

Neglected Splinter Made Trouble.

While working about the yard in the rear of his bakery Wednesday Nov. 26, Henry Voehl ran a splinter in his hand but did not pay any attention to it. He suffered much pain in the hand Thursday and on going to Dr. Pittis he learned that blood poisoning had set in. The wound was dressed and the young man is now recovering rapidly.

THE TOWN HAD OFFSETS.

Consequently the Indignant Drummer's Claim for Damages Brought Only $110.54.

"I had been knocking about a Kansas town in the evening," said a drummer with a limp, to a Dallas (Tex.) News reporter, "and in heading for my hotel I walked plump into an open sewer which had no red light of warning.

"I had a bad fall and broke my hip, and I wasn't yet out of the sewer when I made up my mind to sue for $20,000 damages. I was taken to the hospital, and next day the city attorney called on me to know what I was going to do.

WALKED INTO A SEWER.

"'I am going to sue the town, of course,' I replied.

"'But what for?' he asked.

"'For personal damages. There should have been a railing or a light, but there was neither, and my injury will lay me up for weeks.'

"'But don't you know what you escaped by falling into the sewer?' he asked.

"'No.'

"'Then let me tell you that the roof of the hotel fell in last night and killed three men, and if you had been in your bed you would have been crushed to pulp. You really owe this town something instead of talking about damages.'

"When able to get out," continued the drummer, "I found that public opinion was against me and the people ready to stand a suit, and by advice of a lawyer I settled the case for $128.

"It shall at every other farmhouse, but they passed me by as if we had the smallpox.

"One evening I stood at the gate

"RISES OF WHAT?"

as one approached, and when he came up I asked:

"'Did you see my signs along the road?'

"'Plenty of 'em,' he replied.

"'Goin' to stop?'

"'Not on your life.'

"'I can give you a supper and a good place to sleep.'

"'Don't want it.'

"'See here,' I continued, as he began to walk away, 'what's the matter that all you tramps pass me by? I don't look like a man up to tricks, do I?'

"'I can't say you do, but we ain't takin' no risks, you understand.'

"'Risks of what?'

"'Why, I guess the crowd thinks you are one of them fellers who invites a tramp into supper and then keeps him at family prayers for an hour and a half afterward to get even with him.'"

Pain Pests All the Blits.

In Mexico the young men can show great attention to young ladies, and at very little expense. They are, therefore, quite eager to invite them to theaters, parties, etc. And no wonder; for it is the custom in that country for the lady's father to pay for the tickets, and furnish the carriage, supper, etc.

FEASTED THOSE AWAY FROM THEIR HOMES

Y. M. C. A. Gave a Thanksgiving Dinner to Young Men Strangers Here.

SPEECHES WERE GIVEN

AFTER THE DINNER EACH GUEST HAD TO TELL OF HIMSELF.

Made a Happy Thanksgiving for Those Who Might Have Otherwise Had a Dreary Holiday—The Committee in Charge.

Thanksgiving Day was made very pleasant for a large number of young men, who have only recently arrived in Plainfield and who would otherwise have passed a very dreary holiday, at a dinner and entertainment at the Young Men's Christian Association last Thursday afternoon and evening. The affair was held in the rooms in the boy's department, up stairs, where a committee of active workers in the association, assisted by several women who are also interested in the work, arranged the dinner which was a sumptuous one.

Secretary J. Harry Manning presided at the table and Kenneth Robbin, the secretary of boys' department, acted as toast master. After the last course had been served each one present was called upon to make a speech in which he was especially requested to tell where he was born, when he came to this city, what his business was, and to tell his name and whether he was married or not. This proved to be a very interesting feature of the dinner and was the source of much amusement.

After the speech making was over, a social time was enjoyed after which those present were invited to attend the entertainment in the Association Hall, for which tickets were presented to each member of the company. Ten States and countries were represented in the gathering. New York, California, West Virginia, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Connecticut, New Jersey, Holland and Scotland.

The committee which arranged for the affair were: J. A. Gavett, M. C. VanArsdale, T. H. Stafford, and M. Grafis, assisted by Miss Mary Draper, of Fulton, N. Y.; Miss Elizabeth Randolph and Miss Ernestine Smith.

WEDDING WAS A SURPRISE

MISS AGNES MINFORD QUIETLY MARRIED TO R. V. MARTINSEN.

Ceremony Took Place Wednesday Evening—Both Young People Were Well Known in Society.

Miss Agnes Armour Minford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Minford, of Watchung avenue, and Rudolph V. Martinsen, of New York, were quietly wedded Wednesday, Nov. 26, at the home of Rev. J. W. Richardson, of East Ninth street. The ceremony was performed by that clergyman. It was witnessed by the Misses Borsum, of Netherwood, intimate friends of the young woman.

While the young people have been intimate for some time, the news of their wedding was a surprise to their friends. The bride's parents knew of the match and, while they would have much preferred to give their daughter a suitable wedding in due time, they did not offer serious objection to the determination of the young people to wed at once. They had intended to have Rev. W. Montgomery Downey to perform the ceremony but he was not at home. After the marriage the young couple left for New York where they will take up their residence.

Miss Minford is well-known in local society circles where she has a host of friends. To them the news of her marriage was very unexpected. Mr. Martinsen resided in Washington Park a year ago and made many friends here. He has since taken up his residence in New York where he is secretary of an automobile manufacturing company.

ADVENTURE IN MIDAIR.

Young Man Caught in a Balloon Hoop Rises 2,000 Feet and Escapes Without Hurt.

Louis Ward, of Milford, Mass., aged 20 years, made an involuntary and thrilling acrobatic balloon ascension the other day. His left foot caught in the guy rope of a balloon and he was carried into the air and suspended head downward. After being carried up 2,000 feet into the air and directly across Hoag lake he landed unhurt 15 minutes later in a tree top a mile from the point where he went up.

Ward was assisting Prof. Hillman, a professional aeronaut, who has been giving balloon ascensions and parachute exhibitions at Hoag park. Hillman's balloon, a massive hot air one, was being prepared for the afternoon exhibition, and Ward and others were assisting. Everything ready, the professor gave the word, the balloon was released, and swiftly mounted into the air with the professor hanging to the parachute.

Ward started to get out of the way as the balloon was released, but his left foot caught in one of the guy ropes, and, to the horror of the several thousand spectators, he was carried into the air suspended head downward. His weight held the balloon on its side, in danger of an immediate collapse and certain death to both men. Hillman acted quickly. Ward dangled from the balloon about ten feet above the aeronaut, and beyond his reach. If the balloon was brought to an upright position there was some chance for Ward, so, after a few words of advice as to how to secure himself and draw himself upright, Hillman released the parachute when but 200 feet in the air and came safely to the ground.

The balloon, freed from this weight, righted itself and shot upward and across the lake, which is about half a mile wide. The balloon soon began its descent, coming down easily and gracefully, and Ward landed in a tree unhurt.

HUSBAND IS A WOMAN.

Baltimore Widow's Heart and Hand Are Won by a Pretty North Carolina Girl.

Under a recent date a Chicago Chronicle correspondent writes from Baltimore, Md., that a week ago Mrs. Ernestine L. Rauck, a pretty young widow of North Eutaw street, married Herman G. Wood, who had boarded in her house for some months. At night the bride went to the house of Rev. Anthony Pilkoway, who performed the ceremony, and in a hysterical manner informed the preacher that she had been married to a woman. The police investigated and the "groom" confessed.

The "groom" is Lydia Lota Sawyer, 22 years old and not bad looking. She was locked up on the charge of obtaining $100 from Mrs. Rauck by false pretenses. In her confession Miss Sawyer stated that she belonged to a wealthy family residing near Elizabeth City, N. C. She left home five years ago, deserting an infant boy, it is said.

Disgrace and the fact that she could secure employment easily caused her to don male attire, and this she has worn for five years in this city without exciting suspicion. She made love to two women and jilted a Washington girl to wed Mrs. Rauck. Dispatches from North Carolina confirm the girl's story.

PRETTY WEST END WEDDING

UNITED MISS FRANCES TRAPHAGEN COSE AND HARRY KESSLER LISTER.

Ceremony Performed at the Brides' Home Wednesday, Nov. 26, in Presence of Many Guests.

In the presence of 150 guests from this city, Annadale, Lebanon, Easton and Philadelphia, Miss Frances Traphagen Cose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Cose, of Grant avenue, was united in marriage, Wednesday, Nov. 26, to Harry Kessler Lister. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents and was performed by Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel.

Included in the bridal party were Miss Marion Stephany Porter, as maid-of-honor, George Black Cose as best man and the ushers Alexander W. Muir and Benjamin W. Evans. Miss Cose and Miss Porter were both attired in white Persian lawn with appliqué trimmings. The former carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and the latter the same flowers of a yellow hue. Mrs. John H. Cose rendered the Lohengrin wedding march as the young people assumed their proper places in the parlor.

Following the ceremony the young couple were tendered a reception which lasted until a late hour. Thursday morning they left for Philadelphia where they was given a second reception Friday, by the groom's mother, Mrs. Emily H. Lister. After a week's trip they will return to this city but will not go housekeeping until spring.

Among the many presents which Mr. and Mrs. Lister received were a Morris chair from the bride's Sunday-school class in Hope chapel and another handsome chair from the ushers.

BIG MACHINE JUST BUILT

A MAGNETIC CLUTCH PLANER COMPLETED AT POND TOOL WORKS.

Built Specially for Shops of Pennsylvania Railroad at Altoona, Pa.

Last week saw the completion at the Pond Machine Tool Works of one of the largest machines ever built at the shop and the largest of the kind ever constructed. It is called a magnetic clutch planer and was made from special designs for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for use in its shops at Altoona. Completely fitted up, the machine weighs 120 tons, and will resize five cars for transportation.

In detail the contrivance is fifty-nine feet, six inches long and measures six feet between the uprights. The table is thirty-four feet long and weighs thirty-five tons. The bed is in one piece and weighs forty tons. Not a belt of any kind is to be used on the machine, the power being transmitted by what is termed "magnetic clutch." This is gained by electricity from a motor of immense size. The clutches were patented and built at the General Electric plant at Schenectady, N. Y. One gear alone made of brass weights 1,300 pounds and represents an expenditure of $1,400.

RURAL BARN DANCE ENJOYED BY SOCIETY

The In and Out Club Held Its First Dance Under Strictly Unique Circumstances.

DECORATIONS AFFAIR WAS HELD IN THE COMMODIOUS BARNS OF F. A. BARNABY.

Banquet Table Arrived at Midnight in a Large Hay Wagon—Some of the Guests Who Were Present at the Affair.

A typical rural barn dance was held in the large barn on the Barnaby estate on Plainfield avenue, Wednesday, Nov. 26, which, in point of the decorations and the originality of the arrangements, made the first dance of the In and Out Club one of the most brilliant and decidedly the most unique social function seen in this city in several years. The general scheme was to hold an autumnal barn dance and those who conceived the idea carried out the plan in every particular.

Hung about the ceiling were clusters of cornstalks and golden ears of corn while in the corners and on the rafters were arranged jack-o'-lanterns and bunches of red peppers and sheaves of wheat giving the appearance of a barn full of the autumn harvest freshly gathered from the fields. On the spacious grounds were hung lanterns of many shapes and sizes which gave the appearance of a perfect fairy land of scintillating lights of various colors.

Inside the barn soft strains of music eminating from behind a bower of graceful cornstalks and clusters of greens set the time for the dance. All those who were present were attired in outing suits, the women being gowned in shirtwaists and white duck skirts and the men in trousers of the same material.

At about midnight there was a sound of the approach of horse's hoofs on the gravel driveway and the blowing of horns and the sound of bells announced the arrival of a large hay wagon loaded with cornstalks and hay and in the center of which was a table laden with the banquet which was a royal one. The driver and his companion, representing Reuben and Cynthia, were Frederick W. Goddard and Mrs. E. M. VanBuren. They were blowing tin horns and ringing a large dinner bell. The banquet was served in a corner of the barn and where the wall were hung with hunting prints of great value.

Following the banquet came the principal event of the evening, the cotillion which was led by Thomas R. VanBoskerck. His partner was Miss May Evans. The favors of large straw bonnets for the women and rosettes for the men were distributed by the patronesses who were: Miss May Evans, Mrs. Edward M. VanBuren, Miss Lucy Otterson, Miss May Holly and Mrs. Frank Austin Barnaby. Included in the favors distributed were toy animals, jaks, hoes, milk flags, horse's heads, baskets of candy eggs, pumpkins filled with candy eggs and musical instruments.

Some of the features of the German were figures representing scare crows, churning maids, maypole dancers, and horse show habitatues. Those who arranged for the dance and who conceived the idea of the affair were: Miss May Evans, Mrs. Edward M. VanBuren, Miss May Holly, Miss Margaret Holly and Miss Lucy Otterson.

Among those who were present were: Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. VanBuren, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mr and Mrs. L. E. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McGee, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. James Blake and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Murphy.

THANKSGIVING EVE SMOKER GIVEN IN DEMOCRATIC HEADQUARTERS.

Programme of Local Talent Very Pleasantly Entertained a Large Crowd.

The smoker given Wednesday, Nov. 26, by the Plainfield Democratic Club in its rooms in East Second street was a great success, not only in point of the attendance but in the entertainment which helped make the evening an enjoyable one.

New York entertainers were provided by the entertainment committee but at the eleventh hour they sent word that they would not be able to be present so local talent was substituted which proved to be very acceptable. Among those who took part in the programme were Frederick Bowden, John and James Galvin, William Moran, James Dougherty, Bert Collins and John Vardon, including the male quartet of the company now playing at the Central theatre.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 7—Comment by Rev. S. E. Doyle.

Topic—Do I discourage others?—Mark 3, 6-35; Rom. xiii, 8-12.

There is no man that liveth to himself. Every man has some influence for good or for evil upon somebody else. We are "good angels" or "bad angels" to those with whom we come in contact in life. We inspire men to faith and to endeavor or we dishearten and discourage them. The very atmosphere of our lives has often one of these two effects without our saying or doing anything directly. In the presence of some people we are inspired to hope, to trust, to believe, while the presence of others impresses us with doubt and despair. What is the effect of our lives? Do we inspire or discourage? Are we a help or a hindrance?

Do we discourage others from coming to Christ? It seems incredible that any should do this, yet many do stand in the way of others who want to accept and to confess Christ. In Mark 10, 46-52, we have an illustration of such a character. Blind Bartimeus pressed toward Christ, crying, "Have mercy on me," but many cried out, "Hold your peace." What a discouragement! How different if they had helped him and had led him to the Saviour. Yet he persevered and was healed and saved. Parents brought children to Christ, but the disciples discouraged them, saying, "Trouble Him not." But Jesus Himself was willing to be troubled and invited them to come. Thus many have been discouraged from coming to Christ. Some have been ridiculed and scoffed, some have been told they were too sinful and that they were too young. And then in deeds as well as words many are discouraged from coming to Christ. Do we thus discourage any one? Are our lives so inconsistent that we lead them to think that perhaps after all it will not be so to come? What could be sadder than to keep a soul from Christ?

Do we discourage others in Christian work? Of this we have an instance in Num. xiii, 26-33. Ten men by discouragement led a nation of people from performing their duty and from fulfilling the task appointed to them by God Himself, with the terrible consequences that for years they wandered aimlessly about in a wilderness. What could more illustrate the direful consequence of discouragement? It is easy to discourage Christian workers. A look, a word, an act, may take the heart out of one who is earnestly striving for the Master. But woe unto the one through whom the offense cometh." Christ Himself has pronounced a terrible woe upon those who discourage the simple and the weak. We should earnestly strive against being discouragers of others, and like Barnabas, we should strive the more in the face of opposition, resting assured that God will hear us and will own and bless all efforts sincerely put forth in Christ's name.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. iii, 1-12; Neh. ii, 19, 20; iv, 1-9; Ps. xxvii, 1-5; Matt. xvii, 1-7; Luke xvii, 15-17; John vi, 66-69; Rom. xiv, 15-23; I Cor. xv, 58; Gal. vi, 9.

An Important Committee's Work.

Advertise religion. Why not? The world finds that the quickest way to push forward an enterprise is to advertise it. As long as there is nothing wrong in the method, why not use it in promoting the enterprise of Christian Endeavor? Next to a consistent life, I believe the best advertisement of Christianity is Christian literature, and "good literature" committees should constitute themselves advertising agents to bring Christian literature before the public.—John Willis Baer.

The Quiet Hour.

The Quiet Hour enrollment has now passed the 30,000 mark. The simple, farreaching covenant of the comrades of the Quiet Hour is this: "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I will make it the rule of my life to set apart at least fifteen minutes every day, if possible in the early morning, for quiet meditation and direct communion with God."

In the Frozen North.

Rev. Dr. Clark, on his recent old world journey in the interest of Christian Endeavor, found one society in Sweden beyond the arctic circle, in latitude 67 degrees 30 minutes north.

Dr. Conwell's Church.

In Rev. Dr. Russell H. Conwell's church in Philadelphia there are fourteen Christian Endeavor societies.

In China, Germany and Japan.

The first society in Fuchau was called by a Chinese word which means "the Drum and Rouse Up society," not a bad translation of Christian Endeavor.

There are more than 100 societies in Germany, and in that country they call the movement "Christliche Entschiedenheit."

The "Kyorelkwai" is the Japanese name for Christian Endeavor. Recent statistics show seventy-one societies in the Land of the Rising Sun.

STAR RUN WON THE GAME

SHERWIN SAVED THE DAY FOR THE ORANGE FIELD CLUB.

Exciting Football Game Between O. F. C. and Port Richmond Y. M. C. A.

The football game Thursday afternoon on the Hope Common between the Orange Field Club and the Port Richmond Y. M. C. A. was witnessed by a large number of people who cheered the local players on to a winning score of 11 to 5 in one of the most interesting games played by the Orange Field Club this season. It was a battle fought out by the merits of each individual player in which the excellent training of the past week was shown in the results.

In the first half the local players forced the visitors to play on the defensive as the Port Richmonds were much the heavier team. Smith made a touchdown but the O. F. C. was unable to kick the goal. In the second half it looked as though the score would remain 5-0 but the visitors scored a touchdown by a long run by Lovell but they were unable to kick the goal making the score 5-5. This was the score until the last three minutes when it began to look gloomy for the local team until Sherwin made the star run of the game by taking the ball down the entire length of the field and scored a touchdown which was kicked by Emmons. Score, 11-5.

The visitors were dined at the Kensington, by the O. F. C. after the game.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 7, "The Missionary Uprising of the Young People"—Text, Acts 11, 27, 28, 21; I Tim. iv, 12-16.

"Let no man despise thy youth, but be thou an example to them that believe."

It too often occurs that people are ashamed of something in early life. Foolish things are done in carelessness or a spirit of independence and bravado and afterward bitterly repented when the inevitable sting comes. It is not necessary to sow wild oats. Nothing in our nature makes it compulsory. Nothing can make it right. Many never do it. Their tribe is increasing. A multitude, greater than ever before, of the young people are coming forward to places of prominence and power and are doing work of which they shall not be ashamed. Those who see them now and those who shall in coming time see what they accomplish shall applaud and not despise.

Though long experience and age may be needful to bring mature wisdom, it is yet a fact that no one has to live many years to get enough knowledge to go safely if he desires it. Youth is not by any means the age of foolishness, though it is a period of abounding folly and because so many ways open and none has been fully explored and some are very attractive and there are curiosity and logging to know what each will lead to dangers and risks are met and taken which might have been shunned.

It is in young life that God gives the spirit of prophecy if it ever comes to one at all. This is the time when the realities of life begin to loom up large and the mighty issues of existence and all the mystery of right and wrong and ideals of duty and visions of the perfect and beautiful unfold themselves before the awakening soul. The spirit begins to realize its own nature and to abide earthly and to struggle for its birthright and strive for speech.

The church of Jesus Christ is recognizing increasingly the possibilities open to the young people if they are God filled and God guided.

If the world is ever evangelized, it will be done by those young in years. That sounds like a rash statement, but the more fully it is studied the more fully its soberness appears.

Young people free from family cares can go among heathen people, endure privations, apply themselves more vigorously, adapt themselves to circumstances more fully and quickly than older persons incumbered with children, languages most usually be acquired in early years or they will never be mastered efficiently. Physical endurance, mental alertness, spiritual enthusiasm, are all at their best in early years, and these are the forces for success in the work of Christ's kingdom.

One of the most hopeful signs of the times is the great forward movement among young Christians of all denominations in missionary work. The best talent of the church is being given itself for this aggressive work in winning the world to Christ. Whether those entering the ministry in the home land are as well equipped and as highly talented as those entering business life, it is true that the foreign work God is getting the best. The brainiest and brawniest of the great colleges, the purest and most Christlike, are the standard bearers there.

The Gate of Prayer.

The gate of prayer is an important gate in Zion. "My house shall be called a house of prayer," is God's own word. The great gate should give us entrance every day to God's inner temple. What burdens do we bring through this gate! What blessings do we carry away! To forsake this gate of Zion is to face a world without strength. In the early morning run into this gate for strength. At evening return with gratitude.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Difference.

One who has spent her life in weeping, mourning but not as hardest to be borne, sighing that others' lives were easy, paying no heed to any but self, when asked what most she craved in heaven replied, "A place to laugh." And one who bravely bore her burdens, upright and smiling, thinking but little of her woe, but helping every suffering mortal, when asked, "What most do you desire in heaven?" replied, "A place to weep."—Christian Register.

A Good Wisher.

Benevolence is a universal possibility. The poorest can wish his fellow well. A good wish is not to be had for money. He may err, but his errors are those of judgment. His heart is never out of place. Envy has no part in his nature. Slander and calumny are foreign to his disposition.—Presbyterian Journal.

Civilization and Christianity.

That civilization has reacted on Christianity is palpably true, but it is not one whit more true than the fact that Christianity has wrought itself into the texture of the civilization whose triumphs it has so immeasurably increased.—New York Tribune.

"Tis Good to Live!

'Tis good to live! If but to learn.
Although I'm weak, my friend is strong.
And many a minor tone it takes
To fill the chords for one grand song.

'Tis good to live! If but to hear
A tuneful voice, homesick for heaven.
Or read a glowing prophecy
The poet by the world had given.

'Tis good to live! If but to love
All brave, true women, tender men;
To know a doubter may find faith
Through some pure heaven of eyes again.

'Tis good to live! If but to dream
That even in the city street,
Among the hurried throngs, a top,
God's answer and my prayer will meet.
—Congregationalist.

ALIS FOOTBALL TEAM MEETS FIRST DEFEAT

Beaten by Bergen Point Field Club on Hope Common by the Score of 6 to 0.

THURSDAY MORNING

UNFORTUNATE FUMBLE GAVE BERGEN POINT BALL CLOSE TO ALIS' GOAL.

Visitors' Line Was Invincible and Their Backs Hammered Alis Line for Many Gains—Alis' Fast Work Around Ends Saved Them.

Its first defeat of the season, administered to the crack Alis A. A. eleven by the Bergen Point Field Club Thursday morning on Hope Common, furnished Plainfield with one of the most exciting football games of the season. The score was 6 to 0, and might have been 0 to 0 but for an unfortunate fumble which gave the Bergen Points the ball right before Alis' goal.

From the start it was evident that Alis had the toughest proposition of the season to deal with. The visitors had the heavier team and they played together well. Their line was invincible and Alis had to confine its gaining to end plays where fast work and good interference counted. Alis put up a splendid defensive game in the first half. The ball stayed near the middle of the field most of the time, both sides repeatedly losing it on downs. Alis, through fast end plays, carried the ball to Bergen Point's twenty yard line there to lose it on downs. Then Bergen Point hammered the line and the ball zigzaged up and down the field again.

Bergen Point kicked off in the second half. Phillips caught the ball and started to run back. He was thrown heavily and the ball bounded away when a Bergen Point end fell on it on Alis' twenty yard line. Then the visitors backed the line steadily until the goal line was crossed by Green for a touchdown. An easy goal was kicked by Longstreet.

After that, the Alis boys made a desperate effort to score but without avail. They were forced to kick and Pond punted well down the field. Once a punt gave Bergen Point the ball on its five yard line. Alis attempted to hold for downs but Bergen Point's line backing was too strong and the ball was carried out of danger. Both sides played hard and there were frequent delays on account of arguments. A large crowd witnessed the game. Although the turf was soft and slippery, there was little or no fumbling by either side.

The teams lined up as follows:

Alis.		Bergen Point.
Smith	LE	Houghton
Wilson	LT	Allen
Hardingham	LG	Longstreet
Quinn	C	Tuttle
Egan	RG	Whitney
Pond	RT	Langfoth
Cathcart	RE	E. Stalling
Phillips	QB	Waters
Woolston	LH	Green
Cuming	RH	W. Stalling
Davis	FB	Daw

The officials were: Referee, H. S. Taylor, of Orange A. C.; umpire, Charles Dupee, of Yale, '01; field linesman, A. Willis West, of Plainfield; linesmen, Harry Verdenberg, of Bayonne, and Charles B. Morse, of Plainfield; time-keepers, E. S. F. Randolph, of Plainfield, and J. C. Martin, of Bayonne.

COMPANY K'S SECOND DANCE.

Military Men in Charge of Affair at Casino, Nov. 26.

The members of Company K gave their second military dance to friends, Wednesday evening, in the Casino. A good crowd was in attendance and with music from Suhr's orchestra as an incentive, the young people tripped over the floor until an early hour yesterday morning. A feature was the serving of refreshments at midnight.

The committee which arranged, and had the affair in charge consisted of George L. Apgar, chairman, C. H. Bilyen, C. A. Peterson, Eugene Searing, A. I. Littel, Fred J. Pope, Nathan Tilsworth and Lieutenant Lewis.

SENT OUT DINNER.

The Relief Association Furnished a Number of Thanksgiving Dinners.

The Plainfield Relief Association, the city's pioneer organization in work of relief, was able to send out about eighty complete dinners to the poor of the city. Those dinners were received at the rooms of the association and sent out Wednesday. A number of the women were at the rooms through the day to receive the generous donations from friends. The members are much gratified over the unanimous response from supporters of this work for they feel that in the resulting happy so many homes, they will be generously blessed themselves for their liberality.

HOPE FIVE WON AT BASKET BALL

Defeated Alis A. A. in Hope Y. M. A. Gymnasium by Score of 25 to 20.

SECOND LEAGUE GAME

Accurate Goal Throwing by Dilks With Fast Playing by All the Hope Men Gave Them a Lead in the First Half Which Could Not Be Overcome.

There was a decided surprise in store for the basket ball team of the Alis A. A. when it played its initial game in the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League against the Hope Y. M. A. in the latter's gymnasium Friday night. At home in their own gymnasium, the Hope boys played such a clever game that the crack visitors went down before them by a score of 25 to 20. An audience of enthusiasts filled the visitors' gallery and howled itself hoarse in the excitement.

From the very first, the Hope boys played with a confidence and aggressiveness which was lacking in their first game against the Y. M. C. A. Alis was put on the defensive. Only a few minutes of play served to demonstrate that the home players had improved their accuracy in goal throwing. In that line, the Alis boys were woefully weak. In the first five minutes of play, the score stood 5 to 1. Dilks had a backward throw for goal which was wonderfully accurate and which even a veteran like Walter L. Long had difficulty in blocking. Save for a pretty goal from the centre of the floor by Porter, Dilks did all the scoring from the field in the first half. While the Alis forwards had occasional opportunities to throw for goals, they were inaccurate. Mc Combe and Porter as guards, were both playing a fast game and managed to keep the ball away from their goal most of the time. The first half ended with the score 14 to 5 in favor of Hope.

Several changes were made in the Alis team in the second half, George Proctor Smith, one of the best known of the local players, going in. Some very pretty exhibitions of team play were given by Long, Smith and Moraller but the gymnasium was too small to make it very effective. Hope's fast game, combined with accurate work by its forwards enabled that team to almost keep pace with the Alis boys. While Alis gained slightly in the second half, it was not enough to overcome the big lead secured in the first half.

With its trio of veteran players, it was generally supposed that Alis would have no difficulty in winning from Hope. But the Hope boys have been practicing hard and their superior physical condition helped them materially. Alis' new men felt the strain of the hard game while the older players found the gymnasium new and strange. Its smallness was somewhat condusive to rough play and, as a result, ten fouls were called on each side. Those who witnessed Hope's first game last Monday could not help but see the great improvement made by the Hope players. The guards, in particular, tended strictly to business and covered their men. Many a promising throw was spoiled by the quick work.

The teams lined up as follows:

HOPE Y. M. A.		ALIS A. A.
Dilks	right forward	Robison
Whitley	left forward	Kleb, Long
Porter	centre	Chandor, Kleb
McCombe	right guard	Long, Smith
Porter	left guard	Moraller

Score—Hope Y. M. A., 25; Alis A. A., 20. Goals from the field—Dilks (6), Whitley (3), Porter, Robison (2), Long (2), Kleb, Smith. Goals on fouls—Whitley (3), McCombe (2), Kleb, Long, Smith (2). Fouls—Hope Y. M. A., 10; Alis A. A., 10. Referee—Harry Fuller, Dunellen—S. M. Joseph and Charles B. Morse. Timekeepers—Fred Wharton and Harry Canning. Scorer—Herbert Monroe.

TIN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Sokol, of Duer Street, Celebrated An Anniversary.

Thursday was the tenth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Sokol, of Duer street, they had a pleasant reunion of old friends which was somewhat of a surprise to the host, it being supplemented by the usual contribution of tinware which the occasion demanded. Among those present were Mrs. E. A. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. VanNest, Mr. and Mrs. James Cherrie, Miss Etta Northrup, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lewis, of Brooklyn, Benjamin Lavere and John Nagle.

After a banquet served by the hostess, Miss Smith and Benjamin Lavere entertained with choice selections of music, short stories and recitations. The entertainment was a most enjoyable one.

John O'Connor has taken up his residence in the house vacated by Thomas Dorgan.

SHOOTING IN CITY LIMITS

HUNTERS OVERRUN BACK YARDS IN SOUTHERN END OF CITY.

Indiscriminate Use of Shot Guns and Rifles Threaten Residents With Bodily Injury.

Residents of Union avenue in the southern section of the city are up in arms over the indiscriminate shooting which has been occurring in the nearby fields since the hunting season began. Although it is within the municipal limits men and boys roam about at will with shotguns and rifles sending missiles in all directions. Several times residents have had to order hunters out of their back yards, whither they had gone in pursuit of rabbits, and timid women are afraid to venture out of doors.

On Thanksgiving Day the violation of the city ordinance in regard to shooting was continuous and the sharp crack of rifles was incessant. A group of four hunters who were stopping about in the rear of the Murray place near Randolph road, sighted a rabbit and all discharged their weapons at once. The cotton tail was blown to pieces while grains of shot riddled picket fences and nearby barns. The matter has been brought to the attention of the police and future violations may result in arrests.

SOLD PASTURE.

Col. Wilson Disposed of First Property in Twenty-One Years.

Col. John F. Wilson, of North Plainfield, has just sold to Mrs. Mabel Brooks Hooley, also of North Plainfield, ten acres of land in the borough. It fronts on Greenbrook road and is at the corner of Rockview terrace, and extends south to the middle of the brook. This land has been used for years as a pasture for Col. Wilson's Jersey cattle, and it is the first piece of property he has sold in twenty-one years. It is not known what disposition Mrs. Hooley will make of the property. The purchase price was $4,000.

SCORE YEARS WEDDED.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Reighton Celebrated Their Wedding Anniversary.

In honor of the twentieth anniversary of their wedding, Mr. and Mrs. George Reighton, of Park avenue, entertained forty friends at their home, Saturday evening. Guests were present from this city, Bound Brook, Somerville, New Brunswick, Westfield and Elizabeth.

Informal vocal and instrumental solos were frequently given and added enjoyment was derived from phonograph selections given by Wesley Brokaw. Refreshments were served at a late hour. The host and hostess were remembered with numerous gifts.

EXTENDING THE FIRE MAINS

EXTENSION HAS BEEN MADE OUT WEST FRONT STREET.

For Benefit of Pederick-Ayre Co., and Other Manufacturing Interests.

Owing to the rapid growth of the city towards Dunellen it has become necessary to provide for better protection against fire in the extreme west end of the town and when the Pederick-Ayer Company erected its plant its owners protested about the insufficient protection in case of a conflagration.

With the completion of this large plant the water company has been laying large mains to the plant and yesterday a new fire hydrant was placed in position at the corner of West Front street and Rock avenue and another one about 700 feet east of that.

This will enable the West End Company to combat a fire single handed where heretofore it would have been necessary to send in a call for more hose. There is a fire alarm box at the corner of Rock avenue and West Front street but there has never been a water main farther out than DeKalb avenue.

It is probable that the fire mains will be carried out as far as the Industrial Home and also out Park avenue to the rear and front of the new Muhlenberg Hospital and when the mains are laid there new fire hydrants will be installed at once which will give better fire protection to those parts of the town where the growth is going on rapidly.

Are Making Progress.

Although to outside appearances the workmen employed in rebuilding the Babcock building are apparently making little progress, such is not the case. At present the work is all in the interior and back of the structure and much has been accomplished. The contractors are well satisfied with the progress, which is made possible by the favorable weather.

Does Little Good.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company has placed a new pole on West Front street, nearly opposite Leal's School, but unfortunately the lamp thereon is in such a position that it does very little good. It should be turned more toward the street.

JERSEY SHOALS THAT COULD BE RECLAIMED

Two Places Where Valuable Property Could be Made Close to New York.

ONE IN NEWARK BAY

OTHER IN WESTERN SIDE OF NEW YORK BAY, NEAR COMMUNIPAW.

Some Reasons Why This Work Has Not Been Done, Despite the Fact That the Capitalists Realize It is Very Valuable.

The work of enlarging Governor's Island, by which about eighty acres of water, in the form of a triangle, extending southerly to a blunt point, with Governor's Island as the base, are to be bulkheaded and filled in, has revived interest in similar projects in this State. There are two extensive shoals which many people in New Jersey think might be reclaimed, to the great advantage of commercial, manufacturing and other interests. These are the westerly side of New York Bay, from Communipaw to Constable Hook, and the westerly side of Newark Bay, from the government dike near the mouth of the Passaic river to the Singer works at Elizabethport.

This area, of four and a quarter miles in length by two miles in width, comprising about 5,500 acres, is a shoal having an average depth of not more than six feet. These waters are of no present use except for the anchorage of light draft boats, and there can be no development of commercial and navigation interests under existing conditions except at enormous expense. The only commercial use that has been made of this area within the last forty years is that of a small tract, about 600 feet in width, owned and operated by the National Storage Company. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company is now engaged in filling in a considerable tract of land at Greenville, and the New Jersey Central is doing some filling in at its terminus.

It is only by dredging and filling in that these lands under water can be improved, and the government has made this work burdensome and costly by refusing to extend out to a reasonable distance the solid filling line. It placed back the line for solid filling fixed by the New Jersey riparian commissioners about 2,000 feet, thus making it necessary to dredge through this space on the way out to navigable water. The present Secretary of War, Elihu Root, having had his attention called to the matter, has restored the riparian commissioners' line, and improvements are now being made out to that line. But even this leaves a space of nearly a mile to be dredged through before deep water can be reached. The New York Harbor Line Board opposed the proposition to fill in more of this area, on the ground that it would dangerously diminish the "tidal prism," the reason which it seems to have lost sight of at Governor's Island.

The situation in Newark Bay is somewhat similar. On the westerly side of the bay, extending from the mouth of the Passaic River to the Arthur Kill, is a mud flat, about 3,000 feet in width, a very large part of it bare at low water. It is an almost insuperable barrier to the commercial development of the western shore of the bay. If this flat were reclaimed, bulkheaded and filled in out to navigable water, there is no reason why this shore should not be as desirable for manufacturing and other business purposes as the shore of the Arthur Kill.

As a matter of fact, several great capitalists, business men and corporations stand ready to make great improvements there whenever the government permits this mud flat to be reclaimed. The character of the upland is the same as that on the kill, and the Newark Bay shore has the advantage of proximity to New York.

It also has better railroad facilities. The objections made by the Harbor Line Board to the extension of the solid filling line along this shore seem absurd to those familiar with the situation. They urged that Newark Bay would in the end be reduced to one-third its original proportions if the desired authority were given, and were also asked and granted for the easterly shore. As even this would still leave Newark Bay 600 feet wider than the Hudson River at Weehawken, and 1,000 feet wider than the East River, the obvious and conclusive answer is, What of it? The Harbor Line Board also objected that "The beauty and advantages of the bay and picturesqueness of the bounding shores will be destroyed." These picturesque bounding shores consist of two or three miles of salt marsh. Capital and enterprise are waiting to develop this region, and they cannot long be baffled and held in check by such considerations as these.

LAST KENTUCKY DUEL.

Recalled by the Recent Death of One of the Participants in the "Affair of Honor."

The death of Capt. Jo. Desha at Cynthiana a few days ago recalls a duel which was fought in Scott county soon after the close of the civil war—a cold day in March, 1866—in which Capt. Desha and Lieut. Kimbrough, of Cynthiana, were the participants, reports the Louisville Herald-Democrat. Capt. Desha had served in the confederate army and Lieut. Kimbrough was in the federal service. The duel was fought on the line dividing Fayette and Scott counties, on the James K. Duke farm. Lieut. Kimbrough was the challenging party. Two shots were exchanged. At the second shot Kimbrough was shot through the upper part of the thigh, the ball passing through the body. He recovered from the wound, but always limped afterward. He died a few years ago in Texas. At the time of the duel Capt. Desha's left arm was useless in consequence of a serious wound received during the war.

Desha and Kimbrough were neighbor boys and schoolmates, and the trouble began between them when at school. It was renewed after the war, the duel resulting. Maj. Harvey McDowell, of Cynthiana, was Desha's second, and Maj. Long acted for Kimbrough. Dr. Benedict Keene, then a prominent physician of Georgetown, was surgeon to the latter. The duel was witnessed by Warren Smith and George W. Downing, of Georgetown. This was probably the last duel ever fought in Kentucky.

LIGHTING FOR PICTURES.

A London Scientist Pronounces the Incandescent Mantel the Best for the Purpose.

"What mode of lighting is least injurious to pictures? This question, which concerns not merely public art galleries, but also private collections, has been experimentally examined by Prof. Percy Frankland, F. R. S., of Mason college, Birmingham. His tests were applied to electric arc lamps and incandescent gas lights, and his decision, to the surprise of the electricians, is in favor of the incandescent mantle, says a London paper.

It is charged against the arc lamp that it generates a small quantity of ozone and nitrogen oxide; but the gas-burning mantle gives off carbon dioxide, and to some extent sulphur compounds, however perfect the combustion. The very best mantle light will blacken a ceiling. No combustion of gas, where the products of combustion mix with the air, can be otherwise than deleterious either to man or picture. If the burning is within a chimney and the fumes are led out into the open, the gas mantle is perfect; otherwise its products are and must be poisonous, only diminished in mischief by the amount of ventilation.

DEATH-ROLL OF THE ALPS.

Over Three Hundred Lives Have Been Lost in Last Ten Years in Perilous Ascent.

Recent fatal accidents to Alpine climbers recall the gloomy fact that in the last ten years 275 accidents, involving 301 deaths, have occurred to people in the Swiss Alps. Of these every death recorded between 3,000 and 4,000 persons make the journey in safety.

The eastern Alps account for fully half the accidents; the central Alps, including Switzerland, claiming 57 per cent, and the western Alps the remainder. Germany and Austria have paid the heaviest toll in lives, 190 deaths having occurred as the result of the expeditions; the Swiss come next with 48, Italians follow in order, with 23, and England with 18. Seven women are numbered among the victims, not a surprisingly large number, considering how many women risk the climbs nowadays. Over 70 guides and close upon 20 porters have sacrificed their lives in ministering to the pleasures of those who braved the perils of the mountains.

EMANCIPATION OF THE HORSE.

Introduction of Electricity Has Lightened the Animal's Burden But Not Eradicated Him.

Although the prediction freely made a few years ago that the development of electric traction would quickly drive horses from the field of labor have not been fulfilled, yet the Electrical Review cites statistics to prove that the disappearance of the horse is actually taking place, although so slowly as not to attract much attention. In Paris the number of horses fell off about six per cent between 1901 and 1902. In London the decrease in the same time was four per cent. In the last 20 years Vienna and St. Petersburg a similar falling off is shown by the census of horses. In New York it is estimated that the number of horses has decreased 33 per cent in the last 20 years. But although horses may be relieved of the burden of hard labor, it is not likely that man will ever banish his ancient friend and servant wholly from the circle of his pleasures.

Demand Still Continues.

In spite of the fact that the typewriter has displaced the pen in many business offices the demand for pens and pencils still continues. During the year covered by the census report, one gold pen, ten steel pens and 15 lead pencils were made in the United States for each family of five persons.

Sleeping After Eating.

Sleeping after eating is condemned by a German physician who has shown experimentally that stomach movements are retarded and acidity is induced.

Bucking against a team much its superior in weight resulted in defeat for teh I. C. T. eleven when it played the Company C men, of Elizabeth, at that place, Saturday afternoon. The Plainfielders failed to get a touchdown while their opponents rolled up a score of 17.

Lack of signals greatly hampered the I. C. T.'s as the team had a number of new players. The county seat people were deficient in tricks but made up for it by strength. LAMP STARTED BARN BLAZE

EXPLODED IN HAY LOFT WITH QUITE SERIOUS RESULTS.

Burned Top of Barn, But Fire Department Prevented Spread of the Flames.

An exploding lamp in the loft of a barn in the rear of 514 Watchung avenue, set fire to the structure, shortly before 6:30, Saturday evening. Prompt response by the firemen to an alarm from box No. 25 saved it from total destruction and also the barn of John B. Dumont, less than two feet away. The damage is conservatively estimated at $150, covered by insurance.

The property is owned by Mrs. F. A. Miller, of Scotch Plains, and is occupied by William French. His son was in the upper part of the barn throwing down hay for the one horse stabled there, when his lantern suddenly exploded, starting a fire in several directions. He made an attempt to stamp out the flames but failing hurried to the street and gave the alarm. But little of anything of value was in the structure, and nothing was destroyed beyond a small amount of hay and the upper part of the barn.

FUTURE FOR ASBURY PARK

Transfer of Beach Rights to City Means Some Important Changes For the Resort.

HOW IT WAS FOUNDED

Asbury Park Expects to Own the Beach, Sewers and Other Property Before the New Year Begins—A Remarkable Bargain —Story of the Transfer.

Asbury Park expects to own its picturesque beach front before the new year dawns, and the visitors to this resort next summer will promenade on what is expected to be the finest walk in the world.

The beach is now owned by the founder, James A. Bradley, the New York manufacturer, but he has offered to dispose of it, together with other valuable property, for the "bargain sale" price of $150,000, a trifle less than one-sixth its actual value. The aldermen realize that the offer is a liberal one, but they also realize that Mr. Bradley is a generous man, and they want him to throw in a park or two and his rights in Deal, Sunset and Wesley lakes before they close the bargain. The "Founder," it is believed, will consent to the proposition.

Asbury Park was discovered, founded, developed and nurtured by Mr. Bradley. It was a "wilderness and barren sand waste" in 1871, when the property was bought by him for $30,000. It was he who purchased the first lot ever sold in Ocean Grove, and when he came down to that embryo campmeeting resort to inspect his new property he was struck with the beauty of the property adjoining Ocean Grove on the north, and he purchased it.

Mr. Bradley was in poor health at the time, but he went there, had his possessions surveyed, acted as his own supervisor, worked hard getting his new town in shape for the inhabitants, who soon began to pour in, and the tasks he performed in the sea air soon restored his health.

The new resort was named in honor of Bishop Francis Asbury, the pioneer of Methodism in American. This name was chosen partly as a compliment to Ocean Grove, and partly because Mr. Bradley was a local preacher in the Methodist church. It was the first "made to order" resort on the Atlantic coast, for Mr. Bradley insisted that the streets should be uniform and wide, and that there should be numerous parks and squares for the thousands who he predicted would flock to the place. Then, again, he decreed that the town he discovered and built should be free from the curse of liquor saloons, and every deed contains a clause that the property shall revert to the original proprietor in case the purchaser permits liquor to be sold on the premises.

To this day there are no licensed saloons in Asbury Park, or, in fact, within one mile of Wesley Lake, which divides Asbury Park from Ocean Grove. Liquor is sold in the town, but surreptitiously, and Mr. Bradley has spent thousands of dollars in the last thirty years in prosecuting those who violate the anti-liquor selling laws.

The resort prospered far more than even the "Founder" had dreamed. Because of its prohibition leanings and the straight laced rules governing the beach it was ridiculed by the press, but despite adverse criticisms the resort continued to flourish, until now the winter population of the city and the adjacent towns numbers over 30,000, and in summer Asbury Park alone contains 50,000 persons.

Mr. Bradley has made considerable money out of his investment, but not one-tenth of what it is said less conscientious speculators would have made. Ten years ago he insisted that the city should own the beach, and he offered to sell it to the municipality for $150,000. Enabling acts were passed by the Legislature, but obstacles arose from time to time to prevent the transfer from being made, so the matter has hung fire.

Recently, however, a lawyer raised the point that Mr. Bradley, when he plotted the town, laid the beach front out as a public park, and that the original map in file in the County Clerk's office at Freehold shows this to be the fact. When this discovery was made the Board of Trade, Hotel Keepers' Association and the Board

HARD TASK TO GET PARK BOWLING TEAM

Plenty of Material, But Members Don't Care to Go to Out-of-Town Games.

ROLL THIS EVENING.

PARKS ROLL SERIES OF THREE WITH CRANFORD CASINO.

Difficult Task Which Confronts Captain W. R. Faber—There is Material Enough in Park Club for a Very Strong Team.

Another series of games in The Daily Press Bowling League will be rolled on the Park Club alleys this evening. On the result of these games largely depends the Park's future in the league. It is generally conceded that the fight lies between the veteran teams of the Westfield Club and the Roselle Casino. The latter has scored two wins for the trophy while Westfield won last year and now holds the cup. The Park Club and the Cranford Casino have been content to fight it out to see which will have to fall into last place. The Parks and Cranfords meet tomorrow night and the series may decide which is going to take the last place.

Never has the Park Club entered the bowling season so badly handicapped as this one. There are good bowlers in the club but Captain William R. Faber has had the greatest kind of trouble in getting them out to take part in league contests. They do not mind rolling games in the local alleys but it has been a difficult thing for Mr. Faebr to get material for the team for out-of-town games. It had been hoped that some of the younger members, who were showing promising form in practice would turn out regularly and train for the league contests. While several of them did go to Westfield with the team for the opening games in the league, they were lacking in practice and did not roll a steady game.

Unless the members of the club give Captain Faber better support, his position will be a very hard one and the reputation of Plainfield's bowlers, once so high, will take a big step downward. With the old bowlers and some of the new talent, there is material for an excellent team to represent the Park Club in the league.

SAID GOOD-BYE.

Miss Josephine Butcher's Friends Dropped in on Eve of Her Departure for Florida.

Formal and informal farewells were given in unceasing numbers Tuesday to Miss Josephine Butcher, of West Fourth street, who is to take her departure, this evening, for a winter's sojourn in Tampa, Fla. Twenty-four friends from this city, New York, Brooklyn and Oswego, N. Y., called unexpectedly at her home and at once made her hostess of the party.

Accepting the position she proved more than equal to the occasion and a delightful time was had in playing time honored games with informal features. Recitations were given by Miss Josephine Murphy; David Mack and Arthur Ladew sang acceptable duets and the latter rendered a pleasing solo, "After All."

At midnight an elaborate collation was served and at its conclusion Miss Butcher was over and again bidden God speed on her trip. She will not return to this city until late in the spring.

ITS COLD THERE.

Willard Martin Railroading it in Arkansas Where It is Zero.

Plainfield people, who have been moving about the past few days all bundled up and exchanging "cold, aint it?" salutes, will shiver to hear that a Plainfielder is daily experiencing weather where the thermometer is below zero almost continuously. He is Willard Martin who is now engaged in railroad work in Arkansas. Although a Jersey boy, he is standing it with the ease of a veteran and writes that he expects to experience colder weather yet before the winter is over.

Contractors Assign.

Charles Allen and Charles Banta, of Cranford, partners in business under the firm name of C. Allen & Company, made an assignment yesterday to John P. Owens, of this city. They conducted a contracting and building business throughout the county. Francis J. Blatz, of this city, is counsel in the matter.

WANT RECEIVER.

Action of the Directors of Columbia Realty Company to Protect the Interest of All Concerned.

The Columbia Realty Company, of Trenton, Tuesday, through its attorney, Hon. A. A. Clark, applied on the petition of the directors of the company, who owned 733 shares of the company out of 1,016 shares, to Vice Chancellor Reed for a receiver, this action being caused by Aaron Turnstall and Chris. Carthidge, of Trenton, who owned 104 shares, and who recently applied to the court to have appraisers appointed to appraise the stock of the company.

As the appraisers might appraise the stock of the company as valuable it would be a judgment against the property of the company and the directors deemed it the proper thing to ask the protection of the court to protect the interest of all creditors and stockholders alike. The floating indebtedness is given in the petition as $31,000, with $55,000 in mortgages on improved and unimproved real estate.

The Vice Chancellor granted the Columbia Realty Company an injunction restraining Aaron Turnstall and Chris. Carthidge from appraising the stock and the receiver will be appointed Tuesday, December 16.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL OFFICERS

Officers and Committees Chosen by Unanimous Vote—Reports Come Later.

The annual meeting for the election of officers of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school was held last Tuesday in the parlors of the church. Despite the cold weather, there was a good attendance of offices and teachers and much interest was taken in the various matters considered.

The officers and committees selected are as follows:

Superintendent, F. E. Smith; assistant superintendent, Horace J. Martin; superintendent of the primary department, Mrs. M. Tier; superintendent of the home department, Mrs. George Saums; treasurer, H. E. Gayle; secretary, Elias H. Bird; assistant secretary, Chauncey F. Colthar; librarian, H. C. VanEmburgh; assistant librarians, J. A. Love, Will F. Williams, Fred Dunavan and Charles Zimmer; executive committee, William F. Oliver, chairman; Miss Mabel Wilson, Mrs. Harry S. Potter; librarian committee, Mrs. L. R. Schofield, chairman; Miss Anna Searing, Miss Helen Bogart; music committee, Miss Lillian A. Force, chairman; Miss May Randolph, Mrs. George W. Saums, Elmer Wheeler and Horace J. Martin; teachers committee, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, chairman; Robert Clark, Jr., and Miss Ella C. Benedict.

As the fiscal year does not end at this time the various reports were not presented. In connection with the election of officers, several matters pertaining to the interest and welfare of the school were discussed. The school was considered to be in excellent condition spiritually, financially and otherwise and in the selection of officers there was a perfect unanimity in the choice.

FAMILY TO DECIDE.

Bequests of Charles Hyde to Charity Are to be Left to the Heirs to Determine.

That in the future there may be no complications arising from the distribution of $100,000 for charity purposes, left in the will of the late Charles Hyde, Chancellor Magie has given a decision that the $100,000 set apart in the will for charity and religious purposes shall go to the family, they to dispose of it as they see fit, and that whatever they do will be in harmony with the purpose of the will.

According to the will the money is to be spent within five years after the making of the instrument, and as the time has arrived for some consideration of the subject, it was thought wise to have the matter settled in a legal manner. Otherwise a future generation of heirs might have it in their power to dispute the definition of charitable and religious purposes as interpreted by the family, thus causing much confusion.

Spelling Bee.

The spelling bee held Monday at the North Plainfield High School, between the classes taught by Miss Green and Miss Weller, was won by Miss Green's class.

Principal Ira W. Travell, of the City High School, returned yesterday from a visit to Williams College and Mt. Holyoke College.

LINDEN RACE TRACK IS SOLD AT AUCTION

The Once Famous Haunt of Gamblers, Near Elizabeth, Was Sold for $8,475.

OR ABOUT $75 AN ACRE

WILL BE USED AS FACTORY SITES OR CUT UP INTO BUILDING LOTS.

Sold at Auction to Melville R. VanKeuren, of Jersey City—It Recalls the Reign and Final Defeat of the Race Track Men.

Elizabeth, December 10—Memories of the days in 1893 when racing men controlled the Legislature and passed their infamous bills, were revived, less week, through the sale of the old Linden track, near this city.

It is one of the courses that proved a saint to the sinners ten years ago but of late, like the Guttenberg in North Hudson, the Clifton near Passaic, the Monmouth Park near Long Branch and the Gloucester track below Camden, it has proven a white elephant. Since the track gamblers were driven out of the State and the Metropolitan sports sought elsewhere for their pleasure, it has remained in disuse.

Wednesday it came to the inevitable auctioneer's hammer and was knocked down to Melville R. VanKeuren, of Jersey City, for $8,475, or about $75 an acre. The purchaser intends to sell it for factory sites as it is near the Pennsylvania Railroad or else cut it up into private building lots. It may ultimately become part of this city as it is nearly within the limits.

In its best days the Linden track drew thousands of the gambling fraternity and it was regarded as one of the best known for miles around New York. Its supporters did practically as they pleased in the way of law violation as the then Democratic Legislature was under their control. Wishing to secure additional privileges in 1893 resulted in their undoing, as the jamming through of the "track track" bill in 1893 led to their being driven from the State. This measure was put through under the direction of Speaker "Tom" Flynn, and Wm. J. Thompson, known as the "Duke of Gloucester." With their removal the Democrats were driven from power in the State and have remained so ever since.

In 1894, the race track act of 1892 was repealed by the Republicans and subsequently a constitutional amendment against race track gambling was adopted. That sounded the death knell of the big courses and one after another they settled up affairs and went out of business. The Linden track was owned by the Linden Blood Horse Association.

EUCHRE AT THE PARK CLUB

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR AT THAT POPULAR CLUB.

Fourteen Tables Did Not Provide for All Who Assembled—The Prize Winners.

The members of the Park Club, their wives, sisters and friends, enjoyed one of those affairs last Tuesday, for which the club has become famous. It was a euchre party and, as on previous occasions, there was a large turnout, the club being taxed to the limit by the guests. While there were fourteen tables, they but partially represented the number present. In all there were seventy-five guests.

Although the euchre was the chief attraction, the social features were enjoyed fully as much, and it was nearly 12 o'clock when the affair terminated. Mrs. Leslie M. Daniel was presented with the first prize for the women, while Miss Chapman received the second prize. For the men, George T. Rogers won first prize and Arthur Kenworthy the second.

After play refreshments were served and the guests enjoyed a social time. The affair was given under the direction of the entertainment committee, Mr. and Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. McGee, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Saunders and C. E. Murray.

Tea for Miss Scott.

Mrs. William H. Murray, of Watchung avenue, will give a tea, Saturday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock, for Miss Bessie Scott, the fiance of Dexter O. Tiffany. Miss Scott is the daughter of the late Col. Julian Scott.

VETERANS ELECT.

Officers Chosen at the Meeting of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., Held Tuesday Evening.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., met last Tuesday in regular session for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year. There was a large attendance of members and considerable interest was taken in the selection of the following officers:

Commander, Hector O. Smith; senior vice commander, Andrew Cox; junior vice commander, Edward Vanderveer; quartermaster, John R. Naylor; surgeon, Israel Compton; chaplain, M. C. Dobbins; officer of the day, Henry C. Drake; officer of the guard, Albert G. Perry; trustees, William C. Smith, M. C. Dobbins, William Hand; delegates to Department Encampment, Andrew Cox, William Day; alternates, Francis M. Whitley, Edward Townley.

This comprised the principal business of the evening, although a few other matters were discussed. The installation of officers will take place at the first meeting in January, at which time Department Commander Enos Hand, of Atlantic City, and several members of his staff, will be present.

ELECTRICITY STILL LOOSE

GIVES PYROTECHNIC DISPLAYS AT THE NORTH AVENUE STATION.

The Fence Dividing the Tracks is Frequently Charged and Sparks Fly.

Pyrotechnic displays through the street railway current charging the dividing fence, continue to be a feature at the North Avenue station. Balls of blue flame are frequently racing along and at extreme points the effect is spectacular. Passengers and many people who go there just for the purpose linger for hours to see the sight.

To the depot employes, however, the current is a source of much annoyance and danger. Monday morning a lineman for the Western Union, who was about to pass through the gate, received the full force of a heavy charge and was thrown back on the track. At the time a drill engine was backing down and if it had occurred a short time later he might have met death under the wheels.

The baggage men are also almost afraid to touch any part of the iron framework and it is getting to be a serious problem. The officials of the street railway have been informed of the matter and unless the trouble is remedied action will be taken.

OF EXCEPTIONAL MERIT.

Is Combination of Art and Music at Sacred Recital "Immanuel."

The first rendition of the new illustrated sacred recital, "Immanuel," at the Y. M. C. A. Hall this evening is a programme of exceptional merit to every lover of art and music. The beautiful dissolving views, accompanied as they are by the world's famous composers, present a reality to music and a most vivid impression on the life of Christ.

The evening's programme introduces to the Plainfield people a soprano who is regarded a one of the leading soloists of New York City. The New York Evening Telegram speaks as follows of Miss Holley: "Miss Blanca Holley, a leading soprano of this city, who has been engaged for the New England May festival at New Haven, Conn., is a graduate from the Utica Conservatory of Music and has a pure soprano voice highly trained. Her appearance at the Lotus Club recently was in the nature of an ovation. Her singing of an aria from 'Tannhauser' revealed much dramatic power, and her interpretation of the Arietta Valse from 'Romeo E Guiletta,' a most difficult selection, has been pronounced perfect. Miss Holley is a relative of Marietta Holley, who has written much as 'Josiah Allen's Wife.'"

CAMERA CLUB OFFICERS.

A New Set Has Just Been Elected to Office.

Officers have been elected by the Plainfield Camera Club as follows: President, Harold Serrell; vice president, J. Harvey Doane; treasurer, H. H. Coward; secretary, Vincent Sokol; trustees, C. E. Murray, Samuel H. Craig, Frank T. Ostrom, Dr. D. C. Adams and Asa F. Randolph. The club expects to take possession of its new rooms in the Babcock building some time during next March.

The arrival of a young son, yesterday, is the cause of much rejoicing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Williams, 175 North avenue.

BIDDEN GUESTS WERE TURNED OUT IN COLD

Now Warrants Are Out for the Uninvited Ones Who 'Tis Said Took Possession.

HAD A HIGH OLD TIME

JACOB WERTS, OF SOUTH STIRLING, TELLS A SORRY TALE.

How the Burnetts Paid An Unrequested Visit and Took Possession of Linke's Hotel, of Which Werts Was in Charge.

There was company at Linke's hotel at South Stirling Saturday evening. Some of the guests were invited and two were not. Warrants have since been issued by Justice D. D. Smalley, of North Plainfield, for Peter Burnett, of South Stirling, and Henry Burnett, of Stirling, for their participation in the uninvited visit. According to the story told by aged Jacob Werts, who is in charge of Linke's establishment, the Burnetts caused more trouble in a few minutes than all the law abiding citizens of that village in twenty years.

Werts and a middle-aged couple from Smalleytown were passing a quiet and highly respectable evening together when there came a knock at the door. It was the Burnetts. According to report, they had been having strenuous times over in Stirling where a local constable attempted to eject them from a saloon and had been roughly handled for his pains. Werts says the Burnetts demanded admission and, when it was denied them, took it upon themselves to come in anyhow. Werts and his invited guests were carted out-of-doors where they had a grandstand view of the operations that followed.

Werts says that the unbidden ones helped themselves to liquid refreshment, tossed the stove around the room by way of exercise and then tied bow knots in his arms when he objected to the demolishing of the property under his charge. After the novelty of this pleasure had passed, the brothers departed, leaving Werts and his guests to try to repair damages.

A journey was made to Plainfield as soon as the storm would permit and warrants sworn out against the Burnetts. Constable Pangborn was give them to serve but hasn't found the men yet. It is reported that they are sojourning in Morris county.

HORSESHOERS BUSY.

Demand to Have Horses Sharp Shod Has Made Lots of Business.

Some of the horse shoers in the borough, as well as in this city, have been taken by surprise by the cold spell which has visited this section and consequently there has been a great demand for practical horseshoers for the past few days.

Frank Hand, of Somerset street, has employed two extra hands and during the past five days he says he has put shoes on 450 horses. Horace J. Martin, of Somerset street, has also had to employ extra hands and over 300 horses have been sharp shod at his place during the cold season.

Other blacksmiths have been doing a rushing business and with the forecast of more cold weather it seems probable that the good times and prosperity for the blacksmith will come in a week or two.

REPORTS OF FAIR.

Made at Meeting of Ladies' Aid Society of Park Ave. Baptist Church.

Reports of the proceeds of the recent fair and other church matters were discussed Tuesday afternoon at the meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, which was held at the home of the society's treasurer, Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson, at 207 East Seventh street. The attendance at the meeting was large and the meeting was an interesting one.

Among the subjects which came up for discussion was the matter of holding a tea in the near future. Some of the members were in favor of holding a sociable after the holidays and it is probable that some kind of an entertainment will be arranged.

Sold Under Mortgage.

William N. Pangborn, acting as bailiff for Charles Keller, of the borough, sold at Graceley's Manhattan Hotel, Monday, goods belonging to Harry Johns under a chattel mortgage. They were bought in by Frank Mobus. Counsellor F. J. Blatz represented Keller.

DEATH CAME AS MR. PEET SLEPT

Founder of Famous Clothing House Passed Away at His Putnam Avenue Home.

FOUND IN THE MORNING

Had Retired Last Evening Apparently in the Best of Health—Recently Retired From Active Business—was Sixty-Three Years of Age—Was a Widower.

Death overtook Charles B. Peet as he lay sleeping in his comfortable home on Putnam avenue yesterday a.m. Late in the morning when the maid called him and received no reply from within, an investigation was made with the result that the body of the well-known business man was found lying on the bed in a natural position showing that death had come as quickly as it was painless. Dr. Murray was called and he pronounced the cause of the death as heart failure and that the man had been dead only a short time before he was found.

Charles B. Peet was a retired member of the clothing firm of Rogers, Peet & Company, of New York, and was the founder of that very extensive business. He was sixty-three years of age and was a widower. He had no children. He leaves three brothers, George, Creighton and Henry, all of whom are prominent professional men, and are connected with the firm of Rogers, Peet & Company, of New York. He still retained an interest in the business.

Last evening Mr. Peet was apparently as well as ever but retired early. He directed that he be called early this morning. This morning the maid went to his door and rapped gently, but receiving no response she notified the rest of the household and an entrance to the room was gained through another way. The inanimate form of the man was found lying upon the bed, apparently asleep but on closer inspection it was found that the man was dead.

Besides being the founder of the well-known clothing firm Mr. Peet was, at the time of his death the vice president of the United States Casualty Company and was also a member of the Board of Governors of the Manhattan Club. He was a member of the New York Athletic Club, and was very well-known in many of the clubs in New York.

He was the son of Rev. Edwin Wright Peet, who built St. Paul's church in Rahway. The deceased has been very active in business all his life and started in a small way in the clothing business in New York but gradually opened larger stores until a few years ago he retired from active business.

The arrangements for the funeral have not been fully completed yet.

INJURED IN FALL.

Herbert Hetfield Slipped on Ice and Ruptured Two Blood Vessels.

Former Councilman Walter L. Hetfield received word, yesterday, from his son, Herbert Hetfield, who is in Worcester, Mass., that he is just recovering from the effects of a severe accident sustained some time ago. He was stepping down a porch step when he slipped on the ice, causing a rupture of two blood vessels in the head. He was in a precarious condition for a short time and is still confined to his bed.

Plans for Christmas Dinner.

A meeting to discuss the matter of providing a Christmas dinner for over fifty poor boys of this city will be held Saturday afternoon, at the Y. M. C. A., by the Woman's Auxiliary Society of that institution. It is planned to give an entertainment to the boys after the dinner and thus make Christmas a joyous occasion to many youngsters in this city to whom Christmas exists in name only.

After More Pay.

There is a movement in this city at present to form a horseshoers' union, the object of organizing being to increase the wages of floormen to $2.50 and the firemen to $2 per day. The master horseshoers already have a protective association and the journeymen are now anxious to organize.

CHEESE IS HEALTHY,

Contains Double the Nutriment of the Choicest Beef.

United States the Greatest Cheese-Making Country in the World—New York and Wisconsin at the Head.

[Special Milwaukee (Wis.) Letter.]

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that cheese is much more nutritious than meat, and less expensive, much less of it, per capita, is used in this country than in England, where the latter is not so plentiful. America is the greatest cheese-making country in the world, yet the average consumption for each person is three pounds, while in England it is 18 pounds. Our great cheese-manufacturing centers are in Wisconsin and New York, each of which has about 4,000 dairies. There are about 1,000 others generally distributed over the country. Wisconsin only manufactures about one-half as much cheese as New York, but the production increased from 100,000,000 pounds (all made by farmers) in 1859, to 1,492,609,143 in 1890, 97 per cent. of which came from dairies. Of this latter, 37,000,000 pounds was sent to Great Britain.

From one gallon of milk a pound of cheese can be made, containing as much fat as three pounds of beef and as much protein as two pounds. The casein and butter fat contained in this food are very nutritious. It not only furnishes material for the system but also produces heat and energy. Casein is a valuable protein composed of hydrogen, nitrogen, carbon and sulphur. If sugar and bread be eaten with cheese, the combination furnishes a most valuable meal, but the food will be found hard to digest unless one exercises vigorously. It is by some considered advisable to mix a very small quantity of bicarbonate of potash with cheese when it is eaten, as an alkali assists in rendering casein soluble.

In manufacturing cheese, fresh milk is first poured into a vat and left until the cream rises to the top. If "skim milk" cheese is to be made, the cream is removed. If whole milk cheese, it is left, and if cream cheese, more cream is added. The milk is now heated to a temperature of 90 degrees and left in the vat until it is sour enough to add rennet (an extract made from the fourth stomach of a sucking calf, an enzyme or bacterial product. As chymosin and pixine, it is found in nature among both animals and plants). This causes the milk to coagulate in about 20 minutes, a quantity of green whey containing a slimy white mass of curds. No scientist has yet been able to discover how the rennet produces this result. The rennet only affects the casein, while acids added change the milk-sugar. After drawing off the whey in order to dry the curds still more, they are cut by a wire framework into half-inch cubes, which begin to shrink immediately. They are now raised to a temperature of 100 degrees and raked around until about one-sixth their original size.

PROF. H. W. CONN.
(Discoverer of Bacillus 41, Which Has Revolutionized Cheese Making.)

when they gradually form themselves into a compact mass, which is now cut up into pieces several inches square. When these become fibrous and oily, they are placed in a mill and ground, then into cylinders lined with cheese-cloth and pressed for about 20 hours until solid. The cheeses are then placed in a curing-house where they remain for several months, or until they acquire the desired ripeness and flavor. This process as described may seem very simple, but the dairymen do not find it so, for they have constantly to guard against hostile bacteria which may assail the material from the time it is poured into the vat as milk until it is a matured cheese. While trying to cope with these, he must exercise great care in order that friendly germs (without whose services he could have no good cheese) may remain uninjured.

In 1893, Prof. H. W. Conn secured a can of milk from Uruguay which contained a bacterium previously unknown to science, and which has proved to be of inestimable value to cheese manufacturers. This is a fighter, killing harmful bacteria while ripening butter, cheese and cream. It is the famous bacterium "B. 41." of which pure cultures are now constantly being made and used all over the country. It is hard to imagine the advantage this discovery has proved to the cheese manufacturer. All sorts of experiments had been made to get rid of dangerous germs. Heating the milk was found unsatisfactory, as it also hard to raise the temperature of a large tankful evenly. Prof. Conn demonstrated that one cubic inch of milk may contain 500,000,000 bacteria. They are in the milk when it comes from the cow, they come from the atmosphere, the hands and clothing of the milkmen, the hay, the pans and buckets, everywhere. They multiply with great rapidity in the warm milk. Various species may change the milk to a variety of different colors; some render it bitter, some strong. They sometimes cause a cheese to swell, and when cut it is seen to be full of bubbles. Sometimes red or blue mold is found in great patches, rendering it unfit for food, occasioning a dead loss. If salicylic acid be added to kill these small enemies, the germs that are necessary to proper cheesemaking are destroyed also. Hence the value of the discovery of "B. 41."

Wisconsin supplies nearly all our southern trade because, being fine in texture, its cheese stands the heat better than that made in New York, which supplies the export trade. A few years ago there was a large business done in "filled cheese," which is an adulteration, harmless and profitable had it not been represented as the genuine article, causing the government to legislate against it. The process of its manufacture consisted in using a "skim milk" cheese as a base and injecting into it with a steam jet some fat to take the place of butter. Oleomargarine was first used, then lard was found satisfactory.

The village of Cheddar, Somersetshire, England, gives its name to a cheese that has been noted for over 300 years. This is imitated all over the world, a very fine quality being made in Wisconsin. The Irregular, which is the highest price and most imitated is the Stilton, named after a town in Leicestershire, England. The long, cylindrical cakes weigh about 12 pounds, each having an irregular, whitish rind, inside it is white and mellow, and traversed by bluish veins. It requires about six months to properly ripen. Cottenham resembles Stilton cheese, but is richer in flavor, more creamy and more strongly marked. Gloucester cheese and Dunlop cheese, made in Scotland, are said to be the best for toasting purposes in the world. About 25 miles from Paris the famous Brie cheese is manufactured. They are inch in thickness, and 12 inches in diameter. After being placed in the curing room it is turned daily until it is coated first with a white mold, then a blue, and finally a red mold. Millions of these are sold in Paris yearly. At Calvados, Normandy, the noted Camembert cheese is made. The cakes are globe-shaped, covered first with white, then with blue mold. This is the most popular French cheese after Brie. Neufchatel, a blue-veined cheese, is made at the town of the same name from goats' or ewes' milk, sometimes from cows' milk. It is cured in underground caverns and should not be eaten until well-decayed, when the flavor is excellent. Parmesan cheese, manufactured at Parma, northern Italy, is carefully prepared from the skimmed milk of cows kept in stalls at all seasons. It is generally colored annatto with saffron, and requires three years to ripen. Probably no cheese more persistently makes its presence known than that made at Limburg, Germany. The one pound, square, flat cakes are all covered with oiled paper after becoming decomposed. The flavor is considered by many to be very appetizing, and he who carries a piece of Limburger cheese in his pocket may be nearly sure of a crowded street car. EDWARD JULIAN.

Facts About Pins.

Pins cost only a trifle nowadays, where once they were very expensive. In 1900 the 75,000,000 people in the United States used 66,000,000 gross of common pins, which is equal to 9,500,000,000 pins, or an average of about 126 pins for every man, woman and child in the country. This is the highest average reached anywhere in the use of pins. Ten years ago we used only about 72 pins each. The total number of pins manufactured in the United States during 1890, the census year, was 68,889,260 gross. There are 42 factories in all, with 2,333 employes. The business has grown rapidly during the last 20 years, for although there were 40 factories in 1880, they produced only half as much, employed only about half the capital and only 1,077 hands. —American Exporter.

Japanese Etiquette.

At a Japanese banquet it is considered a compliment to exchange cups with a friend.

A SUCCESSFUL RUSE.

BY WILLIAM F. BROWN.

"Jack," observed the Colonel, letting his hand hover irresolutely over the cheese board, "has it ever occurred to you that it would be an extremely nice arrangement if those two children of ours would fall in love with each other? You and I are getting along in years—eh, old friend?—and I'd like to see Lila settled in a home of her own before the order comes for taps. There is no one in the world I would rather give my daughter to than Billie; the boy is white clear through—he could scarcely be anything different, thought, and his fathers' son. I can't imagine why they don't," continued the Colonel, argumentatively; "they like each other all right, and are always together—riding, playing golf or something—but never a thought of building a nest on their own. Just listen to that, will you?" he broke off.

Through the library doorway came the bitter notes of a rollicking duet, sung by two happy, care-free young voices. A tender smile blossomed on Lawyer Reed's clean-shaven lips. "Bless their hearts!" he said, softly. "Nothing would give me greater satisfaction or happiness, Phil, than to have what you mentioned come to pass. I've had the same thought myself, and hinted at something of the same kind to Billie—once."

"Well?" said Colonel Bradlee, tentatively.

"If the young rascal laughed at me; said the idea was absurd; that while Lila and he were the best of chums, and all that, there was no thought of any nonsense of that sort between them. The little beast went on the Lawyer, ruefully, "that I had better stick to chess, and let matchmaking alone."

"Lila appears to be of about the same opinion," remarked the Colonel, dryly. "She called me an old goose to be thinking of such things. I call it flying in the face of Providence," clucking an unexpected onslaught on his queen—"for if ever two people were made for each other, it was those two, and they haven't the sense to see it."

John Reed nodded, then all at once smote his knee softly with his hand. "Phil," he said, lowering his voice, "do you remember that white mule we used to have at headquarters—in '65?"

"Ben Johnson's mule?" replied the Colonel, with a reminiscent grin. "Of course I do. The boys used to say that when Ben wanted that mule to go anywhere he'd head him in the opposite direction, yell 'Git up!' at him, and old Caesar would wheel and run the other way like a deer."

"Young human nature and mule nature are a good similar comparison," remarked the Lawyer, significantly, leaning back in his chair.

Vague comprehension began to dawn in Colonel Bradlee's countenance. "Do you think we might work something of the sort, Jack?" he queried, eagerly. "I'd do most anything to bring it out, short of putting my girl on bread and water—or not kissing her."

John Reed rose to his feet. "Philip Bradlee," he said, in a serious voice, "prepare to have your innermost feelings outraged. I'm going to insult you—for goodness' sake, Phil," he whispered, as he perceived a look of blank astonishment sweep over his friend's face, "don't look like that; it's only a bluff! Play your part man, and don't give me away."

He turned his back-board off the table with a bang. "Colonel Bradlee," he cried loudly, angrily, "this is not the first time I have caught you trying to take an unfair advantage, but it's the last game I'll play with a—a—"

Something choked his speech, but the Colonel rose to the situation like a hero. "Leave the room, you—you—you insulting—er—er—pot hugger!" he wound up, triumphantly.

There was a sudden rush into the library, and a dismayed chorus, "Father!—Colonel Bradlee!—"

"You, too, sir!" yelled the Colonel. "Don't you dare set foot in my house again! As a friend of your father's I [illegible] to [illegible] with the son of John [illegible] shown you! They're a [illegible]

"What if they don't?" replied Billie stoutly. "They ought to be ashamed of themselves, anyway, trying to keep us apart because [illegible] quarreling. I owe them a debt of gratitude for it, though. I've found out how blind I was—and it's given me the right to—"

"Billie!" cried a muffled voice, "somebody'll surely see us!"

"Let 'em!" replied Billie. "Now listen, Mrs. William Reed-to-be—it's no use for us to wait for parental approval, Father and Colonel Bradlee won't as much as bow to each other! Let's take matters into our own hands, and get married right now—this afternoon! Then we can tell 'em, and they can storm as much as they like, and they can't alter anything. Besides, I don't believe they would hold out forever. We'll drive out the back gate, and go down to the church-study on Carver street. I saw the Reverend Tisdale going in when I came over." Billie fumbled in his pocket, and produced a [illegible] document. "I got a special license this morning," he announced, triumphantly.

Lila Bradlee opened her lips to say no—to expostulate—hesitated, and was lost.

The Colonel was setting up the chessmen on the table, unaware of him in the library. "They've gone to the ministers," he gasped. "Didn't that beat all the rapid transit you ever heard of?"

Lawyer Colonel crossed to the buffet, and performed sundry mysterious rites with a decanter and glasses. "To the children's future happiness," he said, solemnly.

Colonel Bradlee's head came [illegible] the familiar threshold, and stared at him in wilderment at the two erstwhile bitter enemies placidly playing chess. "Father," cried Billie's daughter, "we—"

"Howdy do, Billie," remarked the Colonel, rising affably. "Been getting married? Your father just came over to congratulate me." Lawyer Colonel's resonant voice turned husky all at once, and he opened wide his arms. "Come here, girlie," he cried, "it's all right!" and in a second Lila's daughter was resting [illegible] his shoulder and her arms were around his neck.—Farm and Fireside.

The New Woman and Her Progress

IN 1897 Mr. Fred Rekate went from Portland, Ore., to the Klondike to make his fortune. He worked awhile at mining, saved money, then opened a butcher shop in Dawson. In 1899 Mrs. Rekate joined him. Next he sold his shop in Dawson, and he and his wife went into mining. They bought a claim and fitted it with steam machinery. At first Mrs. Rekate cooked and did the housework of the cabin. Then she became so interested in gold digging that she accompanied her husband into the shaft 340 feet underground. She wore bloomers and rubber boots, so that she could work. She learned to run the engine, wash gold and do every part of the regular work of a miner. She became so expert that finally she labored in the mine altogether, hiring a cook and housekeeper at home. Success came to the placky pair, and at length they had $40,000 clear in dust and nuggets. They decided to "go outside," as it is called in the Klondike, and take a rest and visit Mr. Rekate's parents in Germany. Mrs. Rekate departed two weeks before her husband to prepare for the journey. The husband followed with the $40,000, taking passage on the steamer Islander from Skaguay. The ship was wrecked, Mr. Rekate went down in her, and with him went the $40,000, lost forever. With the news of his death appeared a former wife, claiming his estate on behalf of her son. The claim was mostly worked out, but there was some gold in it. The second wife went back in the dead of winter to the Klondike, had an administrator appointed for the property and herself began to work it again for all there was left in it. She knew exactly what to do to the last particular, so she got a considerable amount out of it. Then she made an amicable arrangement with the first wife on account of the boy, gathered up what she had left, a neat sum, and at the beginning of cold weather this year returned to civilization. After a rest she goes back next season to start in over again and find fortune.

The college bred woman is entering into business and showing how it ought to be conducted. Two college women partners, Misses Stevenson and Elliot, established some time since a laboratory kitchen and model bread baking establishment at Cambridge, Mass. They use the new bread mixing machine invented by Mrs. Lydia Coale Sharpless and have demonstrated to their own profit the "economic possibilities of breadmaking as an industry for educated women," which is what they started out to do. Then wheat college girls went into the laundry business in Brookline in 1898. They had six assistants when they began. Now they are running a really artistic laundry and keep sixty persons busy all the time.

Private employment agencies in some of the large cities are swindling women right and left through advertising. They hand a woman to conclude they have employment for her and that she will get it very soon if she pays them a dollar. She pays it, and that is the last of it. The superintendent of the New York state free employment bureau reports that some of these agencies gather in $150 a day.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

A GIRL OF GRIT.

She Went After Possum in a Balloon in Texas.

"It's de tallest pole dat knocks de persimmons," said the old Kentucky colored brother long ago, and Miss Bernice Bardine, a Texas girl of nineteen, has proved the old saw also true in case of one of the most noted of the Lone Star State's products, the pecan. The finest pecans in the world grow in Texas, where many orchards and groves have been planted. Since the invention of the machine to separate nut meat from its troublesome shell the value of the pecan crop has increased.

The pecan tree is a species of hickory and grows very tall, sometimes 150 feet high. Its branches sprangle out slim and bushy, so far from the tree trunk that the entire portion will not bear the weight of even a boy who tries to crawl upon them, and according to that exasperating plan with which nature often tantalizes humanity the finest, largest and fattest pecan nuts grow upon those very limbs which are inaccessible to any creature but a bird or a cat. Bernice Bardine studied for months the problem of how she could get them.

Bernice and her brother last year earned considerable money gathering and selling pecans. The brother is the younger of the two, and Bernice is the brains of the partnership. She was evidently born with the commercial talent. After gathering the nuts last year she laid her plans for a campaign this year which should net her much larger gains. During the winter she matured them.

The first part of her scheme was to learn all that was to be found out in regard to pecan groves and their products on the home hand and the marketing of the crop on the other. She made journeys to see both the owners of the groves and the merchants who bought the crop. She thus learned where the largest product in Texas might be looked for, also where to expect the best prices. That was the first part of the programme.

The next was to buy in advance the crops of the best groves, precisely as the enterprising merchant buys tobacco in the field. She kept her plans to herself likewise, and here she showed the acumen of a great American financier. Her investigations had shown her that pecans were going to sell at a good price this season, and she secured them in advance. In due time buyers from wholesale nut houses in the cities appeared among the pecan grove owners in the Colorado river valley offering 7½ cents a pound for the nuts. They found that the girl Bernice Bardine, scarcely as yet out of short dresses, had bought the product of every pecan orchard in that region. She had actually leased for $100 a grove in which some of the trees bore eight bushels apiece, and the sum total of the yield amounted to nearly $5,000 from this one grove. She had certainly proved herself the tallest pole here.

But one matter vexed her not a little. The finest pecans of all were apparently inaccessible. They were in the tops of trees where the picker dared not climb. The custom has been to brush the nuts off with a thrashing pole as high up as the tree climber could reach. Those beyond him had to be left, and they were the choicest nuts of all, bushels and bushels of them. "I will have those nuts if I have to go after them in a balloon," said Bernice. "They are worth a thousand dollars."

Some of the tallest pecan trees in Texas grow at Granite Shoals, and as a matter of course their tops, which nobody can reach, are every summer full of the choicest nuts. They hung and swayed there before the eyes of Miss Bardine till she could bear the tempting sight no longer. Then this irrepressible Texas girl ordered a hot air balloon to be brought to Granite Shoals. A furnace was built in the grove and the silk bag was inflated with hot air. The girl, armed with a pecan thrashing pole, got into the car, and up the balloon went with her to the tops of those giant trees where the big nuts grew. Upon the ground below men held fast to the guy ropes while Bernice got the pecans.

MARY EDITH DAY.

NAGGING THE CHILD.

A Disagreeable Fault Some Mothers Are Guilty Of.

Don't nag the child. What is the use? If you want the child to obey you, speak once and once only. Stick to this rule, and you will have no trouble. This is how the average mother makes a mistake:

"Now, Susie! The idea of your doing that! How many times have I told you not to? Susie, Susie! Do you hear me? Stop that this very instant! Now do. That's good child, Susie! I'm ashamed of you! What will your papa say when he comes home and I tell him how bad you have been? Susie Jones, if you don't stop this minute I'll come over there and give you something you won't like!"

"DON'T! DON'T!"

Perhaps this threat will work, and then perhaps again it will not. Anyway Susie's mother will have to leave her work or make a feint of doing so.

Now, this is all wrong. The simple remark: "Susie, you know I forbade you to do that. Stop doing it," ought to be enough, and it will be, too, if the child knows that you mean what you say. If the child does not obey immediately, punish it. It is not likely you will have to do so a second time.

If the child is not doing actual wrong, don't nag it. Some women seem to take a fiendish delight in this sort of thing. If you want to make your child sulky, self conscious and fretful, why, follow their example. Don't keep tormenting the child by telling it to stand just so, smile just so and say just such and such things. In particular do not indulge in this sort of performance before visitors. Lessons in deportment should have their time and place.

Above all, try not to poison the lives of your children by perpetual wails of "Don't!" Let the tots have a little chance to live. Many of their trying peculiarities they will overcome themselves in the course of time.

If the child is doing wrong, one word of admonition should suffice. If it is not doing wrong, leave it alone.

THE BILLIARD ROOM.

A Few Hints on Fumed Oak—How to Furnish It.

Nowadays nearly every up to date home is equipped with a billiard room. This may be pretentious or not, just as one's purse allows. At any rate, the furnishings should be largely on the carved wood order, and a quaintly simple effect is to be desired.

The accompanying illustration shows one of the latest designs for a room of this kind. It was planned for the country home of a well to do business man. The woodwork is of fumed oak, the walls are wainscoted and the ceiling heavily beamed. A long window, or rather five single windows in a group, let in plenty of light. A quaint old time effect is afforded by the small panes of glass. The long window seat is upholstered in red leather. The chairs are treated in the same fashion, a handsome stone fireplace lends dignity to the room and a rich Persian carpet gives a warm look to the hardwood floors. E. DE LA BAUME.

The Use of Fur.

The low cut bodices make the fur lined opera cloak or cape necessary. The evening waist this season is not so decidedly a pouched shape, and a pretty innovation is to have a row of flowers around the neck. Others have a real swansdown puff around the neck and sometimes around the sleeves or down the front of the waist. This is soft and delicate. It allows the face of the gown—for nine out of every ten are made of lace—to melt into snowy softness and is a beautiful finish.

In the ant family, those incessant, hustling toilers that do all the work of a colony are of the neuter gender.

Experiment of the Co-operative Neighbors

THE one department of human industry that has lagged behind the rest in the march of modern progress is housekeeping. Perhaps this is because women are at the head of it, but that is neither here nor there. At any rate, it becomes plain that for all except the very isolated and the very wealthy there must be ere long radical changes in household operations. The increasing difficulty of obtaining girls willing to do domestic labor makes these inevitable.

A recent co-operative cookery venture has been made at Decatur, Mich. This differed from others in the fact that it was men instead of women who first proposed it and who advocated it most warmly. The ladies came in a little later. For men and women to work together is good for both. The groundwork of the plan was similar to those already in operation—a central kitchen and dining room where neighborly families met and took their meals in common, families having little tables to themselves.

Mr. L. G. Stewart, a merchant, originated the executive committee of five, composed of men and women, managed the affair for thirty days, at the end of which time another five were chosen, and so on. This method gives opportunity for experience to all, institutes a friendly rivalry and prevents methods and menu from running into ruts. The cost of meals is astonishingly low. The first week it averaged 12½ cents, the second week 10. A specimen menu shows that the co-operators are quite up to date in the biggest kind of scheme of avoiding meat and other heavy foods for breakfast. The sample breakfast bill of fare includes eggs, a cereal preparation, fried potatoes, cookies or doughnuts and coffee or chocolate.

For dinner the co-operative menu includes two kinds of meat, two kinds of vegetables and bread, two desserts, all inviting to the palate. The first result noted was that the same food cost less unbought and uncooked than when it was bought and cooked in each separate family kitchen. Two cooks and one fire served for all. It was, besides, possible to buy supplies at wholesale rates. There was another advantage that a woman appreciates better than anybody else. It was that of not having so much cold roast left over. In the small family this becomes a nightmare to the economical housekeeper. She uses it cold for luncheon, she makes a stew of it for dinner and frequently hashes it over for breakfast, and yet it remains. But with the co-operative dining system even a large roast may be disposed of. A great advantage lies in the common kitchen and dining room system is the amount of time and annoyance that are saved to the homemaker herself. She has leisure to look after her children and to cultivate her mind.

The Decatur co-operative dining room was a pretty one from the beginning. Each family brought its silverware, and they took turns in furnishing the table linen. Each family took pains to make her own table sightly with a vase of flowers in the center. In another way such a plan would work well. That carelessness as to hair and attire which, even some good women permit themselves to slump into at meals in the presence of only the [illegible] own husbands and children would not for a moment be indulged in at the co-operative dining room [illegible] respect it would be [illegible]

MARCIA [illegible]

GOSSIP THAT IS OF INTEREST TO THE SPORTS AND ATHLETES

There are two things in the world of shooters that are being discussed wherever there is a shotgun or rifle—the calling off of the Grand American handicap shoot for 1903 and the crusade of old-time marksmen against the foolish practice of "William Tell shooting." The slaughter of pigeons for the biggest trap shooting event in the world—the Grand American—has resulted in the crystallizing of public sentiment against the continuance of the alleged sport. Reading the handwriting on the wall, the promoters of this big event, which might have had 600 entries next year, gathered in the office of a powder concern and decided to abandon the shoot on its present lines. The bridges were not all burned, however, for if the G. A. H. is to be revived it may be in the nature of a target shoot or an event in which a certain kind of artificial bird is used.

The Grand American handicap was shot at Kansas City last spring, and prominent ministers of the Gospel attended the slaughter to see just how the machine killed the birds. And for what? A share in a money purse that might have gone with a clay pigeon or glass ball contest. The east is irretrievably arrayed against any continuance of the shooting events in which pigeons freed from traps are shot down before they really find out their bearings. Conservative men who love the hunt in the forest, on the plains and in the wilderness, refuse to see wherein there is any "sport" in a shoot that results in the wanton destruction of so many pigeons as do these annual "races."

"Cannot a shooter have as much sport out of breaking clay pigeons as he can out of slaughtering live pigeons that are perfectly helpless when they come out of a trap?" That is the query that was asked so generally that men who loved sport and hated needless slaughter gave the "up" that the public was sickened tired of pigeon shooting. If pigeons were capable of holding a convention they would meet and pass resolutions thanking the friends of the feathered victims for their great part in uplifting shooting for "sport."

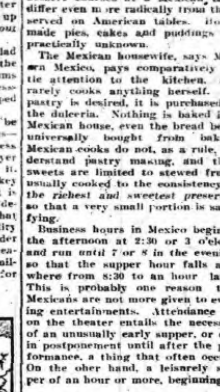
It is not unlikely that the police powers given to mayors in all cities will be taken up by the executives when itinerant show people attempt to give "William Tell" exhibitions, more or less skillful. The recent death of a man who held the apple on his head while his partner shot it off has started anew the campaign against this foolish phase of sport. Annie Oakley, whose marksmanship is known in two hemispheres, has come out squarely against the "foolish killing exhibition." The little woman who can shoot almost as well as any man who ever "drew a bead," says the William Tell act is worn out, foolish, should be prevented and will be.

The majority of parents in casting about for good avocations for their boys, never give a thought to the race track and the advantages the life of a jockey affords. They are opposed to the "sport of kings" and its associations because of the gambling element that enters into the life. But it is more apparent now than ever that the business of riding horses is not over crowded—that there is no business in the world so alluring to the young man seeking a chance to make a lot of money. The premier jockey of 1903 will have a retainer of $30,000, and some exceptionally good rider who is in great demand may make as much as the president of the United States.

The tremendous demand for capable jockeys has never been adequately met; doubtless it never will be. But the openings are there if the bright young boys who love horses and take naturally to riding only will take advantage of them. The law is a profession so crowded that a lad will work his way through college to get a sheepskin that may not bring him in enough in five years to buy his clothes. Yet that same young man would not think of turning his ability to riding race horses. Cannot a young man engage in the business, elect to take mounts for millionaires and remain honest, dignified and unsullied by the breath of betting scandals? Cannot a young man seek preferment in the racing world—make it a business the same as a clerkship, etc—and after earning a snug sum, retire to take up something more to his liking, without feeling that he had done wrong?

The sober truth is that not one lad in ten thousand who goes into the riding business, often from the slums of the big cities from which it is a blessing to rescue him, is mentally equipped to make a success of jockeying.

The clear brain, the desire to be honest and absolutely conscientious—all make up the prescription of success in the jockey world. The employer wants merit, and he will pay for it. The road to success in the jockey world is strewed with wrecks, it is true, but the fact remains that the demand for good riders is so great that it is within the bounds of possibility for the schoolboy who is a natural rider to enter the business and in one season rise to such a pinnacle that millionaire racing men will be bidding for his services at $20,000 a season.



In no part of the United States are there so many Virginia deer seen as the southwestern part of Texas, in the country bordered by the Rio Grande and covered with a blanket, as it were, of dense mesquite and chaparral growth. Up in Wisconsin's northern woods, where the officers of the law have afforded the deer good protection for years, this game may be about as plentiful as it is in Texas, but the pot hunters who use dogs to trail the deer there have taken the edge off the sport for the few real sportsmen who try to make legitimate kills. Southwestern Texas offers an inducement to the sportsman. He cannot use a modern high-power rifle down in Texas, but with a common magazine rifle of 44 caliber and loaded with black powder and soft bullets, the hunter may get from six to a dozen fine specimens of deer every day he cares to tread the chaparral.

Why can't the Nimrod use a high-power rifle down there? Is there a written law? No is the answer to the latter question. But the shotgun with buckshot or the soft bullet is effective, and the danger of killing a friend who is stalking through the mesquite, perhaps only 50 rods away, is long great to permit of the use of the rifles that kill at a great distance. The city hunter who takes a small caliber, high-power rifle to that country is warned by the natives.

You have to be a real laborer to kill deer there, though. That adds to the sport. It requires earnest effort to fight mesquite growth all day. There are mesquite growth so heavy and thorny that no hunter could penetrate. The deer know these sections, but are rarely shot in them. With the instinct that passes all understanding these beautiful creatures tread the almost unseen paths in the mesquite and find glades in which succulent grazing may be found. It is the habit at this season of the year for the deer to begin feeding early in the day—at sunrise—and to stop at ten o'clock. Then they begin to seek sequestered spots to wait for the late afternoon. You may hear a deer going through the chaparral, but you might stay a hundred times without making a kill.

The favorite glades must be sought out. It is as ticklish work hunting the glades as it is normally stalking in the northern country. The gun has to be carried so carefully that it may not catch one thorn, and each step has to be properly judged that the sportsman will often work harder in going through a few acres of chaparral than he would in climbing a canyon in the Rockies for a goat. A glade of say a quarter of an acre in area is sighted. The glade may be "eaten out." If so, the hunter may at once resume his journey without the fear that deer might visit it soon after his departure. Those who have shot deer in Texas do not worry over the cost of transportation.

HOW MEXICANS LIVE.

Peculiar Custom Noted by Visitors from the States.

Light Breakfast Taken by Inhabitants of Our Sister Republic—Food of the Working People Is Very Plain.

The Mexican breakfast, like that of the French, consists only of bread and coffee. Lunch and dinner, or dinner and supper, as they are called, differ but slightly. Dinner is served usually about 2 o'clock, begins with soup and eggs, and then follow a number of meats, each served as a separate course, with an entire change of service every time. The meats are eaten quite alone, few vegetables being served in addition to the salad course and such as are used for garnishment. The dessert courses at a Mexican table differ even more radically from those served on American tables. Home-made pies, cakes and puddings are practically unknown.

The Mexican housewife, says Modern Mexico, pays comparatively little attention to the kitchen, and rarely cooks anything herself. If pastry is desired, it is purchased at the duleceria. Nothing is baked in a Mexican house, even the bread being universally bought from bakers. Mexican cooks do not, as a rule, understand pastry making, and their sweets are limited to stewed fruits, usually cooked to the consistency of the richest and sweetest preserves, so that a very small portion is satisfying.

Business hours in Mexico begin in the afternoon at 2:30 or 3 o'clock, and run until 7 or 8 in the evening, so that the supper hour falls anywhere from 8:30 to an hour later. This is probably one reason that Mexicans are not more given to evening entertainments. Attendance upon the theater entails the necessity of an unusually early supper, or else in postponement until after the performance, a thing that often occurs. On the other hand, a leisurely supper of an hour or more, beginning at 9 o'clock, brings the close pretty close to bedtime.

The Mexican day laborer swallows a bowl of coffee at a street stand, on his way to work if he is fortunate enough to pass one, and has the price, but usually he begins his daily toil upon an empty stomach. About 9 o'clock his faithful spouse, or some member of his family, and, not infrequently, all of them, mother and children, come trudging to the scene of labor with a basket containing a pitcher of simple brown beans, and tortillas (corn cakes that form the staff of life among the lower classes), some rice and possibly some bits of meat that are minced in a tortilla, which, in addition to serving often as both bread and plate, is also knife and fork and spoon. Bits are torn off, and by deftly curling it into semi-circular form and doubling the end it is used as an effective scoop for even liquid food.

A jug or pulque, the fermented juice of the maguey or century plant, that is the universal beverage among the masses on the tableland, is also a usual accompaniment of this meal. The Mexican laborer does not have a midday rest, but works until about 3 o'clock, when the morning repast is repeated without variation as to bill of fare. He begins his toil at daybreak, and is expected to work till dark, with little regard to a clock. On his way home he stops at a pulqueria to have all the drinks he can afford, and arrived at his home he may find something more to eat and he may not. It seems to make little difference to him.

The Mexican peon can eat more, or get along on less, than almost any other laborer on earth. In the southern part of the country, where the mountain Indians are at times drafted for work in the lower country, these men bring with them a ball of heavy cornmeal paste, about the size of their heads, slung about their necks with a string. When hungry they break off a piece of this and work it up in a cup of water, and upon this single ration they will subsist for an entire week.

Steel Stronger Than Stone.

An experiment, with a view to ascertain the relative resistance, under pressure, of the hardest steel and the hardest stone, was recently made at Witmas, Small cubes, measuring ½ inch, of corundum and the finest steel were subjected to the test. The corundum broke under the weight of 45 tons, but the steel resisted up to 70 tons.

A FAIRY TALE OF INDUSTRY.

Interesting Facts About the Great Transformation Scene to Sault Ste. Marie.

Few people have any notion of the stupendous operations going on at Sault Ste. Marie, the little Canadian village on the shores of Lake Superior, where an industrial center of enormous magnitude is now being created by the energies of one man. "Harnessing Lake Superior" is the title of an article in Pearson's, which gives this remarkable story: "Five years ago the sleepy little Canadian town of Sault Ste. Marie numbered 2,500 inhabitants. Past its doors the surplus waters of Lake Superior, mightiest of inland oceans, emptied into Lake Huron. Untold millions of horse power energy lay latent in their idly flowing eddies, but only the slow-moving wheels of a few old flour mills stood to mark their commercial usefulness, while but an occasional steamer or a paddle propelled canoe disturbed the tranquil surface. Almost as in a night a metamorphosis has taken place.

"Where there was a scattered group of village dwellings, great stone buildings, with towers and shafts and connecting passageways, now stand, and at their base diverging canals wind in and out, spanned by bridges of massive stone. Nine thousand workmen now earn their livings in the shops at Sault Ste. Marie, beside the site where five years ago the total population was but a quarter of that number. It is a truly wonderful story, this story of the growth of the little frontier town into a great industrial centre; and its story is the history of the career of one man—Francis H. Clergue."

GOOD FOR JEWELERS.

Ping-Pong Is Said to Be Hard on Watches and the Repairer Will Profit.

"Ping-pong is a fine game," said a jeweler, who does a lot of repairing, to a Sun man. "No outdoor or indoor sport has ever given us so much to do. It is surprising how many persons have broken their watches since the game became a fad, says the New York Sun.

"You see, people play the game without removing their coats or waistcoats, and in the excitement they forget about their watches, and the first thing a man knows his timepiece bounds out of his pocket. Sometimes it strikes the table, but wherever it does fall the watch is damaged.

"That is not all. A player may tie his watch to his pocket, but still it gets out of gear. The constant jumping around and the swinging of the arms disturbs the works so the watch has to be brought to us to be regulated.

"I have had as many women's watches as men's to repair. The women are even more careless than the men. Their watches dangle from their shirt waists, and as a result the watch jumps around like a weathercock in a gale of wind.

"Surprising as it may seem, my income from repairing watches has almost tripled since the craze of ping-pong began."

SAXONY'S ECCENTRIC KING.

Interesting Stories Are Told of the Peculiar Habits of the Former Ruler.

The newspapers have lately been full of incident of the life of the deceased king of Saxony, but they are mostly connected with his public military career. Of his private life little is said except that to its extreme simplicity he adhered closely that of Emperor William I.

It is reported that King Albert had a rooted objection to exchanging his old clothes for new ones, and it was only with great difficulty that his valet, Count Taube, could persuade him to have a new cost tried on. One day when he had just undergone the torment of having clothes tried on, the king happened to pass through the famous hall of the knights, in the Dresden palace. Looking up at the figures of the mail-clad knights, he said, with a deep sigh: "What a good time the old knights had in their iron armor; they were troubled with no dresses."

A retired captain of the Saxony army, whom everybody knew as being under his wife's thumb, applied for permission to wear his old uniform on special occasions. The king wrote on the margin of the application: "I am quite willing, if his wife permits it."

Cleaner Transportation.

Some statistical losses are hailed with pleasure. New York city is glad to hear that it has only 65,086 horses and 3,326 stables, compared with 73,746 horses and 4,649 stables in 1896. Electricity and automobiles are responsible for the change, and it is an important one in the direction of cleaner streets.

Horrors of the Cinematograph.

The exhibition of cinematograph pictures showing the operation recently performed on Queen Isabella, Radica, and Doodica, has awakened a storm of disgust in Vienna. The pictures show all the horrors of the dissecting room, and the dreadful contortions of the limbs when under the knife.

SIR LIANG CHEN TUNG.

New Chinese Minister Attended Phillips Andover Academy and Yale University.

Sir Liang Chen Tung, just appointed Chinese minister at Washington, has a peculiar affection for the United States in that he was one of the first detachment of Chinese boys of high caste to be sent to America for education. Early in the seventies he was placed for study in an Amherst (Mass.) family, and later attended the Phillips Andover academy, remaining there from 1878 to 1881. He completed the highest regard for Dr. Bancroft, the then principal, and has taken occasion many times since to manifest it.

He is a Yale graduate and a man whose ability and integrity are undoubted. As interpreter at the Chinese embassy during the incumbency of Mr. Chang some years ago he became very popular in cabinet circles. His diplomatic accomplishment has been conceded by the various special appointments he has filled. On a mission to Japan, and later to London, on the occasion of the queen's jubilee, and as one of the party sent to Germany as apologists for the murder of Baron von Ketteler, he has served his country. His latest position has been that of the coronation embassy in London. His work at the jubilee secured his knighthood.

As to the United States' relations with China, Sir Liang Chen Tung said recently in Paris:

"You can assert emphatically that not only the Chinese government, but the people of China, are most grateful for the United States' fair dealing and for the friendly disposition shown throughout the recent difficulties, and her late action in the Tientsin question has still further increased China's gratitude. The United States will certainly receive as good treatment as any power in the commercial and industrial development of the Chinese empire.

"This mission returns to Peking by *way of the United States. I shall ac*company the mission to Peking, returning to Washington at the end of December or the beginning of 1903. I am going first to my home in Canton, in order to take my two boys to the United States with me, as I desire them to receive an American education, which has been such a great benefit to myself.

I return to Washington, with the greatest pleasure. I had many friends there, and college mates who are now prominent men, and had a friendship of several years' standing with Secretary Hay, whom I warmly liked."

"watchdog of the treasury," is one of the most picturesque members of the present congress, and has always been a power in the house during the 14 terms he has represented his constituency back in Illinois. Mr. Cannon's recent outburst against the extravagance of congress is deserving of a record in history. It is not generally known that this sturdy republican oak, of Danville, Ill., is a southerner by birth, but such is the fact. He first saw the light in Guilford, N. C. He went to Illinois as a lad, and at 25 was attorney general of the state. Mr. Cannon has made a lasting impression by his recent plea for economy in national expenditures.

MANAGING A MAN

How a New York Girl Has Her Own Way with an English Titled Fiance, As Viewed Through the Eyes of Clo. Graves, the Famous English Authoress and Dramatist.

TO HUNT the stag in the real old English way, on real old English ground," said Miss Van Zan, sparkling up at Lord Pinehead through her double thicket of black eyelashes and smiles.

"Do you ride to hounds in New York state?" asked that young gentleman, rather fatuously.

"We have paper drag-hunts that are real enjoyable if not mighty exciting, and latterly the club has imported 16 couple of real English foxhounds. The trouble about them was, that they wouldn't chase anything but a fox; and the foxes we'd imported on purpose—such common little things!—had no idea of running it country they didn't know. Besides, the passengers on the liner had spoilt them so with sweet biscuits and chicken wings that they were too corpulent for exercise. So we got a nigger and a red herring—one of your real old English high-bred sort—and the nigger engaged for five dollars to drag it over the ground we'd fixed on, and the meet was arranged. There were 24 members of our hunt club, ladies and gentlemen all turned out by first-rate sporting sartorialists. And I won't say, in a light green cloth with orange facings and a special button, but what the style was real handsome. It was a real splendid day, with blazing sunshine, and when that nigger broke covert and ran—we didn't want any English dogs to smell for us—that herring seemed to our American noses to flavor the whole country for miles"—the gretty nose of the narrator wrinkled fastidiously—"and John B. Alding, the smartest and best got up member of the hunt club, turned his horse right round. 'Where are you going?' I called out, for the whole hunt was streamin' up a risin' ground-lob, leanin' out of their saddles and sniffin' the air, and the nigger was melting into the perspective like a liquorice drop on a hot stove lid.

"'Where? Miss Hattie?' says John B. 'Why, I guess I'm going to hunt out a part of the landscape for myself that don't perfume of British blonter—an' if you like, you can come along!'"

HER HATPINS HAD GONE, HER HAT HAD VANISHED.

"Well?" Lord Pinehead's tone was chilly and the bright eyes of Miss Van Zan sparkled more mischievously through her eyelashes, as she replied:

"Well, I did!"

"*And made strong running. I sup*pose."

"We'd always been thick," said Miss Van Zan, "since John was a Harvard student and I was a girl attending lecture classes with a pigtail tied up with ribbon. But we concluded to be something nearer than friends before the day was over, and when we lighted down at a farmhouse to get a drink of molasses and water and some doughnuts, we were positively engaged. The affair was only broken off last fall."

"And were you sorry?" asked her interlocutor.

"I guess," said Miss Van Zan. "I wasn't so sorry as John, anyway!"

"And where is John now?" inquired Lord Pinehead, with a tinge of jealousy.

"My!" retorted the enchantress, *"you do ask questions. He's got cham*bers on Broadway, an' an apartment in Paris, an' a shootin' lodge in the Rockies, an' a villa on Como, an' a huntin'-box in England—and if he isn't to locate at one of those addresses, I allow he's elsewhere. As for me, I'm at Pinehead castle in Devon, and I do think the contrast between your red clay fields and your green trees and hedges—"

"Is as charming as the contrast between blue eyes and black hair? I agree with you," said the infatuated young man.

Miss Van Zan's pearly cheek did not assume the faintest tint of rose. "Oh! I guess I don't admire myself much," she said, "since I've seen your English beauties. Peaches, I call 'em. Why, Lady Susan Wendover—that lovely girl the society papers say you're engaged to—"

"I'm not engaged to Lady Susan Wendover," said Lord Pinehead, eagerly.

AS SHE WISHED TO GO TO THE HUNT.

"I should think you'd want to be," said Miss Van Zan. "I should—if I had been born to employ a tailor instead of a coutourier."

"I am devoutly glad," said Lord Pinehead, "that fate destined you to wear a train instead of tr——" He pulled up.

"You just saved yourself," said Miss Van Zan. "Well, poppa's visit and mine to this dear old place of yours comes to an end in another week. I'm sure you've made us feel as if the place belonged to us."

"Make it yours," said Lord Pinehead, bringing up at the end of the rose alley in which they were walking with the proposal which Miss Van Zan had intended should be made before they got back to the upper end. "Only if you take it you must accept it with its encumbrances.' I am one of them—the chief one."

"I guess I can put up with you," said Miss Van Zan, and as the triumphant lover captured the lovely hand upon which the latest fashion in rings glittered and sparkled, she added to herself: "Not forgetting the title." Then she went back to the house and looked up poppa in the library.

"Have you had a successful time, pet?" asked the parent, without glancing up from the Stock and Share column of the Times.

"I guess so," said the daughter. She threw herself into a lounge and crossed her lovely feet — exquisitely stockinged and divinely shod—upon one of the awful bed footstools worked by Lady Pinehead in her youth. "It's fixed, anyhow. I've left him sorting his ideas in the garden."

"From what I know of the effect you commonly have upon young men," said poppa, "I should rather have supposed his ideas were in a muddle to one."

"Come over and put it in my mouth, and light it for me," said his daughter. "I'm too exhausted by being proposed to, to do it myself. . . . . Poppa!" she cooed, when the obedient parent had fulfilled her behest, "don't mistress of staghounds wear any sort of uniform—in England? Because, if not, I'll have one designed right away. Pink, with a diamond badge and topaz buttons would be elegant. And a silver-mounted whip under-crocheted round the rim and an ivory mouthpiece. My!"

She rose, and tripped across to the piano, and, sitting down, rattled out the opening verses of "We'll Hunt the Stag To-day."

A masculine voice took up the burden rather out of tune; a masculine watch chain entangled itself in Miss Van Zan's back hair as she leaned coquettishly against the support afforded by her admiring lover.

"Only we're going to hunt him on Wednesday," said the charmer, giving Lord Pinehead a distracting glimpse of her eyelashes. "You don't know how I'm longing for my first experi-

STATE REFORM.

Governor Murphy has a plan whereby he aims to reorganize the large forces of clerks employed at the State House and run the State's affairs on civil service lines similar to those in force at the National Capital. It is his desire, as he expresses it, to run the State's affairs on business principles. Such an aim is certainly a laudable one and, if properly conducted, one which is bound to secure the approval of good citizens throughout the State.

It is not likely, however, that Mr. Murphy will be permitted to so revolutionize the State machinery without some vigorous opposition. The "spoils" system is an old one. While undoubtedly a vast majority of the men in the various departments at Trenton are capable officials, there are some who have powerful friends, who would be affected by the inauguration of any civil service rules. Their appointments were admittedly political rewards and the rewards will not be taken away if the interested ones can prevent it. Then, too, such a plan would prevent any further distribution of political "plums" which state of affairs is not desired by the political workers.

Of late, there has been a tendency on the part of Jersey's Governors to appoint men to office who are fitted for the positions. An able man, if he happens to be of the right political persuasion, gets the place even if his pull doesn't happen to be quite as strong as some man's who is admittedly unfit for the place. Such a course is along the proper lines and is to be advocated by all means. If Governor Murphy can further instill that principle into State affairs, he will put the people of New Jersey under deep obligations to him. It seems likely, however, that he will not be able to accomplish it on the lines which have been made public. While it may be possible to provide for future appointments on civil service lines, any retroactive scheme is going to stir up a hornet's nest among the politicians throughout the State.

WORK OF THE RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

The annual report of the Relief Association, just at hand should always be welcomed with thoughtful interest, for it represents the charitable work done by a body of intelligent and conscientious women who disburse with discretion the gifts of many generous and liberal minded citizens.

An increase has been made in the number constituting the Board of Managers, thus interesting a larger number of persons. One of the most effective methods of the association is that of personal visitation, the families visited often finding in the visitor a wise, cheerful and judicious friend. The employment bureau stands for independence instead of dependence, making possible work by the poor in place of charity to the poor. The receipts from the wood yard, $171.25; the amount given in payment for work done by women, $681.66, and the amount of sales, $559.00, make a good offset for the amount given gratuitously, $168.71.

Unless one has given this subject thoughtful consideration, the great gain in careful investigation and wisely given labor instead of careless and promiscuous alms-giving cannot be fully appreciated. The Relief Association deserves the hearty support and co-operation of those blessed with prosperity. Many who have means, cannot give the time necessary to learn the merits of the applicants and devise ways to aid without injury, but this organization planned with thought and carried on with an outlay of time and more thought is seeking to do its best for the unfortunate and afflicted.

The appeal for visitors ought to reach some women with leisure who would find a rich reward in ministering to the wants of some struggling fellow travellers, with whom the battle of life has been a hard and losing one. Here is work, not only for the rich, but for the willing hearted, the spiritually gifted, the sympathetic helper and tactful adviser.

CORNER-STONE FOR HOSPITAL

Laid at Site of Muhlenberg's New Home Out Park Avenue Saturday Afternoon.

MANY IN ATTENDANCE

Corner-Stone Laid by Mayor O. L. Jenkins at Corner of the Wright Memorial Operating Pavillion—Short Addresses by W. R. Cock and Rev. E. M. Rodman.

Notwithstanding that the air was biting cold, the weather was quite propitious for the laying of the corner-stone of the new hospital, Saturday afternoon. There was a large attendance of people interested in the hospital and its work including a majority of the Board of Governors, the medical staff, members of the Woman's Auxiliary, Mayor O. L. Jenkins, Councilmen R. I. Tolles, J. F. Buckle, B. Frank Coriell, president of the Council, most of the physicians of the city, as well as many clergymen representing the churches. It was much regretted that Charles J. Fisk, president of the Board of Governors, was unable to be present on account of illness, but his place was ably taken by William R. Cock, first vice president, who had charge of the exercises.

The exercises began at 3:30 o'clock, with invocation by Rev. Edward L. Earp, after which Mr. Cock made the following address:

"I regret exceedingly that Charles J. Fisk, the president of the Board of Governors, is not with us today and that the duty of presiding on this occasion devolves on me.

"On the 30th day of May, 1880, Decoration Day, the corner-stone of the present hospital building was laid by Hamilton Wallis, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons in the State of New Jersey, assisted by his Grand Officers, according to the impressive ceremony of that ancient order. Addresses were made by Rev. Thomas H. Stockton, pastor of the First M. E. church, later by Hon. Wm. H. Maxson, former Mayor of the city, and Bishop Scarborough. It was a great and eventful day for us, but more especially for those of us who were most deeply interested in the work. We had just received the gift of land from the late Hon. Job Male and had our plans drawn for the building. With the funds we had in hand at the time we commenced its erection. Our contract figure for the building complete was $9,400.

"In December of that year the finance committee was obliged to report that we had expended all the money we had in hand, namely $2,400 and if the money necessary to finish the building was not forthcoming, we would be obliged to suspend operations. This we had to do, and the incomplete building, for lack of funds, $6,000, was allowed to stand in this condition through the winter. In the spring the Woman's Auxiliary Board, which has always done so much for us before and since, held a fair in Vandeventer Hall and succeeded in raising $1,500. With this amount and subscriptions from our friends, we were able to complete the building and it was opened for the reception of patients November 1, 1881, or four years after the hospital was incorporated.

"Our building as it stands today is totally inadequate for our needs, and the Board of Governors realizing the fact, and also that we must look to the future, determined to secure land and erect a building suitable for the increased and growing demands upon the institution. The land was purchased and paid for, and the buildings are now in process of erection as you see. The Board of Governors had decided to erect and finish as much of the plant as our funds admit of, but reluctantly have to abandon the completion of one of the main wards.

"We must have more room and better accommodations. If we cannot secure funds to complete the hospital, we must go as far as we can. We will not run in debt. Our great hope is that when our dilema is known to the people of Plainfield, that they will come forward with contributions, and enable us in the near future to finish the other ward. Then we will have a hospital building as complete, for its size, as any in this country, and of sufficient capacity to meet all requirements without enlargement for many years to come.

"Our operating pavilion is a memorial gift, and will stand as such as long as the hospital exists. What more fitting memorial can be erected to the memory of the dear ones who have left us, than a building whose sole purpose is for the benefit of suffering humanity.

"To give an idea of the growth of our work at Muhlenberg Hospital, I would state that the first report of the medical staff to the Board of Governors in 1883 the total number of patients treated in the hospital from December 31, 1881, to January 1, 1883, a period of a trifle over one year, was fifty-two. We treat this number in a month nowadays.

"In an appeal made to the public for aid to support the hospital by the finance committee in 1882, it speaks of the growing work of the institution, and states that at present there are four cases in the hospital, which statement to us now seems almost ludicrous. But for many years it was seldom that we had such a 'rush' that the number went up to eight, whereas in the past year we have had as high as twenty-seven, if not more in the wards and private rooms at one time.

"This statement must be convincing, and you can readily understand why the Board of Governors are desirous of having a building suitable for our present and future needs. I feel confident that you will take to heart our appeal for aid to complete our buildings and when so completed, support it."

In connection with this address, Mr. Cock gave a summary of the work of the hospital from the opening to date. This showed that in the first thirteen months, from November 29, 1881 to January 1, 1883, sixty-five patients were treated, and during the next seventeen months, from January 11, 1883, to May, 22, 1884, sixty-four were treated. The number treated in the two years between 1884 and 1889 is 375 and 87 between 1889 and 1890. The number treated during the succeeding years is as follows: For the year ending May, 1891, 105; 1892, 112; 1893, 122; 1894, 130; 1895, 183; 1896, 222; 1897, 258; 1898, 256; 1899, 335; 1900, 332; 1901, 419; 1902, 403; to December 6, 1902, six months, 215, total, 21 years, 3,663, besides about 4,164 patients treated in the dispensary running from 22 in the first year to 2,585 last year.

Rev. Erskine M. Rodman was then called upon by Mr. Cock and he made a brief address in a happy vein. He called attention to the usefulness of a new hospital and told how small the present institution is for the work it has to do. He praised the generous nature of the late Job Male, who donated the property upon which the present hospital stands, thus assisting largely in making such an institution a fact. He lauded the noble efforts of the women who have so zealously worked for the success of the hospital and made an urgent appeal for even greater support from the people of Plainfield. From Charles E. Brooks he learned that nearly 125 people were steady contributors to the hospital, whereas, he said, there should be 1,500 contributors. In conclusion he said that he hoped that there would be no lack of support and that Muhlenberg Hospital would always continue as a place to relieve suffering humanity. He said that he was pleased to know that Rev. Father Egan was to have a part in the exercises, for the church of which he is pastor, has in the past supported the hospital in a generous manner.

Following this address, the corner-stone was laid by Mayor Olin L. Jenkins. This work was performed with a silver trowel, purchased specially for the occasion, and which was afterwards presented by Charles E. Brooks to William R. Cock, as first vice president. After the stone was laid by the Mayor, His Honor said: "I now declare that the corner-stone of this building is laid in due form."

The exercises closed with the benediction pronounced by Rev. Father Andrew M. Egan, pastor of St. Mary's R. C. church.

Charles E. Brooks, who had charge of the exercises and who arranged for the placing of the various articles in the box which was laid inside the corner-stone, read a list of these articles. They are as follows: Reports of the Board of Governors from 1881 to 1901, New York daily newspapers, a copy of The Daily Press, photographs of the old hospital, medical staff, superintendent, assistant superintendent, Dr. G. W. Mitchell, a copy of "Plainfield Illustrated," documents containing the names of the officers of the hospital, Board of Governors, medical staff, superintendent, assistant, building committee, contractors, list of names of nurses now in the training school and photographs of the late Howard Wright Cortiss and Park Wright Mason, grandsons of J. Howard Wright, who is erecting the operating pavilion in memory of these two young men.

The corner-stone was laid in the west corner of the operating pavilion, the foundations of which have just been completed by the contractor, William H. Pangborn. There is no inscription on the stone.

After the exercises many of those present took the opportunity to inspect the new hospital, so far as it has progressed. All expressed much pleasure with the general plan and arrangement. Much satisfaction was also expressed regarding the grading and general lay of the grounds.

SLIPPED ON ICE.

Charles M. Wilson Injured by Fall on His Own Front Steps.

Charles M. Wilson, of 306 West Sixth street, met with a serious accident Saturday morning as he was leaving his home to go to the new hospital, where he is engaged on the carpenter work. He was walking down the front steps at his home when his feet slipped and he fell the entire distance to the ground. His back struck a sharp corner of the steps, severely wrenching and spraining the ligaments. The noise made in falling attracted the attention of the members of his family who hastened out of doors. They found Mr. Wilson almost helpless on the ground. He was assisted into the house and a physician was summoned. It is believed that the injured man will be detained at home at least two weeks. Fortunately no bones were broken, although the exact extent of the injuries cannot be ascertained.

ORIENT GIVEN.

To Candidates From Elizabeth and Plainfield at Meeting Friday.

The Orient Court of the local Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., conferred the degree upon a batch of candidates from Elizabeth and this city last Friday, in Benevolent Council rooms. The court will also visit Elizabeth shortly and perform the work upon a score of applicants. At the conclusion of the session, last Friday, the members discussed the advisability of making the Orient a State order with assessment benefits. No decided action was taken but the matter will be considered in detail at the next meeting.

SUCCESSFUL INSTITUTE.

Although Storm Kept Some of the Teachers From Attending.

Superintendent Homer J. Wightman, of the North Plainfield High School, reports that the Teachers' Institute, which was held at Bound Brook during the later part of last week, was one of the best which he has attended in many years. Monday many of the teachers who lived in this city and in Somerville were prevented from attending the Institute on account of the storm. Some of the teachers who stayed with friends in Bound Brook but who resided in Somerville had to hire a stage to get home in, as the trains were blocked.

Oil Stove Exploded in Photographic Studio of F. C. Langhorne—Mr. Hughes Tried to Smother It—Alarm Sent in at 9 o'Clock—Several Hundred Damage.

What threatened to be a serious conflagration directly in the heart of the city broke out at 9 Monday morning, in the photographic studio of F. C. Langhorne, on the top floor of the Schwed building. An oil stove, burning at its full capacity, melted the upper part and an explosion followed, scattering blazing fluid in every direction. It was discovered by Thomas Hughes, Mr. Langhorne's assistant, who made a heroic effort to smother the flames but succeeded only in getting himself badly burned about the head and arms.

The department was summoned from box No. 12 and on its arrival the developing room was a mass of flames. It was almost impossible to gain entrance to the room at once, but by crawling on hands and knees, Driver James Daley got a stream from the chemical engine directly on the remains of the stove and the oil covered floor. The rest of the blaze was extinguished after a half hour's hard fight but not before the floor, walls and wooden partition were badly burned.

In the studio there were 2,500 negatives and until the exact damage to these is determined Langhorne cannot estimate his loss. The damage to the building is placed at several hundred dollars and is covered by insurance.

BOYS AT Y. M. C. A.

Gave a Unique Gymnastic Exhibition and Are Planning Basketball Games.

A unique gymnastic exhibition was given by the boys of the boys' department of the Young Men's Christian Association, Saturday morning, to the boys of various schools in the city. The exhibition consisted of a short dumbbell drill followed by work on the various pieces of gymnasium apparatus, after which a number of indoor games were played.

The price of membership in the boys' department is to be advanced to $5 after the first of January. This advance is in keeping with the other boys' departments in the Y. M. C. A.'s throughout the State. A league of four basket ball teams has been organized among the larger boys of the department and some interesting games will no doubt be played. Another league is soon to be organized among the younger boys. A bowling tournament is now in progress.

TROLLEY CASES SETTLED.

Suits of G. H. Leivers and Samuel Kline Settled by Wm. Newcorn.

The case of G. H. Leivers, of South avenue, against the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company, for injuries received last April while riding in a car on East Fifth street, has been settled out of court. The plaintiff, through his counsel, Assemblyman Newcorn, brought suit for $5,000. The accident was the result of one car running into another in which the plaintiff was seated.

Another case against the trolley has been settled by Assemblyman Newcorn for his client, Samuel Kline, of West Third street. The latter's horse was struck by a trolley car at the corner of Plainfield avenue and Fourth street, November 10, last, and severely injured. The settlement was in full for damages claimed.

BEST FREIGHT SERVICE HERE

Remarkable Work Done by Station Agent Haynes and His Assistants.

AT THE FREIGHT HOUSE

System Here is Best and Most Efficiently Carried Out of Any on Line of Jersey Central—Some Idea of How the Freight is Handled in Plainfield.

While all marvel at the reports in the newspapers regarding the freight blockade throughout the country, especially on the Pennsylvania Railroad, scarcely a person living in this city gives a thought to the vast amount of freight handled at the Central Railroad freight-house on Richmond street, where a force of fifteen men, under the supervision of Station Agent J. A. Haynes, are constantly employed at the clerical work and in unloading of the merchandise freight at the platform about the house from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m.

The number of twenty-two cars of mixed freight consigned to the many different residents, are either placed in the house for delivery or landed upon the platform to be loaded upon waiting trucks each day. This does not include the many solid carloads of freight consigned to the different concerns about town, such as the feed and grain merchants and coal dealers. A large part of these solid carloads of freight is composed of green goods which is consigned to the fruit and vegetable dealers in town, and which in turn find its way to the tables.

The Plainfield office has the reputation of being one of the busiest on the line and at the same time of giving the best service. In dealing with those who have business with the company every facility is used to rush the work, especially in handling perishable freight, such as green goods, several kinds of groceries and fruits which keep the men busy in the morning hours making deliveries of meat, poultry and the other merchandise previously mentioned.

To the stranger unfamiliar with the work of the modern freight-house with its ceaseless rush and apparent confusion, the noise and the rumble of the wheels of the hand trucks as they are pushed over the rough boards with their crushing loads which make the rafters of the house creak, makes it appear that there is much confusion there. He sees heavy hand trucks going in every direction with loads of merchandise only to return in a second for another load; men stand in a corner calling out the names of the consignees while others are engaged in checking off the numberless boxes and barrels and marking them down in the records of the company. He is bewildered with the amount of work going on before his eyes but he cannot conceive the simplicity of the work in the system which has built up the Central Railroad more rapidly than any other feature of that great company.

In the apparent confusion there is the greatest order. The great house is divided off alphabetically and each piece of freight coming out of the cars has its own place on the floor where it can be found when wanted at a moment's notice. This is the great benefit of having the freight-house where it is at present as in the old house opposite the depot the men were cramped for room, which caused frequent delays in delivering the freight when it had arrived there.

The handling of freight is one of the biggest problems the modern railroad has to meet with. It is of more importance than the passenger traffic as the company's duty ends when the passenger has arrived at his or her destination but in the case of the handling of freight it is different as every box has to be handled separately and then delivered to the truckmen at the freight-house. In this city the Central Railroad has solved this most difficult problem and today with the wonderful growth of Plainfield and the daily increase of business, which amounts to thousands of dollars a month, the city is fortunate in securing the best freight service on the line.

NEEDS OF EPILEPTIC VILLAGE AT SKILLMAN

Annual Report Made to Governor Murphy Tells of That State Institution.

NEEDS MORE SUPPORT

REPORT OF DR. WEEKS, THE MEDICAL SUPERINTENDENT OF VILLAGE.

Tells of Success of Present Line of Work, and How it Can be Carried Forward on a Much More Elaborate Scale.

There are upward of 2,500 epileptics in New Jersey, according to the annual report of the board of managers of the State Village for Epileptics, located at Skillman, Somerset county, of which H. P. Reynolds, of this city, is the secretary. The report has been recently submitted to Governor Murphy.

The report deprecates the fact that the State has not been more liberal in caring for this class of dependents, and it is pointed out that until proper provision is made for the treatment of the epileptics little real progress can be made. The recent sensational report of the State Charities Aid Association called attention to the fact that in the State and county hospitals for the insane, as well as at the training school for feeble-minded children at Vineland, there are many epileptics that ought to be at the village at Skillman. The reports of the managers of the village also calls attention to this fact and urges that some favorable action be taken this winter by the Legislature in order that the epileptics may be properly cared for.

The report shows that eighty-five patients have been received at the village since it was opened in 1898, and that of this number nine have been discharged as cured, four have been transferred to other institutions, four were removed by parents, two died and three eloped. In the total number of patients admitted the counties were represented as follows: Burlington, 3; Camden, 3; Cumberland, 1; Essex, 23; Hudson, 12; Hunterdon, 3; Mercer, 5; Middlesex, 4; Monmouth, 8; Morris, 3; Ocean, 1; Passaic, 3; Somerset, 1; Sussex, 1; Union, 7; Warren, 4. During the past year there have been twenty-five male and twenty female patients admitted, making the total population at the present time seventy-five.

The report of Dr. Weeks, the medical superintendent, says:

"As the village progresses the patients are realizing more and more the advantages of colony life. It is deeply regretted that the amount appropriated by the last Legislature was not sufficient to complete the women's cottage and industrial building, both of which are now in course of erection. Nothing is more conducive to the contentment and happiness of the epileptics than systematic employment, and nothing tends more to the amelioration of their wretched condition. During the spring, summer and fall months there is no difficulty in finding employment for all who are able to work, but with the advent of winter the outdoor work ceases, and the patients are obliged to spend the greater part of their time indoors in idleness, especially the men. The effect of the change is quickly manifested by a rapid increase in the number of convulsions and the irritability and discontent of the patients. It was hoped that the industrial building would be finished and that several industries might be started to give employment to the men during the winter.

"The question is frequently asked, How many epileptics are there in this State? From such information as we have been able to obtain, my conservative estimate would place the number of epileptics in the State at more than 2,500, including those in the insane asylums and other institutions.

"There is a large number of epileptics confined to the hospitals for the insane and other institutions throughout the State that properly belong in the village. That they should be removed from these institutions as soon as possible, because of the effect produced upon the epileptic, and in turn the effect produced by him upon those with whom he is compelled to associate, is conceded by all who have a knowledge of the matter. To the end that the village may receive and properly care for those seeking admission from their homes, and those now in other institutions, where they are undesirable and where no benefit results to either patient or institution by their detention, a sufficient number of buildings should be provided in which to classify and care for them.

"Separate cottages are required for children. The old, infirm, paralytic, bedridden, should be cared for in buildings planned for their requirements, while the strong and vigorous adults should be properly classified and placed in homes adapted to their needs. Small, plain, homelike houses are desirable, and much better results are obtained by a system which permits a caring for small numbers in a household.

"A cottage for children of each sex should be built immediately. Children and adults cannot be cared for in the same household. This has been thoroughly demonstrated in the instances where children were received, and after trial it was found necessary to have them removed."

Happy features of the celebration was the reading of an original poem by a daughter-in-law, and pleasant words spoken by Rev. N. W. Cadwell, Mr. and Mrs. Baker's pastor. Among those from Plainfield were Mr. and Mrs. William A. Woodruff, nephew and niece of the celebrants, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Potter.

BROKE THROUGH ICE.

Wm. Gwynn Fell in Tier's Pond While Investigating the Skating.

William Gwynn, accompanied by three companions, Peter Emmons, Morris Brokaw and Daniel Randolph, went to Tier's pond, Monday afternoon, to see whether or not there was any skating. The boys started to slide out towards the center of the pond when with a resounding crash the thin surface of ice gave way and Gwynn was seen to be slipping below the surface of the ice. He gave a startling cry and his companions who were some distance ahead rushed to his assistance and saved the lad from disappearing beneath the ice. The boy was badly frightened but was otherwise uninjured.

Watson, of New York, who will ship it to London in the spring. The animal is valued at $6,000 and is Kentucky bred.

HIGH SCHOOL ORACLE MAKES ITS APPEARANCE

First Number of City High School Publication Was Issued This Morning.

IT IS QUITE CLEVER

THE YOUNG PEOPLE WHO ARE INSTRUMENTAL IN PREPARING IT.

Cover of Pretty Design and Well Printed and Edited Pages Makes an Excellent Impression.

Neatly arranged, well printed and full of bright news items of interest to the Plainfield High School, the Oracle, the official paper of the school, made its first appearance Tuesday morning. It is a paper which will be an ornament in the parlor, a necessity in the study room and a pretty memento of school days to the graduate. The cover of the paper is of a very neat design and in the lower right hand corner is a cut of the school shield and flags in the official colors. On the frontispiece is a cut of the school building and on the first page, where the Oracle makes its bow editorially, are the names of the editorial and reportorial staffs, all of whom are deserving of congratulations for the neat and artistic appearance of the first issue of the new school paper.

Athletics, as is to be expected is given a prominent place in the paper. General reports is a department in which all the current events of the month are told in an interesting and a witty manner. The Alumni notes are by no means the least interesting of the departments in the paper.

The board of editors comprises: Editor-in-chief, Arthur F. Consant, '03; literary editor, Miss Dorothy Waldo, '03; school editor, Jessie McClay, '04; corresponding editor, Edith L. Jarvis, '03; business manager, Alden B. Moore, '03; art editor and assistant business manager, VanWyck Brooks, '04; associate editors, Lindsey Best and Miss Grace E. Burroughs; reporters, Miss Harriet C. Randall, G. Archibald Brakeley, '03; Miss Josephine Stein and Harry G. Thompson, '03; Miss Le Mas Batchelor and Jose L. HISTORIC CHARACTERS.

An interesting evening was spent at Stafford Hall last Monday when Rev. Father Egan entertained the members of the parish with an illustrated lecture and movies pictures. There were a number of excellent solos rendered by George T. Martin, of Easton, Pa.

Among the pictures shown on the screen were those well known persons of history in the Roman Catholic faith and all of these were portrayed with some of the leading incidents of their lives shown on the moving screens. Some of the pictures showed the destruction of St. Peirre by the recent terrible volcanic disturbances which showed in a manner as lucid as it was comprehensive the awful ruin wrought by the seismic disturbances.

There were several unique features to the evening's entertainment which proved to be interesting and instructive. The proceeds amounted to a large sum which will be used for the benefit of the church.

Picture to Sixth Grade.

During the three days' exhibition of the Turner art pictures in the Stillman School, several of the classes competed for a handsome picture by selling the most tickets for the exhibition. The sixth grade in the Whittier School raised the most money for this purpose and will receive the picture. The grade raised over $10.

The First Baptist church Sunday-school has commenced to rehearse its Christmas music.

of Aldermen demanded that Mr. Bradley surrender the beach, together with several parks and his interests in the three lakes to the city. The aldermen went a step further and were about to bring suit in ejectment, when Mr. Bradley anticipated them by bringing a suit in chancery to determine the ownership of the beach and parks in dispute. This move, of course, blocked the aldermen, but Mr. Bradley agreed to keep the promise made years ago the sell the shore front to the city for $150,000, and for good measure would throw in his sewer system, valued at $75,000; Atlantic Square, worth $75,000 more; Library Square, which would be cheap at $75,000; and two other plots used as breathing spots, valued at $30,000 more. The beach property alone, with the board walk, pavilions, fishing pier, bathhouses and machinery, is regarded as worth $500,000, so the city has been offered nearly $1,000,000 worth of holdings for the sum of $150,000.

Soon after this latest liberal offer was made the taxpayers held a mass meeting, and were unanimous in declaring that the aldermen should abandon their proposed suit in ejectment and accept the "Founder's" proposition. This the aldermen decided to do, but they insisted that Mr. Bradley also relinquish his rights in the lakes and the little parks surrounding them.

The city, as soon as it comes in possession of the shore front, will spend $350,000 in improvements. These will include a board walk of modern design, three-quarters of a mile long and fifty feet wide; a casino, music stand and pavillions, new bathing houses, and, in fact, everything necessary to make the beach front the finest in the world. Then, with municipal ownership of the beach will come several modern shore front hotels and a spring and winter as well as summer season.

Evidence to prove Mr. Bradley's earnestness in the beach transfer scheme came when he tendered to the aldermen his resignation as mayor of the city. This was done to meet legal difficulties, which would prevent him, as the city's executive, from selling his property to the city.

Mr. Bradley is expected to continue to take an interest in the city he built, for even with his beach gone he will still be the largest property owner in the resort. He owns the dozen or more vacant blocks adjacent to the board walk, as well as numerous properties in North Asbury Park, and acres of desirable land in West Asbury Park. He also holds title to most of the beach front in Bradley Beach, a thriving resort two miles south of that place, and which was named in his honor.

LITERARY.

To do justice to the thirteenth anniversary number of The Delineator, which for beauty and utility touches the highest mark, it would be necessary to print the entire list of contents. It is sufficient to state that in it the best modern writers and artists are generously represented. The book contains over 230 pages, with 34 full page illustrations, of which 20 are in two or more colors. The magnitude of this December number, for which 728 tons of paper and six tons of ink have been used, may be understood from the fact that 91 presses running 14 hours a day have been required to print it; the binding alone of the edition of 725,000 copies representing over 30,000,000 sections which had to be gathered individually by human hands.

SENIOR PLAY.

VALUATION OF BANK STOCK

STOCKHOLDERS ASK FOR A REDUCTION IN THEIR ASSESSMENTS.

Hearing Before the Borough Commissioners of Appeal Last Night.

The Borough Commissioners of Appeal held an adjourned meeting in the Borough Council Chambers last Monday when the matter of reducing the taxes of the City National Bank stockholders was discussed. The borough assessor, Elston M. French, was up held by Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, who held that the Assessor had arrived at his figures in a manner which is prescribed by law. One of the stockholders of the City National Bank, Mrs. Emily H. Covey, retained John H. VanWinkle to argue the side of the question on behalf of the bank. The arguments on both sides waxed very warm and lasted until late in the evening.

The difficulty lies in the assessed valuation of the bank stock. The stock of the City National Bank is valued at $130, which is much higher than before because of an increase in the surplus fund. Some of the stockholders object to paying taxes on this surplus although it belongs proportionately to each stockholder.

The Commissioners could not arrive at any decision at the meeting last night and another meeting will probably be called at a later date.

Chairman May Resign.

Considerable surprise has been occasioned in the in the borough by the announcement that Chairman Jacob Sharts, of Somerville, was about to resign the chairmanship of the Democratic county committee. Just why this action has been taken by the officials is not known here but it is presumed that it has some bearing on the recent election.

Edward Koechlies, of Somerset street, was the guest of Miss Lola C. Wohleben, of Jersey City, Monday, when a party was given in his honor.

Mr. and Mrs. William Charles and daughter, Miss Gertrude Charles, of Brooklyn, have been visiting their cousin, Mrs. Benjamin A. Moore, of East Second street.

HOPE LEADS CITY LEAGUE

By Defeating Y. M. C. A. Basket Ball Team by the Score of 20 to 19.

AT HOPE GYMNASIUM

Game Was Won by Superior Goal Throwing From Field—A Pretty Contest—Many Fouls, But Few of Serious Nature—No Change Made in Officials Selected.

PLAINFIELD AMATEUR BASKET BALL LEAGUE.

	Won.	Lost.	Ave.
Hope Y. M. A.	2	1	.667
Alis A. A.	1	1	.500
Y. M. C. A.	1	2	.333

Again the Hope Y. M. A. basket ball team demonstrated its superiority in its own gymnasium by defeating the crack five of the Young Men's Christian Association, Friday night, by a score of 20 to 19. The game was the fourth in the series in the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League. Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood had announced, after the last game between Alis and Y. M. C. A., that the Y. M. C. A. team would not be allowed to play unless he officiated but both of the other teams took a firm stand against his position and the officials chosen by the executive committee of the league filled their places without change.

While the smallness of the gymnasium was rather conducive to rough play, the game was a clean one. Fouls were frequent, however, R. Smith, Cahoone and McCombe being the worst offenders although most of the fouls called were not of a serious nature. Hope's team work had improved considerably but the goal throwing of all except Dilks was not up to the standard. After the Y. M. C. A. boys became accustomed to the gymnasium, their team play began to develope but their goal throwing showed no signs of improvement over the appearance game with the Alis A. A.

Hope started off with a rush and for a few moments it looked like a rather one sided contest, then Y. M. C. A. steadied down and as pretty an exhibition of basket ball as could be played in such a small place was given. Dilks had Heinecke, Y. M. C. A.'s star guard, against him but was wonderful backward throw of his twice landed goals. He was given good support by Whitley who scored once. Ray Smith made Y. M. C. A.'s only goal while Denton and Cahoone got in some clever team work. The Hope guards stuck to their posts well and prevented many goals. Cone, at centre, showed a much better game than when he played against the Y. M. C. A. before but he had a hard man to meet in Cahoone. Time was called with the score 11 to 7 in Hope's favor.

Several changes were made in the second half by both teams and they seemed to even up things. Y. M. C. A. played more aggressively while Hope seemed more inclined to resort to defensive play. Two clever goals by Cahoone and one by Denton were balanced by a goal on one of Dilk's backhanders, a long shot by McCombe and Duckworth's neat throw. Cahoone developed much accuracy in throwing goals on fouls being much better than his appearance. Play was finally called with Hope a single point in the lead.

The game was won on superior goal throwing from the field, Hope making six to Y. M. C. A.'s four. On fouls, Y. M. C. A. did better but the difference was not enough to overcome the lead gained by Hope in the field.

Hope's victory now makes that team first in the league while the defeat relegates the Y. M. C. A. to last place. The present standing is of the nature of a surprise to all as it was supposed that the fight lay between Y. M. C. A. and Alis and that the Hopes would bring up the rear with much regularity. Such a reversal of fortunes has served to thoroughly increase the interest in the series. The next game is called for Monday, December 15, between Hope Y. M. A. and Alis A. A. at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

The teams in the game lined up as follows:

HOPE Y. M. A.		Y. M. C. A.
Whitley	right forward	Denton
Duckworth		Smith, R.
Cone, Whitley	centre	Cahoone
Chamberlain		Heinecke

Score—Hope Y. M. A. 20, Y. M. C. A. 19. Goals on foals—Dilks (5), Whitley (3), Duckworth, McCombe, Denton, R. Smith, Cahoone (2). Goals on fouls—Dilks (5), Whitley (3), Denton (2), Cahoone (3). Time of halves—20 minutes. Y. M. C. A., 2d. Referee—Robert A. Meeker, Plainfield. Umpire—Charles J. Bunnell, Plainfield. Timer—J. Fred Wootton and C. E. A. Heywood, Scorer—Sidney Mason.

TOLD ABOUT LOVERS.

Story of a Girl Who Eloped in Stocking Feet.

Pennsylvania Man Left His Pretty Young Wife 40 Run Away with Her Mother—Cupid Scored a Triumph.

Troubles, asserts a writer in the Cincinnati Tribune, seems to be the lot of a great many lovers. Surely no one would be so daring as to declare that all persons, whose hearts are not their own, are constantly beset by vexatious incidents, yet one needs only to look about to learn that love and bliss are not necessarily analogous. Some of the troubles of lovers—many of them, in fact —are only slight, but they knit the brow and produce worry, nevertheless, and that is why the world should, as a matter of common justice, love a lover.

An incident occurring recently in Charlotte, Tenn., goes to prove the assertion that love is not all roses. Robert Sutherland and Miss Lorena Foster wanted to get married, and, as is sometimes the case, the girl's parents objected. Naturally, this made no difference, for the modern couple is not disposed to waste time in securing the parental blessing. Sutherland and Miss Foster eloped in the middle of the night, and, as might be expected, they were in a great hurry when they left the Foster homestead. In her excitement the couple forgot her shoes—a foolish thing for her to do, but she did it—and when she and Sutherland presented themselves at the squire's office they decided it would be bad luck for the girl to be married in her stocking feet.

Here John Sutherland, a brother of the groom to be, stepped in and offered to return to the Foster home and recover the shoes. It was then five o'clock in the morning, but the young man summoned courage to his aid and set out for the Foster's. When he arrived there Monroe Foster, father of the bride, was wending his way out into his garden to kill a rabbit that had been destroying his cabbages. The venerable Mr. Foster carried a large double barreled shotgun along across his shoulder, "and as he walked along he was softly whistling: "I'se lookin' for dat bully, an' he must be foun'." John Sutherland, the hero, heard him. He also saw the big gun with its cavernous barrels. He was then within a few yards of the house, bent upon securing Miss Foster's shoes. It occurred to him that he might be mistaken for the bully, and without stopping to reason it out he faced about and established a new world's record for a 200 yards dash, with a leap over a six-foot tight board fence at the end of the course. But the wedding took place, even without the shoes, which goes to show that love is surely don't care what happens to them.

Talk about the world loving a lover! Think of this case reported from Scottville, Ky. Thomas Jones the other evening was married to his wife. It was their second attempt, and Mrs. Jones, although but 20 years of age, has even a better record than that. She has been twice legally divorced and four times legally married to two different men, which also goes to show that you never can tell.

But this isn't in the same category with what happened to George Sangfoss, of Larkspile, Pa., and it apparently was love that got him into trouble, although in the light of condition it is rather difficult to comprehend his case. In reality he played tag with tradition, for he eloped with his mother-in-law. The mother-in-law's name was Mrs. Helen Hestus, and the funny part of it is that when George and his wife began housekeeping five years ago, Mrs. Hestus made herself so disagreeable that the young people were forced to divide their time between their own home and the homes of neighbors. This condition of affairs continued until a year ago, when Sangfoss began to tolerate the old woman and finally cast longing glances at her across the dinner table. Acting upon the impulse Mrs. Sangfoss made a big mistake. She supposed that George and her mother were just becoming acclimated and didn't even venture a guess at the real state of affairs until she woke up one morning and found this note:

"Dearest Wife: I am gone. Your ma is my wife; she is all wright. When she dies, see if me and you can fix things up again. Please don't get married, because when your ma dies come back to you, maybe. Your husband."

A Cold Wave.

The forecast of sudden changes in the weather serves notice that a hoarse cough and a heavy cough may invade the sanctity of health in your own home. Cautious people have a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure always at hand. E. H. Wise, Madison, Ga., writes: "I am indebted to One Minute Cough Cure for my present good health, and probably my life." It cures Coughs, Colds, La-Grippe, Bronchitis, Pneumonia and all Throat and Lung troubles. One Minute Cough Cure cuts the phlegm, draws out the inflammation, heals and soothes the mucous membranes and strengthens the lungs. L. W. Randolph.

Plant Medicine Chests.

In past ages it was almost a religious belief that though man was subject to endless diseases, there was for every one a certain remedy. Many of these were to be found in the plant world, and it was supposed that nature had so marked different plants that every sufferer could discover for himself the particular plant that would meet his apparent need. All that it was needful to do was to look at a plant, and if you could find anything that in shape or color resembled the part of the body that was diseased, or the disease itself, that was proof positive that the plant was good for you. Thus a heart-shaped leaf was a sovereign remedy for heart disease, a spotted leaf was good for diseased lungs, a plant with swellings at the joints was good for gout, the walnut, with its outer skin, its hard, brittle shell and its peculiar kernel, was a sure cure for all diseases of the brain. We laugh at this now, but the fact remains that we obtain from some plants poison elements and from others preparations that effect what seem to be wonderful cures.—Nature.

An Old Story.

A struggling, modest lawyer near Stroudsburg, this state, received a call from a prosperous farmer who was in need of professional advice concerning his rights, which he thought ignored by a section gang on the D. L. & W. R. R. The lawyer looked up the statutes, told the farmer exactly what he should do, and, when asked as to the fee, replied:

"Well, let's call it just three dollars."

The farmer passed over a five-dollar bill, which seemed to embarrass the lawyer, who searched through his pockets and the drawer of his desk. Then he pocketed the five dollars, reached for a digest, sat down, and remarked:

"I guess, Neighbor ——, I'd best give you two dollars' worth more advice."—Philadelphia Times.

To Locate the Rat.

This is not a pleasant theme to touch upon, but much may be forgiven to one who has recently passed the trying ordeal of having a rat die under the floor. Search for the inconsiderate rodent was unavailing for several hours, and it seemed as if the whole house would have to be torn down to find the malodorous cause of our woe. "Wait," said an Englishman, who happened in, "until I go to the butcher's and get some blue-bottle flies, then I'll locate the beast for you." We waited. In an hour he was back with three or four flies in a bottle. These he liberated in the rooms, having first taken the precaution to close doors and windows. In a few moments the flies settled down in one spot on the floor. "Take up that board," said the Briton, "and you'll find your rat." The board was lifted, and there, sure enough, was the long-sought rat.—Washington Star.

Old-Fashioned Tea Parties.

An attractive entertainment to give in a cottage settlement of friends is an old-fashioned tea party. Only girls are asked to come, bringing their work, at 4 o'clock. The men arrive at 6, when supper is promptly served. This meal is spread upon the table "all at once." In lavish profusion, of fried chicken, cold ham, cookies, hot biscuits, waffles and maple sugar, berries and cream, "cut-up" peaches, and several sorts of rich cake. A fiddler and country dances follow the feast.—Detroit Free Press.

Wouldn't Enjoy the Funeral.

A newly made widower of this city was being consulted by the undertaker in regard to the arrangements for the funeral.

"Will you ride with the clergyman?" he inquired of the bereaved husband.

"By no means," said he.

"Then," said the undertaker, "you can get with your own family."

"Well, I will if I have to," he sighed, "but it will spoil my day!"—St. Paul Globe.

Cuba Not All Explored.

After more than 400 years it appears that Cuba has not yet been entirely discovered. Much of it and many of its treasures are yet unknown, according to the recent report made by Gov. Gen. Wood. He says that after the centuries of Spanish occupancy there are large portions of the island that have never even been prospected and practically remain undiscovered so far as knowledge of what they contain goes. —Geographical Magazine.

PYTHIANS SOUGHT TO OUTDO EACH OTHER

Friendly Contest to Decide Which Lodge Was the Best Entertainer.

OF THESE TWO LODGES

PERSEVERANCE LODGE PLAYED HOST FOR HARRISON'S LODGE.

Etsic, of Harrison, Brought Its Best Talent, While Perseverance Was at Its Best—A Banquet to the Guests Followed.

Acknowledged as the princes of entertainers by all other Pythian lodges in the State, Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, of this city, and Etbic Lodge, No. 115, of Harrison, sought to outdo each other, Friday night, when the Essex county contingent visited Plainfield as the guest of the former. Each put forth its best talent and its best speakers. The question of supremacy between the two still remains to be settled and will be decided only when Perseverance journeys to Harrison.

In addition to the members of Etbic Lodge, who numbered fifty, there were present twenty-five members of Unity Lodge, No. 102, of this city, and also all of 500 Knights. The entertainment was in Perseverance Castle Hall and was in charge of Chancellor Commander William N. Runyon. The contributors from Perseverance were Chancellor Commander Runyon, Elmer D. Cutting, Asa Pope and the Jews Harp Orchestra and from Etbic, Past Chancellors S. S. Savage and George Lenox, James Hodd and John Logan. The latter is an alderman of East Newark and is considered one of the best contortionists and rapid fire talkers in the State.

Following the entertainment the Knightly host adjourned to the Democratic headquarters on East Second street where a repast was awaiting them that had taxed the ingenuity of Caterer W. W. Warnock to devise. The menu was elaborate and at each plate reposed a souvenir appropriate to the occasion.

The committee which arranged and had charge of the affair consisted of Samuel J. Rollinson, chairman, Thos. Muir and Walter L. Hetfield, Jr.

CLASSMATES AT GRAVE.

Little Friends of August Kleps, Killed on Railroad, Bore the Casket at Funeral.

Impressive indeed were the last and rites over the remains of August Kleps, the little son of Rudolph Kleps, who was killed by a freight car on the Jersey Central Railroad Wednesday evening. The services were held at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon at the home of the child's parents on West Second street at the corner of Grant avenue. Many friends of the dead child's parents were present at the services.

The display of flowers was very handsome, among them being a floral piece which was sent to the home by the classmates of the dead boy in the Irving School. Six of his little classmates acted as pall-bearers. The services were conducted by Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of the Hope chapel, and the interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

FUNERAL OF MISS SEADER.

Services Held Over Young Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seader.

The funeral of the late Helen M., the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Seader, took place from the residence of the child's parents on West Front street, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services were largely attended and the display of flowers were very fine. Misses Jennie and Alice DeMott rendered two very pretty selections at the services, "The Christian's Good Night" and "I Shall See Him Face to Face." The services were conducted by the Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of the Hope chapel. Interment was in the Methodist cemetery.

Planning for Entertainment.

The Young Ladies' Mission Band of the First Baptist church met Friday afternoon in regular monthly session. There was little outside of routine business considered. Plans are being formed for an entertainment to be given within the near future. There was a good attendance at the meeting and Miss Pauline Denton, the new president, was in the chair for the first time.

LAD CUT IN TWO BY CAR WHEELS

August Kleps, Aged Twelve, Met Death While Playing on the Railroad Tracks

THE END WAS INSTANT

Supposed to Have Slipped and Fallen in Path of Cars—Companions Ran Away in Fear—Parents Grief Stricken at News—The Body Was Completely Severed.

While playing "tag" around a coal car near the crossing of Grant avenue Wednesday, Dec. 3, the life of an eight-year-old boy was crushed out by the cruel wheels of the gondola on the tracks of the Jersey Central Railroad. The body was cut in two and the parts thrown in different directions. The victim was August, the eight-year-old son of Rudolph Kleps, a moulder, living at Grant avenue and Second street. The accident is supposed to have happened at about 4:45 but the exact time is not known as the children who were playing with the unfortunate lad ran away as soon as they saw that their comrade had been killed and it was some time after that the body was found cut in two.

The head and shoulders were picked up some distance from where the legs and part of the abdomen were found. A workman returning from his work found the body and placing the two parts of the body together he called for help. It was some time before help arrived and word was sent for the ambulance and to police headquarters. Patrolman Higgins was sent to the scene of the accident and then the father, almost insane with grief, arrived on the scene.

A house one sent word to the home of the lad at the corner of Second street and Grant avenue and the mother of the lad rushed to the spot hysterical and wringing her hands with grief. The scene at the railroad was a very pathetic one and it was with difficulty that the frantic mother was restrained from throwing herself upon the bleeding form of her son. Word was sent to County Physician Westcott and some time afterwards the permit to remove the body to Cole's undertaking establishment was received by telephone.

The story of the accident as told by the playmates, who ran away, frightened, at the sudden death of their playmate, is that the boy had been playing tag with them and was chasing another boy across the track in front of the coal car which was standing still during the afternoon. While the boys were at play a shunting engine coupled onto the car and started to haul it down the track. The other boys saw the car approaching and got out of the way. It is believed that young Kleps saw the car approaching, too, but he slipped on the ties and fell across the track and the next instant the wheels were crushing out the life of the boy.

Strange misfortune has followed the bereaved family ever since they have been living in this city. Late in the month of August the family lost their eldest daughter suddenly and with the death of the only son there is only one daughter, who is left of the family of three children.

The father of the child is employed at the Post Machine Tool Works and resided on the corner of Grant avenue and South Second street, where he has lived since he came to this city a few months ago from New Brunswick and took the position in the machine works.

TALK OF PENNY DAILY.

An effort is being made by some of the local Democrats to start a penny Democratic daily newspaper in this city. It is said that John D. McAleer, of Kensington avenue, is at the head of the movement. When the local promoters have secured a thousand subscribers, it is said that W. R. Hearst, owner of the New York American, San Francisco Examiner, Chicago American and other newspapers, has declared his willingness to start such a paper here. Canvassers are now after subscriptions.

CITY YOUNG PEOPLE JOINED IN WEDLOCK

Marriage of Miss Margaret May Mulford and William R. Townsend, Dec. 3.

WAS A HOME WEDDING

RELATIVES AND FRIENDS GATHERED AT THE BRIDE'S HOME.

Bride Given Away in Marriage by Brother, Armstrong Mulford—The Members of Bridal Party—Reception Followed Ceremony.

A pretty home wedding was that held at the home of Mrs. M. M. Mulford at 403 East Fifth street, December 3, when her daughter, Miss Margaret May Mulford, was united in marriage to William Raymond Townsend, of this city. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives of the bride and groom by the bride's pastor, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church.

At 7:30, all the guests had arrived and Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by the large stringed orchestra partly concealed from view by palms. Dr. Snodgrass took his position beneath a bower of greens held in place by white ribbons and awaited the approach of the young couple. The groom, accompanied by his best man, William H. Clark, of this city, entered the parlor through the hall door. Through the folding doors leading from the library and accompanied by her bridesmaid and maid of honor, the bride entered the room. They met at the western corner of the room where they plighted their troth. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Armstrong Mulford.

The bride wore a most becoming gown of white crepe de chine with trimmings of pearl silk. She carried a large bouquet of bridal roses. The maid of honor, Miss Carrie Mulford, a sister of the bride, wore a gown of white point d'esprit over blue silk and carried white carnations. The bridesmaid, Miss Bessie Lee, of Easton, Pa., wore gray crepe de chine with pink trimmings and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

After the ceremony had been performed making them man and wife, the ushers, Eugene Towner, of Brewster, N. Y., and Harold Davis, of this city, escorted them to the dining room where the wedding supper was served to the bridal party and the immediate family.

After the wedding supper a reception was held until train time when the newly married couple departed for Buffalo where they will spend several weeks on a honeymoon. On their return they will reside in this city for some time.

The presents received by the young couple were not only elaborate but very numerous. Included in the display were articles of cut glass furniture, silverware and checks of large size. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome check, and his gifts to the ushers were gold knot stick pins. The bride presented her maid of honor and bridemaid with silver brooches.

The decorations in the parlors of the house were very fine. The color scheme in the parlor where the ceremony was performed was green and white and in the library pink and green. The knot was tied under a canopy of green tied in place by white ribbons.

The groom is employed in the offices of the Metropolitan Railroad Company in New York where the sympathies of the office force are remembered Mr. Townsend with substantial gold coins.

When the time came for the young couple to depart they found the carriage gaily decorated with white ribbons and tin cans which dragged along behind making a great noise as the carriage bowled along to the depot where they were given a send off with a shower of rice.

Plainfielders There.

The quarterly meeting and banquet of the New York Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion, was held Wednesday, Dec. 3, at Delmonico's, New York. Among the Plainfield members present were Dr. Frank H. Wells, S. C. Hall, John M. Stewart, M. C. Dobbins and Walter C. Dobbins. At the meeting Gen. Stewart Woodford read a paper on "The Evolutions of the Army of the Potomac."

It is Easy to Say

Be careful," but we must all go from heated houses into chill outer air, and the change sets us coughing and wheezing. Avoiding winter colds is difficult; curing them is not hard if you take Allen's Lung Balsam. Better begin when the cold is young and not wait until it settles deep into the lungs, for then, even with Allen's Lung Balsam, complete relief will be slower.

THEATRICAL.

The story of "The Crisis," which James K. Hackett presented for the first time in New York at Wallack's Theatre on Monday evening Nov. 17, has been made familiar to assembling like a million readers through the medium of Winston Churchill's remarkably popular novel of the same title; and in his dramatization the author has achieved the unusual feat of making a play which is even more popular than the book, while at the same time it stands on its own merits as a dramatic production irrespective of the original. Thus the spectator enjoys the play whether he has read the book or not; and if he is already familiar with the events and characters of the novel, still more will he enjoy the realization on the stage, amidst the scenes which the author has described so vividly. Mr. Churchill has eliminated all the historical characters and battle scenes which occurred in the book, and confined the play principally to the romance of Stephen Brice, the young Abolitionist, and Virginia Carvel, the typical daughter of the south, whose hearts and hands are eventually joined, even across the bloody chasm of sectional conflict. The stirring events immediately preceding and during the Civil War are used merely as a background against which to bring this dainty romance, and its contributory characters, into vivid and highly dramatic relief; but in atmosphere and sentiment the play is more closely allied to "Alabama," than to the class of war plays typified by "Shenandoah."

Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre will introduce for the first time in New York the sensational bicycle novelty, "Loop the Loop," as constructed for stage use by Tom Eck, the well known trainer of long distance cyclists. Lottie Brandon & Co. will perform the feat, Miss Brandon doing the actual performance. Fisher and Carroll will be the head-liners in the "variety" element of the continuous performance. The Fifth Avenue Stock Company will revive Henry Arthur Jones's society play, "Saints and Sinners" with a special selected cast and an entirely new scenic equipment. The more mention that "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is to be the stock company offering at the Fifty-eighth Street next week will probably serve to pack the house. Up in Harlem the Permanent Stock Company will offer "Alvin Joslyn" as the comedy bill for next week. Over in Newark the "twice-daily" vaudeville will have Mr. and Mrs. Mark Murphy, in a Con. T. Murphy's newest sketch, "The Seventh Son," as the leading feature, with the marvellous Merrills, expert cyclists, as the extra attraction.

SHAKE UP.

One is Promised When the Executive Committee of Somerset County Gets Together.

The Somerset county Democratic executive committee will meet early in January and organize. It is the intention of some of the leading Democrats throughout the county to reprimand a few of the members of the committee for their inactivity at the recent election and those who know say that there is bound to be a general "shake up" in some of the ranks of the politicians "high up."

It has been said that some of the members of the committee have been rather remiss at the last election and that the low results in the Democratic count were responsible for this.

NEW HELMETS.

Borough Officials Will Soon be Decked Out in New Headgear.

Charles J. Loss, of the police committee of the Borough Council, has ordered that some helmets be secured for the borough marshals, an appropriation for which was recently set aside by the Council for this purpose. The rest of the uniforms will be secured at a later date. The uniforms for the department, including the hats, will be secured as soon as possible as those now worn have been in use for some time.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 14—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle, D. D.

Topic.—Our fellowship.—Ps. cxxxiii, 1-3.

The word "brethren" in the One Hundred and Thirty-third Psalm refers to the descendant of a common ancestry, but not only are those brethren who are bound together by physical ties, but also those who are bound together by spiritual ties. All the children of God are brethren. They have one Father, one faith, one Saviour and elder brother and one eternal home toward which they are all traveling. Race, color, nationality, do not enter into the calculation. If we have been born again and are living spiritual lives, we are all one in Jesus Christ, and there should be manifested in our lives the fellowship that is consequent upon such a unity.

1. The source of Christian fellowship is spiritual. God's people are a spiritual building. The tie that binds them together is a spiritual one. A Christian is a living soul in vital contact with the Lord Jesus Christ through the power of the Holy Ghost. The Christian church consists of all these persons bound together. The tie that binds the people of God together in unity and in fellowship is not a national or a social one, but a spiritual tie. Unless we have the spirit of Christ and are bound together by the Holy Ghost we do not belong to the household of faith, are not one with the people of God and have no fellowship with God and with His people. By personal acceptance of Christ alone can we come into this union with His saints, and this should lead all outside to accept Him.

2. Christian fellowship is beautiful and attractive. "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." This is specially true of Christian brethren. It was a beautiful sight to see divided Israel as a nation once more united; but even more beautiful than this is it to see divided Christendom coming to unity as they are spiritually related. Nothing presents Christianity so attractively to the world. When the world can say, "See how those Christians love one another," its people will be drawn to the church; but when it must say, "See how those Christians rend one another," there is no hope for conversions. A church in which the people dwell together in loving union and fellowship need scarcely say, "Come." The people don't come without a special invitation, while a church rent with factions and divisions can offer no inducements to those outside her borders. Let us stand, therefore, for fellowship. Let us be brethren in deed as well as in name. Then our lives will be three-by the happier, and we will be enabled the sooner to win the world to Christ.

3. Christian fellowship is useful as well as beautiful. "There the Lord commanded the blessing, even life forevermore." God blesses Christian unity. The united church is the special object of His favor and blessing. For discord and contention He has no place, and this fact above everything else should impel God's people to cultivate unity and fellowship.

The Pastor's Opportunity.

Pastors, keep your Young People's society young and you have solved one important problem. Don't scold, but lend a helping hand. Invite others, but inspire them by deepening their motive. You can make or break your Young People's society. What is needed today in the average society is self sacrificing leadership on the part of pastors. No outsider can successfully solve your problems save by an occasional suggestion. It is your privilege, your work, your wish, and you must deal with the subject. You have no more important opportunity for service.—John Willis Baer at Northfield Conference.

HEADING FOR PERTH AMBOY

ULTIMATE AIM OF NEW BRUNSWICK-TRENTON ELECTRIC ROAD.

Is Now After Right to Bridge the Raritan River and Continue Across Country.

With the opening of the Trenton-New Brunswick electric railroad between these cities, there have been many rumors that the road was a part of a scheme of the Goulds to build a steam road between Philadelphia and New York and thus the electric road was only built to get the rights of way. This has been denied by the management on several occasions. The latest report is that the electric road proposes to extend its lines across the Raritan river and push on towards Perth Amboy and Rahway.

On the maps of the route of the road it is shown where the new road is considered and it is only a matter of a few years before the road, which has its terminus at New Brunswick, will have a bridge across the Raritan in back of Milltown and make a cross country cut for Perth Amboy, and from there to Rahway.

It was said in New Brunswick by one who is in touch with electrical railway matters in that locality that the road is already negotiating for the rights of way to lay its tracks across the Raritan. Some grants have been secured but there has been much difficulty experienced so far in securing rights of way for approaches to the bridge. There is some talk of using the Albany street bridge for this purpose but there seems to be little likelihood of this being done unless the company finds it impossible to secure the rights of way for the bridge.

ITALIAN ART.

Illustrated by Collection of Mounted Photographs at Public Library.

An interesting collection of mounted photographs illustrative of Italian art from the fourteenth to the seventeenth century is now on view in the reading room of the Public Library. The collection is arranged chronologically and comprises about fifty photographs of the representative Italian painters. Among these are Fra Angelico, Palma Vecchio, Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael, Titian, Perugino, Guido Reni, Chirlandajo, Correggio, Botticelli, Micahel Angelo and many others.

With each picture is given the artist's name, and the gallery or church in which the orginal hangs, and frequently, for the benefit of those wishing to inform themselves further, is given the names of two or three books in which an account of the artist may be found. The collection will be displayed during the month of December, only.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 14, "Our Fellowship"—Text, Ps. cxxxiii, 1-3; I Cor. xii, 12-27.

"Now ye are the body of Christ and severally members thereof."

Christian fellowship is different in nature from all other fraternities because the fact on which it is based is unique in human society.

Men may form associations for mutual defense when fear of a common foe and knowledge of individual weakness prompt to united action. A company may be formed to get and share profits which no one can gain so easily alone as can be done by several united. Losses may be calculated with much probability and risk distributed. Numberless causes make men unite for greater or less time and under a great variety of pledges and obligations.

No other associations have the solemn necessity and binding obligations of this Christian fellowship. None other is so venerable, none so deep based, so rich in heritage and so full of promise. Other men's ties are the interests and activities of various kinds and for almost every conceivable object—social, benevolent, business and religious—claim attention at the present time. In many communities they seem to be given preference over the church. The question of church services for meetings of the lodge is often defended on the plea that the lodge will buy one at death and care for one when sick if dues are paid regularly, and so it must be attended, whatever else is neglected.

Perhaps the church has not had so great care for the sick and needy as desirable. Possibly some form of organization similar to the sick and burial societies might be formed among the membership. Certainly more care of the sick and needy than is given in many churches might well be taken. More interest to get work for the unemployed and relieve the need of the poor and lame would be in keeping with the example and teaching of Jesus. But no one of these, not all combined are the distinctive work of the church of Christ.

Care for the body is very much to be commended, but neglect of the soul is inexcusable. Our peculiar work is the cure of souls. "The spirit is more than the flesh. The body is of value solely on account of its relation to the spirit. In our care for it we are never to lose sight of this fact. The spirit alone is to benefit the inner life, the immortal part of man. Bodies shall die however cared for. If the spirit be rightly fed and cared for, it shall live eternally and be clothed with a glorified body fully fitted for its final service.

Our association is not a temporary convenience, but a never ending relationship. It is not a matter of our participation, but conferred on us by the Lord Jesus. It exists not in name alone, but as true ritual, but in heart life and true affection. Most sacred, most enduring of all human ties, it binds to Jesus as well as to our fellow men.

Have we received all the fullness of the Master's spirit so that we fully share His purposes and feel the impulses to all Christlike affection and service and delight in self sacrifice and helpfulness?

And if our fellowship below in Jesus be so What heights of rapture shall we know when round His throne we meet!

Cheerfulness.

But cheerfulness is always in place except at a funeral or a dying bed. The house of God should be a cheerful house, and people should come forth grave but cheerful mien before the Lord. Right in the home, in the presence of father, mother, all the children and servants, is where good cheer should be manifested. The table talk, speech. So in God's house the same thing is becoming. Under the beams of divine love coming into the heart there should be light and comfort and peace. The situation justifies good cheer in the soul, and there is nothing out of harmony with the occasion.—Christian Instructor.

The Partnership With Christ.

The pledge of our success in overcoming sin is found in the partnership with Christ. He is not merely an onlooker in our work. He suffers in defeats, He rejoices in our victories. So real, so vital, did this partnership appear to the apostle that he thought of his old life as dead. "I have been crucified with Christ, and it is no longer I that live, but Christ liveth in me." This is the completed and efficient life which so identifies itself with Him that it is our will, His joy our joy, His strength our strength. —Congregationalist.

Swearing.

"Are you paid anything for swearing?" Eli Perkins once asked a commercial traveler. "No, I do it for nothing." "Well," said the lecturer, "you work cheap. You lay aside your character as a gentleman, inflict pain on your friends, break a commandment and lose your own soul—and for nothing! You do certainly work cheap, very cheap!"—American Friend.

Yes and No.

Nothing is a better test of character than the ability to discern when it is well to say "no" and when it is better to say "yes." The man who assents to everything equally with the man who opposes everything will be a failure. Life is neither all affirmation nor all contrariety.—New York Observer.

Brooding Over Troubles.

Excessive anxiety and gloomy anticipations are the bane of many lives. Troubles are brooded over that never come or if they come are not half as bad as was imagined. Few are content to live day by day and hour by hour, taking things as they are sent.—Presbyterian.

SMOKED PEACE PIPE IN WETUMPKAH'S LODGE

Local Red Men Played Hosts and Regaled the Visitors With Song and Story.

INNER MAN CARED FOR

WETUMPKAH TRIBE ENTERTAINED WITH A PLEASANT PROGRAMME.

Impressive Part Was Presentation of Seminole Peace Pipe to Tribe by Mr. Merriam—The Committee in Charge of the Affair.

Wetumpkah Tribe, No. 229, I. O. R. M., acted as host for a large number of pale faces who filled the wigwam on Park avenue, last Thursday, for a peace gathering. The ordinarily conservative Red Man proved a capital entertainer and the visitors were regaled with song and story and powwow and afterward with "corn and venison."

The programme given in detail was as follows: Piano selections by Marcus Hoyt and Mrs. Daniel Dodge; recitations by Miss Josie Murphy, Miss Ada Westphal, Miss Adele T. vonOhl and Jere Foss; violin selections by Robert Hand, accompanied by Mrs. Daniel Dodge, William McKillop, Miss Lizzie Hickey and P. Hawkshurst O'Reilly; vocal selections by Miss Annie Daley, Mrs. John Manley, Karl A. Martin and John Moran; piano duet by the Misses Vodemeier and remarks by William A. Westphal.

An impressive part of the evening's entertainment was the presentation to the tribe of an Indian peace pipe by Dr. Merriam, who spent ten years among the Seminoles of Florida, and who is a member of the order. Part of his address was spoken in the Seminole tongue and was responded to by Robert Humphrey.

The committee in charge of consisted Michael Armstrong, William A. Westphal and Robert Humphrey.

HILLSIDE PLAYED.

But its Women's Team Failed to Finish Better Than Fifth in Second Section.

Miss Ruth Underhill has sent out the official ratings of the Class A and B. team championships of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, the first cup having been won by Baltusrol and the cup for the second series by Powelton.

It has been the most successful season of team play in the history of the association, for only one team withdrew, and, of the twenty-one matches scheduled in Class A., only one was defaulted and one was not played within the time limit, a great improvement over the season of 1901. The Class B series was carried out without a break, although some of the teams had to make quite long journeys to fill the dates. The two series will be continued next year, on a schedule to be arranged at the annual meeting in the spring.

The tables follows:

CLASS A.

	Won.	Lost.	Per Cent.
Baltusrol	5	0	1,000
Morris C.	3	1	.667
Essex C.	2½	2½	.167
Ramapo	2½	2½	.167
Shinnecock Hills	0	5	Withdrew.

CLASS B.

Powelton	5	0	1,000
Englewood	3	1	.750
Apawamis	2	2	.500
Harbor Hill	2	3	.400
Hillside	1	3	.250
Richmond C.	0	3	.000

RUSTIC DRESS EXPECTED.

Pad and Pencil Club Will Frown Upon "Glad Rags."

The committee of the Pad and Pencil Clan announces that store clothes in detail will be frowned upon at its country dance to be given in the I. O. O. F. club rooms, Wednesday evening, December 17. Great pains have been taken to make the affair as unique in a rural way as possible and the presence of "biled" shirts, evening dresses and modern frills will be decidedly out of contrast with the surroundings. Gingham and calico gowns with sunbonnets and loose flowing hair will befit the women while the swains are warned that fancy raiment will be frowned upon. Suhr's Possum Hollow orchestra is to be arrayed in colonial costume.

INTERESTING PAPER.

Read by Mrs. A. R. Powell at Meeting of Young Friends' Association.

The Young Friends' Association held one of its regular meetings in the meeting-house on Watchung avenue, Wednesday, Dec. 3. There was a very good attendance and much interest was evidenced in the very excellent paper prepared and read by Mrs. Anna Rice Powell. The subject was "Simplicity and Moderation," and an informal discussion of it followed. A pleasing feature of the meeting was a well-given recitation by Clifford Vail on "The Crow's Children."

HOLY CROSS BAZAAR WAS GREAT SUCCESS

Third and Last Day of the Fair Proved Most Successful of All.

LARGE CROWD PRESENT

RABBIT CHASE WAS EXCITING FEATURE NOT ON THE PROGRAMME.

Evening Ended With Auction Sale in Which Geo. O. Stevens Played the Leading Role—All of the Booths Did Rushing Business.

The grand three days' fair and bazaar which has been running at Holy Cross church, came to an auspicious close late last Thursday. The crowds present that day were far the largest of any of the other days, and both afternoon and evening the parish house was thronged with crowds of parishioners.

Each and every booth did a rushing business throughout the evening and the fancy booth was especially popular with the women. The stock of the "country store" had been replenished and Miss Ida Davis, who was in charge, reported the evening to have been an exceedingly profitable one. Malcolm Davis, the whistling grocer's boy, filled the grocery order until late in the evening.

The postoffice department in the country store received great numbers of letters in every mail and these in turn were distributed as they arrived. Many special delivery letters and telegrams were received for which regular prices were charged.

In front of the grocery store were two coops, one containing fowls and the other a rabbit. While supper was being served the rabbit in some way escaped from his coop and skipped around among the tables, delighting in his freedom. He was instantly spied by about twenty small boys who gave chase and finally succeeded in re-capturing the wild creature amid much excitement.

Many large supper parties came to partake of the bountiful turkey supper and it is estimated that more than 200 of these meals were served in the course of the evening. The women of the church choir acted as waitresses.

Miss Stevens' silhouette making was a source of great attraction and scores of silhouettes were made during the evening.

"Odd features pot together and characters torn to pieces" was the sign which persuaded many to have their fortunes told and their "handwriting read" by Miss Laura Rogers. Miss Florence Barr at the candy table had no difficulty in selling all her stock.

Much interest was shown in the guessing of the names of the doll presented to the fancy booth, and it was finally announced to have been won by Miss Mabel Hooley who guessed the right name, "Mabel."

Late in the evening, George O. Stevens caused much amusement by auctioning off various articles. A great variety of articles were sold in this way. Finally the troublesome rabbit was put up and after some hot bidding was knocked down to G. T. Rhodes.

The affair was a grand success both socially and financially and a fine round sum has been realized. The proceeds will go towards the re-decoration of the interior of the church.

AFTER BIDS FOR ENGINE HOUSE

Borough Council Decides to Advertise for Bids According to New Specifications.

HEARD OF SPITE FENCE

New Engine House Was Only Subject of Real Importance That Came Before Borough Council at Its Session Last Friday—Council Attended Cornerstone Laying.

Plans for the new fire headquarters and payment of bills were the most important business brought up for discussion at the regular meeting of the Borough Council which was held in the Council Chambers last Friday. All the councilmen were present except Mr. Northrup and Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed. There were also a number of interested spectators present, including J. J. Stahl, chief of the borough fire department.

Aside from the discussion of the new plans for the fire house the session was taken up with routine business. After the reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting and the special meeting which was called on November 17, the regular business of the meeting was taken up.

A communication was received from Mrs. Louisa Bright, an aged woman who owns property on Vine street, complaining that a spite fence had been erected on the property of Charles W. Krauss by the owner of the land which prevented the light from the street lamps from shining on her property and she petitioned the Council to have the light changed so that she could receive the benefits from it. This matter was referred to the committee on streets and lamps, which committee after much discussion decided upon the recommendation of the Mayor to have the light moved. Some of the councilmen were in favor of tearing down the offending fence.

An invitation was received from the secretary of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital to be present at the corner stone laying of the new hospital building. The Mayor requested that at least some of the members be present at this ceremony so as to have the borough of North Plainfield represented.

Mayor Smalley nominated George F. Stewart for the position of steward for the Warren engine house until the unexpired term of his predecessor expired in March of next year.

Claims amounting to about $2,800 were ordered paid with the exception of the bills of Mrs. Irene Uhrhahn and Sarah Lewis, of $50 each for cattle killed as a result of a bite of a mad dog, which were ordered referred to the Corporation Counsel for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the borough was liable for the damage.

The report of the tax collector and treasurer was read as follows: Taxes, $5,662.58; bills payable, $3,000; recorder's fines, $76; license, $5; sales of dirt, $6.79; Plainfield Street Railway Company, $130.27; discount on State tax, $24.96; balance on hand, November 1, $44,243.65; total receipts, $53,188.18; disbursements, $19,935.85; cash on hand, $33,302.33.

The report of James F. Arnold, as chairman of the streets and roads committee, follows: Cleaning streets, $78.80; grading Belmont venue, $92.40; clearing snow, $2.50; street sprinkling, $4; total, $177.70.

Councilman Arnold, of the street and roads committee, moved that the following property owners be ordered to place flagstone pavements in front of their houses: H. K. Carroll, of Broadview and Westervelt avenues; Mrs. Isabella Harriet, of Summit avenue; Edward A. Smith, W. E. Thorne and Mrs. Margaret McDonald, all of Summit avenue.

A recess of ten minutes was taken during which the new plans as prepared by Architect Charles A. Smith for the new engine house were discussed.

At the end of the recess the members of the council went again into session and a motion was made that the clerk of the board advertise again for bids, according to the specifications, with and without a concrete floor.

Mr. Arnold was appointed a committee of one to ask Mr. VanEmburgh if the map for the widening of Somerset street had been prepared yet, after which the meeting adjourned.

It was expected that the report of the sewage commission on tidewater drainage would be presented to the board at the meeting but no report was received.

Strong Box in Corner-Stone.

The strong box placed in the cornerstone at the new hospital, Saturday afternoon, was made of burnished brass. It was made by George J. Tobin, of North avenue, and after everything was placed in it, the box was hermetically sealed by him.

BILLS FOR BARBERS.

State Association Is After Legislation on Sunday Closing and Licensed Barbers.

The New Jersey State Barbers' Association, which was recently formed, is preparing to introduce two bills in the next Legislature, one of which will provide for the appointment of a State board of examiners, before which all barbers will have to go to be examined as to their knowledge of tonsorial practice, and another will call for the closing of all barber shops throughout the State on Sundays. The first bill, the association intends, will provide that no barbers be allowed to practise in the State without a certificate from the proposed State board.

The association will also seek the aid of legislation to do away with unsanitary barber shops. A meeting was recently held at Newark, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Charles Trozler, of Newark; first vice president, J. L. Bollin, Jersey City; second vice president, Harry Colen, Elizabeth; treasurer, P. H. Duffy, Hoboken; secretary, Otto Bayer, Jersey City; sergeant-at-arms, John C. H. Nicholans, Passaic. The next meeting of the association will be held at Hoboken on December 7, when a legislative committee will be appointed.

HE WAS CALLED SUDDENLY

THE FUNERAL OF HENRY VANMIDDLESWORTH HELD ON TUESDAY.

Stricken With Apoplexy in Pond Tool Works and Died at the Hospital Soon After.

Funeral services over the remains of Henry VanMiddlesworth, who died suddenly, Saturday afternoon, were held from his late home on West Front street, on Tuesday. They were in charge of Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook, and many relatives and friends from this city and Somerville were in attendance. Among the floral tributes were two handsome ones from his shopmates in the Pond Tool Works and the Mount Olive Baptist Sunday-school in which Mrs. VanMiddlesworth teaches. Interment was made in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Up to the time he was stricken, Mr. VanMiddlesworth had practically suffered no illness all his life. He was in the yard of the Pond Tool Works, Saturday morning at 10:30, when he was suddenly attacked by apoplexy. Fellow workmen ran to his assistance and he was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, but never regained consciousness. He died at 1:30. He was fifty-five years old and came to this city from Somerville in 1895. He leaves a widow and five children, Mrs. Lindsey Woolley, Mrs. John Goodman and John and Lloyd, of this city and Charles, of Brooklyn.

Relieving Freight Congestion.

Station Agent J. A. Haynes, of the New Jersey Central, had two drill engines working all day Sunday so that the congested condition of the local coal and freight traffic might be relieved. The wreck at Westfield Friday night was responsible for some of the delay and it resulted in a hold-up of much business.

THEATRICAL.

Whether because of luck or good fortune, or what not, the fact remains that Viola Allen and Hall Caine in the theatre are incomparable and unsurpassable. Miss Allen presented Mr. Caine's new play, "The Eternal City," at the Victoria, New York, Monday evening, Nov. 17, and the success of the star and play were complete and tumultuous. New York has not had such another "first night" of a play in many a long day, for the reason, doubtless, that such another drama, company of players, or production, are but seldom seen in conjunction. The strength and power of "The Eternal City" and Miss Allen's splendid rendering of the character of Donna Roma, proved so swaying and commanding that William Winter, the dean of the profession, who has delighted in "squeezing literary sugar out of Caine," as one wit put it, was completely captured and won over. Of Miss Allen's performance, Mr. Winter said: "Miss Allen, whose coming is always the herald of pleasure and the garantee of earnest effort, was hailed with many plaudits. Her rendering of Donna Roma is an image of tender, enticing, and spirited womanhood, and a professional achievement of ample variety and admirable skill. Roma is a most exacting role, but it provides the actress with excellent opportunities, and all of them are utilized with judgment, ardent feeling, and sympathetic power."

ONE VIEW.

West End Taxpayer Objects to Building of a Separate Disposal Plant for the Borough.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—There has been considerable talk about North Plainfield getting a sewerage system of its own, and of securing for this purpose, the farm at West End avenue and Greenbrook road and building a sewerage disposal bed thereon. This, in my way of thinking, would be a most unwise move. For it would spoil for all time a most promising section and one which now is (and soon will be more so) a great credit to the borough.

The section in question is admirably situated for improvements of a beneficial nature, for it is far enough away from the business section to be out of its noise, confusion and disagreeableness, while at the same time everything is accessible. Is convenient (only seven minutes walk) to the station at Grant avenue.

Here most of the ground is as high (if not higher) than at any other point of Plainfield.

Then, too, in the past few years Mookview terrace has been improved by the expenditure of large sums of money in the building of fine houses.

If North Plainfield must have sewer beds, why not join Plainfield and use those already built. But better still why not carry a sewerage system to tidewater at New Brunswick.

A ROYAL TRAIN.

Such is the Train Between New York and Washington.

The finest is none too good for the traveler and tourist of today, and in its Royal Blue Line between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, the New Jersey Central has a most complete and fast service. There are five trains each way each day, which make the run New York to Washington in five hours, and the trains in every respect are sumptuous to the last degree. The coaches, parlor cars, buffets, observation, dining and cafe cars were specially built for these trains and no detail, no matter how trifling, is overlooked. Of the dining car service enough is said in the statement that it has no peer. The route of the Royal Blue is picturesque and the scene presented one of great variety. The New Jersey Central operates a sleeping car service to Pittsburg, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago, and its rates to these points are reasonable; its stations in New York at foot of Liberty street, North River and South Ferry. If you want to travel and travel in style use the Royal Blue Line. If you want a book on the Royal Blue, write to C. M. Burt, G. P. A., New Jersey Central, N. Y. It's free for the asking.

NEW YORK'S REFUSE.

Mayor Low Would Utilize It for Generation of Light.

Idea Advanced by Him Has Been in Successful Operation in English Cities for a Number of Years.

Concerning the opposition to establishing a covered scow at the foot of Jackson street, in New York, Mayor Low wrote a day or two ago to Alderman James J. Devlin stating his regrets that the city could not have the site and in conclusion said:

"I take advantage of this opportunity to say that the method of disposing of the city's waste by carrying it away by boats is a relic of barbarism. This waste ought, for the most part, be burned, and the city should never be satisfied until the heat so generated is made a source of income to the city. It is no easy problem to bring about this result in the city of New York. It probably will take years fully to accomplish it, but I am confident that in time it can be accomplished if public sentiment will support every effort made in that direction."

Mayor Low's suggestion for utilizing the city's waste products is probably based on his knowledge of what is being done in England along this line. It is not generally known here, but there are over a dozen towns in England where refuse is burned and the heat so obtained used for electric lighting purposes.

At least one of the towns uses garbage exclusively to produce its electric light. The others use ordinary fuel intermixed with refuse. The combination not only provides cheap methods of illumination, but it rids the towns of what would be a very easily solved problem.

Some of the towns are of good size. St. Helens, for instance, with a population of 84,000, operates a refuse destructor with a capacity equivalent to 22,000 16-candle-power lamps. Accrington, which is a town of 43,000 inhabitants, is lighted by

HON. SETH LOW.
(Mayor of New York Who Wants to Utilize City's Waste.)

19,800 lamps. Warrington, population, 64,000, uses its refuse in supplying light to 20,000 lamps. Ashton-Under-Lyne, with 44,000 population, utilizes its garbage in lighting 30,000 lamps.

Some of the other towns are not so large, but the same method of economy is carried out. Among these are Nelson, 20,000 lamps; Darwen, 9,500 lamps; Llandudno, 13,000 lamps; Mexbrough, 3,300 lamps; Rhyl, 15,000 lamps; Shipley, 11,400 lamps; Wrexham, 12,500 lamps; Beckenham, 10,000 lamps, and South London, 80,000 lamps. These figures are stated on the basis of eight candle-power to a lamp, which is the method used by the English engineers in making a report on this subject. In some places the candle-power of individual lamps is more than eight, as in America, where it is usually 16 candle-power, but the equivalent of power is the same.

The method of refuse consumption is the same in all cases. The garbage is dried in a heater attached to the very plant in which it is afterward consumed. When it has been sufficiently dried it is thrown into the furnace and consumed like any other fuel. Generally the contract for electric lighting and for garbage consumption is taken by a private firm, or an electric lighting company, in return for its franchise, agrees to dispose of the town garbage and combines the two industries at a profit.

Just how such an arrangement could be made in New York remains to be seen. The problem here, says the New York Times, is, of course, much bigger than in England, but it could be handled on a large as well as a small scale.

Newspapers His Winding Sheet.

W. T. Hutcherson, editor of the Dickson county, N. C., Press, died at Charlotte, N. C., aged 72 years. He had worked in a newspaper office since the age of 12. He had always said that he wished to be buried in a winding sheet made of newspapers, and so he was laid away. His head was placed upon a copy of the last issue of the Dickson County Press, and copies of the exchanges he admired were carefully wrapped around his body in the coffin.

BREAKS IN FIRE ALARM

LAST FRIDAY'S STORM MADE LOTS OF TROUBLE FOR LOCAL SYSTEM.

Linemen Were Busy All of Friday Night Trying to Find the Troublesome Breaks.

Almost all Friday night the men in charge of the fire alarm system of this city worked on the lines trying to locate a bad break in the wires in the east end of the city, during which time some sections of the city were without fire protection save by still alarm. There were four breaks in *the alarm system Friday and at differ*ent times during the day the gong sounded.

One of these breaks was in the west end of the city and was caused by a crane in the Pond Machine Tool Works coming in contact with the wire and breaking it. Another break was in the center of the town and required almost an hour to find it. The third break occurred almost in front of the headquarters on East Second street and was caused by the breaking off of a large limb on one of the trees, as large as the trunk of one of the regular trees which border the streets of this city. All three circuits were disabled by this break and it was almost a half hour before it was repaired.

The most serious break of that day was in the east end of the town and was discovered at about 2 o'clock. At 4 o'clock the break was still hidden but by Saturday the lines were in perfect working order again.

ANOTHER FACTORY.

Company to Manufacture Aniline Expects to Locate Its Factory in This City.

Councilman E. E. Pray, of this city, Fred G. Lasher, of New York, and J. Wesley Johnson, also of this city, compose the principals of a company engaged in the manufacture of aniline colors, which are made of coal tar. This company has been manufacturing these colors in an experimental way at Hackensack during the past two years, and it is now proposed to build a factory in the West End of the city.

The company has purchased a plot of ground consisting of nearly forty acres and it is hoped to cover this with buildings in the course of time. The aniline colors are used principally in the manufacture of wallpapers although they are used to some extent in the manufacture of lithographic inks.

At present the company does not care to state the exact location of the land purchased, but work will be started within a short time on the erection of buildings. In time a great many men will be employed.

TO REPLACE OCTAGONAL HOUSE

PERMIT ISSUED FOR A FINE RESIDENCE TO COST $6,000.

Other Permits Issued by Building Inspector T. O. Doane Last Week.

A permit was granted recently in the office of Building Inspector T. O. Doane to Mrs. Hanna Pope, of this city, to erect a residence at the corner of East Fifth street and Park avenue where the picturesque octagonal house once stood but which was demolished recently. The new residence will cost about $6,000 and will correspond very well when completed with the other residences on that block.

The house will be a frame structure and will be three stories in height. It will have large and commodious living apartments on the second floor and on the first floor the plans call for a comfortable arrangement of the parlors, reception halls, kitchen and dining room. The architect is William H. Clum and the contracting carpenter will be W. H. Brokaw, of this city. That of the corner of Clinton avenue and West Third street there will be erected another house, the owner of which will be J. D. Loiseaux, of 535 East Second street. The architect for this house will be C. C. VanNuys, and the carpenter and mason will be W. D. Bird and W. M. Daly respectively.

At 735 Berkley avenue, David Hand will soon begin operations for the erection of a residence adjoining his present residence at 737 Berkley avenue. The architect and carpenter will be Edward Willis. This house, when completed, will be one of the most handsome in town.

A permit to move a house from 510 Division street to 810 West Sixth street was granted to James A. Totten, yesterday, by the building inspector. When the house has been placed in its position there will be many alterations made to it which will make of it a modern dwelling. The architect will be Fred Lancaster and the mason will be W. C. Mundy.

The taxes of property owners in the borough will be due December 20, one month later than they are in this city.

FURTHER STEPS TO ORGANIZE

Presidents of Local Trades Unions in Session Regarding Proposed League.

THE FOREIGN QUESTION

Committee Appointed to Complete Plans for Organization of the League of American Workingmen—Movement Only Against Those Who Are Going Back.

The presidents of several of the trades unions in this city met Tuesday in Trades' Council Hall for the purpose of carrying out the idea of organizing the League of American Workingmen. Recently, a meeting was held, when the first steps were taken in the matter and more progress was made last evening. A. C. Rogers, who was one of the originators of the movement, was made temporary chairman and John Hartpense was chosen temporary secretary. Mr. Rogers briefly outlined the purpose of the new organization, the principal object being to secure for the American workingmen protection from unnaturalized citizen labor. The new organization wants every man coming to this country from foreign shores to declare his intention and take out papers.

Remarks about the proposed organization were then made by William Bodine, Alexander B. Stills, W. C. Tracy, Charles Trottner and James D. Brown, representing several of the unions in the city. Each one expressed himself in favor of the general plan, so long as it does not become political and does not interfere with the work of other unions.

Mr. Brown talked at some length regarding labor and labor unions and referred to the troubles in the mining regions. In this connection he took exception to the presence of Rev. John McMurrray at the first meeting of the new organization. He said that the reverend gentleman's statements at that meeting were not in accordance with the facts concerning the miner and his condition as Mr. Brown knows them. Mr. Brown also took exception to Mr. McMurray's recent sermons on this same topic. He said that his father is a miner and had worked at this trade for years. He therefore knew what he was talking about.

All the speakers were very anxious that it should be clearly understood that only unnaturalized citizens are the ones objected to, the class which comes to this country, works awhile and then goes home to live a life of ease on what has been made in this country. It was agreed that neither race, color or creed should be a barrier to membership, and it was suggested that merchants, as well as tradesmen, should be allowed to join the organization, provided they would take the pledge not to encourage the hiring of unnaturalized labor.

In order to further the interest of the organization a committee of five was appointed to prepare plans to complete the same and report at a meeting to be held Tuesday evening, January 6. The committee is as follows: William Bodine and William Langer from the carpenters; James D. Brown, from the machinists; W. C. Tracy, from the painters; Alexander B. Stills, from the barbers.

During the meeting Mr. Rogers read a letter from H. C. Adams, of Chicago, who read a clipping in a Chicago paper regarding the organization and expressing a desire to join the same. He will be communicated with and probably made organizer for the State of Illinois.

Recital by Pupils.

A piano recital was given Monday evening by some of the pupils of Miss Anna O. Marsh, of Madison avenue. The programme was very interesting, showing some of the elementary work of the younger pupils as well as the technical skill and musical rendering of selections by the more advanced pupils. The parents of the pupils were present and were very much pleased with the entertainment.

Another of Same Name.

William Robinson, who was arraigned before Recorder Doud Monday evening, is not the person of the same name who lives in East Second street, this city. He is a resident of the borough, where he was arrested.

Miss Elsie D. R. Seffern, of Sycamore avenue, is spending a few weeks in Connecticut.

WILL NOT ACCEPT CALL

REV. J. W. RICHARDSON WILL NOT GO TO STAMFORD, CONN.

Rumors That Present Pastor of Park Ave. Baptist Church Might Return to Former Pastorate.

There has been more or less rumor that Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, was about to receive a call to return to the pastorate of the Baptist church at Stamford, Conn., but such rumors are now set at rest by the announcement in "The Daily Advocate," of Stamford, that Mr. Richardson will not accept such a call if offered.

The following article from that paper of Monday, is of special interest:

"It was probable till today that the Baptist church would extend a call to Rev. J. W. Richardson, of Plainfield, N. J., to again become pastor. No definite action has been taken in this respect yet. No church meeting has been called to consider the matter of choosing a pastor, and the present plan of having different ministers in charge of the services Sundays will be followed for some weeks. It can be stated, however, with definiteness, that there was a movement on foot in the church to secure Mr. Richardson, and that the members were almost unanimous in wishing to extend a call to him. If a church meeting were held yesterday to consider the subject, it is quite probable that a unanimous call would be extended, and, so it was said in Baptist circles today, there would not be any more than five or six votes in the negative at most.

"Before leaving Stamford today, Mr. Richardson informed an officer of the church that he would not accept a call to return to the pastorate here.

"Rev. J. W. Richardson, it will be remembered by many was pastor of the church several years ago and attracted considerable attention during his pastorate. He was succeeded about ten years ago by Rev. C. L. Rhoades, who was pastor for about five years, being succeeded by Rev. George Braker, who resigned a few months ago.

"Mr. Richardson conducted the morning and evening services in the church yesterday, and preached each time. There were large congregations present, especially in the evening. Many were saying today that the attendance in the evening had never been so large since Mr. Richardson was pastor."

MERRY TIME COMING.

Met Suddenly.

A trolley car, of the Netherwood line, crashed into a delivery wagon belonging to W. W. Warnock, at the corner of Richmond street and Putnam avenue, shortly after 6 o'clock, last Tuesday. The vehicle was almost completely demolished and the driver, Augustus Rhodes, received a severe shock. He was also slightly cut by broken glass. The horse escaped injury.

Let Them Go.

William Hart, arrested for drunkenness by Patrolman Higgins, last evening, received a suspension of sentence from City Judge Runyon, this morning. A similar disposition was made with William Emmons, who was arrested for intoxication by Patrolman Vanderweg, yesterday afternoon.

MISS LUCKEY WEDDED IN PRETTY CEREMONY

Marriage to Chas. E. Hazeltine Took Place at Bride's Home on Craig Place.

A RECEPTION FOLLOWED

THE CEREMONY WAS PERFORMED IN A BOWER OF FLOWERS.

Those Who Made Up the Bridal Party—Rev. C. E. Herring Was Officiating Clergyman—Will Reside in Plainfield—Many Gifts.

In the presence of a large number of guests at her home on Craig place, Miss Mary Adelaide Luckey, the daughter of Mrs. Robert Luckey, was united in marriage to Charles Edward Hazeltine, of Westervelt avenue, this city, at 7:30 last Tuesday. It was one of the prettiest home weddings which has been held in the borough this winter. The home was very tastefully decorated for the occasion. After the ceremony a reception was held at which the bride and her mother received until almost train time when the couple left for an extended honeymoon.

At the time set for the ceremony to be performed Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, took his position beneath a beautiful bower of potted palms and ferns into which flowers were interwoven and awaited the approach of the bridal party which entered the front parlor from opposite directions. The bride, attended by her maid-of-honor and bridesmaids, approached the minister from the back parlor while the groom and his attendant entered the drawing room from the reception hall. They met at a chancel formed of white ribbons and the solemn wedding vows said by them taken, and the bride was given in marriage by her mother.

The bride was gowned in an exquisite costume of peau de chine, trimmed with very handsome lace. She carried a large shower bouquet of white bridal roses. Her maid-of-honor, Miss Ella Ryder, of Jamaica, L. I., a cousin of the bride, was attired in a gown of white silk mull over white taffeta and carried a pretty bouquet of violets. The bridesmaids, the Misses Gertrude and Mande Hazeltine, sisters of the groom, were lawn dress mull over taffeta. The best man, Frank Hazeltine, a brother of the groom, escorted the bridegroom into the parlor.

The wedding march from Mendelssohn was played by Miss Alberta E. Waterbury and Walter Mosher, of this city.

Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served after which a reception was held until train time when Mr. and Mrs. Hazeltine were driven to the depot in a gaily decorated coach where they left for a two weeks' wedding tour for the south. Upon their return to this city they will make their home here for the present.

There were about 200 guests present from this city, New York, Brooklyn, Morristown, Jamacia, L. I., and other cities. The array of presents received by the newly married couple was very handsome and included articles of furniture, jewelry, cut glass and many other useful and fancy articles.

NEWARK IMPROVEMENTS.

Jersey Central is Building Bridge Over Pennsylvania Tracks.

After a delay of nearly six months the steel for the New Jersey Central's new bridge over Pennsylvania tracks at Newark has arrived and the work of putting the girders in place will now go on without interruption. The girders for the most easterly span are four in number and are about 110 feet long. Each weighs 160,000 pounds, and they are the longest single piece girders ever built. This bridge will have three tracks across it. The westerly span is constructed of girders ninety-eight feet in length and the work incident to placing them in position will proceed without interruption so long as the weather conditions permit.

Somerville, Dec. 17—There is now every prospect of this town securing the location of a hardware specialty concern here. At a meeting of the Board of Trade Monday night it was reported that representatives of the concern, who had visited the town, were very favorably impressed with its advantages and thought it was as good a place as any they could locate in.

V. T. VanFleet said he had visited the present works of the company at Boonton and examined the books at their request. He said they had paid out $2,700 a month in salaries and shipped over a carload of goods a day. A committee will confer with the company in a few days.

MUST CLEAN WALKS.

If Snow Isn't Removed in Twenty-Four Hours, City Does Work.

Street Commissioner Gavett says that the recent storms have been in many respects different from most winter storms. After the fall of snow there was a warm spell and the snow and ice softened considerably, but during one afternoon the temperature took a drop and froze everything solid again. For this reason and at the suggestion of Mayor Jenkins, the street commissioner did not push the property owners too hard. However, twenty-four hours after a snow storm property owners or residents are obliged to clean their walks. If they don't the city is likely to do it for them and charge it up

Failed to Clean Sidewalks.

BUCKLE LIKELY TO PRESIDE AT COUNCIL

Councilman James F. Buckle Proposed as President of the City Council Next Year.

IS OLDEST MEMBER NOW

JAN VAN HERWERDEN HAS ALSO BEEN SUGGESTED FOR THE PLACE.

Caucus of the Council Called for Saturday Evening—Will Select a President and Probably the Chairmen of Committees.

Councilman Ralph I. Tolles has called a meeting of the member of the Common Council for 1903 for Saturday evening, when matters pertaining to the organization of the new body will practically be decided upon. One of the important questions to be decided will be that relative to the selection of a new president to succeed B. Frank Coriell, who has held that position for two years. It seems to be almost a certainty that Councilman James F. Buckle will be selected to preside over the new Council next year. This will be Mr. Buckle's last term and his colleagues are unanimous that he being the oldest member he is entitled to the honor.

Another candidate for the presidency is Councilman Jan. vanHerwerden, but one objection offered is to his candidacy is that he is away so much of the time. It is understood that should he be chosen, he would be in a position to arrange his affairs so that he could attend the meetings regularly. It has been stated in certain quarters that Mr. vanHerwerden would like to have the honor next year, but those who would vote for him, have said that should Mr. Buckle decide to accept the position, they would feel like supporting him for the reason that he is an older member, he and has had more experience in city affairs. Besides, Mr. Buckle is in Plainfield all the time and should there be any official business requiring his attention he could easily be found.

Another important matter to be decided upon at the caucus will be that in reference to the make-up of the committees. If Mr. Buckle is elected president, there seems to be excellent reasons for believing that his place on several committees, including the chairmanship of the police committee, would fall to Councilman William Glonk. He has been a member of the police committee with Mr. Buckle and his experience would be very beneficial to him should he secure the chairmanship of the police committee. As for the other committees it is difficult to say at this time just what the make-up will be, but no doubt they will all be strong ones.

DR. HOVEY TOLD OF THE ERUPTION OF MT. PELEE.

In Illustrated Lecture Given at the Chapel of Crescent Avenue Church Last Tuesday.

In spite of the rain and dampness under foot a large number of people attended the lecture given on Tuesday at the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church by Dr. E. O. Hovey, assistant curator of the American Museum of Natural History, of Washington, when he told in an interesting manner of the recent upheaval of Mt. Pelee and illustrated his talk with 100 stereopticon views of the destruction wrought by the terrible eruption in which thousands of people lost their lives.

The lecture was held in the chapel of the church and the pictures displayed upon the screen gave a very lucid idea of the loss of life and complete destruction of that part of Martinique after the eruption. Dr. Hovey was one of the first scientists on the scene after the news of the eruption reached this country and was therefore able to tell of the phenomena as viewed by an eye witness, which made the lecture all the more interesting. Great pits of boiling mud and deep crevices made by the descending lava were plainly seen on the screens and even the bodies of the unfortunate victims were shown roasted alive in the pictures.

BOARD OF TRADE TO INVESTIGATE

Committee Appointed to Visit Disposal Beds and Learn the Truth Regarding Attack.

WILL REPORT TO BOARD

Mayor Jenkins is to be Asked to Outline His Project for Public Parks at Length—Board Starts Agitation for the Big Incandescent Electric Lights for City.

Appeals made at the recent Board of Trade banquet for increased interest and activity in its affairs, were responded to with vim at the regular meeting of the organization held last Tuesday. There was a large attendance and many matters pertaining to the welfare and advancement of the city were brought up, discussed and action taken. The following applicants were elected members: Edward Rapp, John P. MacIntyre, E. S. F. Randolph, John J. Kenney, M. Armstrong, John Wirth, T. O. Doane, C. W. Krause, E. P. Turner, D. C. Irvine, R. A. Meeker, R. I. Tolles, George J. Tobin, B. F. Coriell, Elston M. French and F. A. Dunham.

Improvement in the street lighting, especially in the business district, took pre-eminence over other matters and was argued pro and con. It was the unanimous opinion of the members that better light is needed, but the sentiment seemed to be in favor of a 100 candle power incandescent lamp instead of the arc, which has heretofore been advanced.

Reasons for this were given; first, that the arc is more costly, is harder to keep burning steady and the huge shadows it casts are a source of danger to teamsters through horses becoming frightened by them; second, that the incandescent gives a much clearer light, casts no shadow and does not need a lot of rigging to be kept in place. At the conclusion of the remarks President Woolston appointed a committee composed of C. W. Runyon, Herman Schwed and M. J. Cashin, to confer with the light committee of the Common Council and also the Electric Light Company officials for the purpose of getting experimental lamps.

The North Plainfield Board of Health's attack upon the sewage disposal plant was related to the board and the members decided to investigate the matter themselves and learn the true state of affairs, as it was put "for the purpose of learning if the borough people are purveying a lie broadcast about the State." H. Otis Newman, R. A. Meeker and C. W. Krause were appointed a committee to make a personal visit to the beds, inspect them thoroughly and report at the next meeting.

Mayor Jenkins' suggestion made at the banquet in regard to public parks and a lake for the city, found decided favor with the board and it will agitate the matter. It was decided to take no action at present but to have the Mayor present at the next meeting and explain fully his ideas after which they can be better brought to the attention of the proper authorities.

The trolley company again came in for criticism, especially regarding the present system of transferring and as the next meeting a committee will be appointed to take up the matter. Other questions discussed informally were the changing of the city boundary line on the southwest in order to make it practically a square, the South Plainfield trolley matter and the giving of support to the scheme to develope the vacant plots south of the city.

No report was presented by the committee appointed at the previous meeting to secure better railroad advantages, but it was stated some would be given next month.

ONE ATTRACTIVE PLACE.

T. S. Armstrong Has Several Special Lines for the Holidays.

Few drug stores in town can boast of as complete line of ebony brietle goods as can T. S. Armstrong at his apothecary store at the corner of North and Park avenues. Today he expects to receive a fresh shipment of perfumes in anticipation of his usual heavy holiday trade in this article. Some of these perfumes are in fancy cut glass receptacles and make very attractive presents. Mr. Armstrong makes a specialty of the finest imported cigars which make very acceptable presents for men

Ancient Skyscrapers.

Numerous conflicting estimates have been made of the height of the Tower of Babel, but one fact never has been denied, and that is that it was a skyscraper. St. Jerome, in his commentary on Isaiah, says that the tower was already 4,000 paces high when God caused it to stop the work. A pace is about two and a half feet, therefore 4,000 paces must be 10,000 feet; consequently Babel was 20 times as high as the Pyramids (which are only 500 feet). Father Delmer says the tower was 91,000 feet high and that the languages were confounded because the architects were confounded, as they did not know how to bring the building to a head. Moreover, it is understood that the Chinese language of to-day was originally the same language as the high German.—N. Y. Press.

Knowledge Sharpens Sight.

Wonderful stories are often told of the powers of vision possessed by savage races. During the recent Cambridge anthropological expedition to Torres straits, the visual acuity of the natives was carefully tested, and Mr. Rivers, who made the tests, concluded that the excellence of vision shown by savages has a psychological origin; that is to say, it arises from knowing what to look for. When the European acquires familiarity with the environment he can see as far as they can. Thus the power of an Indian to tell the sex of a deer at such a distance that distinguishing features like antlers were invisible was found to rest upon his knowledge of the peculiar gait of the male deer.—Youth's Companion.

Measles and Ammonia.

A Detroit woman who labors among the poor children of the city was telling her experiences.

"One day there was a death in the neighborhood—a little girl died, and the children were visibly impressed. They told me about it in unison.

"'It was better for her, wasn't it, Missus?' one little girl said philosophically.

"'What was the trouble?' I asked.

"'O,' another spoke up, 'she had measles and ammonia on the lungs and a lot of things.'

"I was, of course, deeply impressed by the 'lot of things,' but more so by the 'ammonia on the lungs.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Tries Suicide Once a Year.

In Sharenton, France, lives a woman who on April 30, 1894, was left a widow. Her grief for her dear departed was so strong and it has continued unabated to such an extent that every year, when the anniversary of her husband's death comes round, she attempts to commit suicide. Seven times had she done so and seven times had she been prevented from carrying out her object. This year she lit her chafing dish for the eighth time, and again the neighbors rushed into the room in time to prevent the rash act. When restored to consciousness the woman exclaimed: "My darling, you won't lose anything by waiting. Wait until next year."—London Mail.

The Mystery of Walamo.

Some interesting additions to our knowledge, not only of geography but of anthropology, may be expected from the expedition of Mr. W. Fitzhugh Whitehouse, an American, and Lord Rindlip, an Englishman, into Abyssinia and the regions of the Upper Nile. Among the curious places to be explored is the district of Walamo, reputed to be infested with devils. Mr. Whitehouse intends to spend a month in Walamo with the intention of discovering the reason why the natives of the country believe that it is possessed by demons.—Youth's Companion.

The Proper Term.

Martha, the colored washerwoman, was complaining of her husband's health to one of her patrons.

"He's very porly, ma'am, ve'y po'ly. He's got dat exclamatory rheumatism."

"You mean inflammatory, Martha. Exclamatory is from exclaim, which means to cry out."

"Yes, mam," answered Martha, with conviction, "dat's what it is. He holera all de time."—Christian Register.

An Idiotic Practice.

The tipping habit oversteps the limit when a man growls all through a meal at the inattention of the waiter, and then "turns to" and fees him as a reward for his abominable service. The tipping system should at least have the extenuating excuse of being reformatory, by making a fee dependent upon good service.—From "Vest Pocket Confidences," in Four-Track News.

Sherlock Holmes Again.

Again the great detective was equal to the emergency. "Don't tell me that you are married," he hissed; "I see that you are only engaged!"

"How do you know?" faltered the young man.

"Because every cigar you offered me from your vest pocket was broken!"—Stray Stories.

Round This Great Round World

Little Letters from Correspondents in Many Lands.

German Ceramic Industry.

According to a German journal, the German manufacturers of earthenware are contemplating an amalgamation, at least as far as the sale of their wares is concerned. Although the output and sales of the manufactures of earthenware have increased, the net result has been rather unsatisfactory during the past few years, owing to the fact that the selling prices have constantly receded, and in many cases have been less than the cost of production. Of course, there is a difference between those factories producing higher grade ware and those manufacturing staple articles for the masses. The former are always able to obtain relatively better prices for their goods, while the business of the latter remains very unsatisfactory. Several years ago, about 30 earthenware manufacturers combined to regulate the selling price of their products, but this combination did not prove effective. On the contrary, the result was the founding of a number of independent companies which underbid the combination. In order to meet the prices of these outsiders, the trust factories sorted their wares more carefully, and, evading the spirit of the agreement, though not the letter, sold a large part of their product as "refuse ware" at greatly reduced prices, hoping thereby to crush the competition from without. This, however, resulted in a general cutting of prices, and to-day the competition between the companies belonging to the trust is just as keen as between the trust and the independent companies. The result is that a number of large companies have gone into the hands of a receiver, others are liquidating voluntarily, and still others are continuing to operate their works at a loss.

On this account, it is intended to form a new combination, in order that the capital invested in the various works may be made to pay at least a reasonable interest. It is not intended to force up the selling prices unreasonably, but merely to prevent an invasion of the spirit of the combination.—Walter Schumann.

New Coal Fields in Belgium.

A year or more ago a new soft coal basin was discovered in the province of Luxemburg, Belgium, north of the city of Liege. Since then extensive soundings have been made over a considerable territory. The deposit underlies many square miles of the northern part of Belgium and the southern part of Holland. One of the veins, at a depth of 1,000 to 1,500 feet below the surface, is from 15 to 17 feet thick, and of excellent quality of coal. It is estimated that this new coal field contains more than 500,000,000 tons of a good grade of coal, and extensive preparations are being made to open the mines. The government proposes to enlarge the canals in that part of Belgium, dig new ones, and open new lines of railroads. The working of these mines will be more difficult and expensive than of the other mines of Belgium, because of their depth and the presence of more water; but it is thought that this will be more than counterbalanced by the thickness of the veins.—A. A. Winslow.

Coal Resources of Australia.

According to reports made by the government geologists of Victoria and Queensland, there are no less than 62,000 miles of coal-bearing country in the eastern states of Australia. The probable quantity of coal available (after deducting one-third for loss), in seams ranging from two to 27 feet in thickness, is not less than 240,448,053,000 tons. In Victoria, there are beds of tertiary coal over 200 feet thick, and extensive seams of oil-bearing shale exist in New South Wales and Tasmania. The coal in New South Wales is estimated at 115,346,880,000 tons; in Queensland, at 83,310,000,000 tons; in Victoria, at 32,388,213,440 tons; in Tasmania, at 3,265,920,000 tons; in West Australia, at 1,045,440,000 tons. The royal commission on the coal resources of Great Britain computed that the quantity available in the British Isles was 146,480,000,000 tons, which amount, added to that of Austria, makes the enormous total of 286,928,053,000 tons. It would appear from these figures that the British empire produces about one-third of the coal mined in the world.—F. W. Goding.

The Khabarovsk-Sretensk Railway.

The important extension of the Trans-Siberian railway from Khabarovsk to Sretensk has been completed from the first-mentioned terminus to Mikhailovo-Semeuovskaya, a distance of 149.8 miles. The most difficult part of the enterprise—the crossing of the Khingan mountain range—will now be commenced, and will give considerable trouble to the engineers. In order to hasten the completion of the whole line, which will cover a distance of 765.5 miles, the constructive work between Sretensk and Pokrova, from which place the track will run direct to Blagovestchensk, will be immediately begun. The cost of the new Khabarovsk-Sretensk railway is estimated at about 40,000,000 rubles, but figure, it is claimed, will be largely exceeded in consequence of the constructive difficulties in the Khingan range.—Holloway.

BALL GOWNS OF TODAY.

For a Pretty Debutante—Handsome Toques of Fur.

Pretty ball gowns are now in demand, for the ball season is about ready to begin. The matrons and young married women can have the rich and stately velvets and brocades covered with superb lace and all the jewels they can persuade their husbands to buy for them, but, after all, they cannot look as lovely as the dainty young girl in her filmy dress of mull. White or cream or some pale pastel tint in silk mull or tulle or lisse or some other exceedingly light and transparent material should be used to make ball gowns for the young, for they have the dower of youth and freshness to embellish them.

A beautiful dress for one of the youngest and prettiest of the debutantes of the season was made of blush pink silk mull and trimmed with a handsome pearl beaded passementerie at the top of the row of three flounces. These varied in width, being short in front and deep in the back. Around each went three rows of narrow pale pink ribbon. The waist had a row of the passementerie and one ruffle below that. The belt was a twist of pale pink satin ribbon without ends.

An evening wrap is of garnet cloth of fine texture and lined all through with squirrel and bordered with a narrow roll of chinchilla. The high collar and the flat collar both have the fur.

Squirrel fur grows in favor. Many garments are entirely made of it, and it is also used as lining to various materials, from cloth to velvet. Hats are made of this soft fur, one in turban shape being exceedingly handsome. Another has the crown of velvet and the turban brim of the squirrel fur. Its delicate color enables any one to wear it. A drapery of silk or velvet and a fancy buckle at the left side finish the hat. Quite a number of rather large toques are made of fur, with wings or steel ornaments. They are very stylish. Automobile coats are made of this fur, and caps or turbans are furnished to match. They are warm and useful for the purpose, but nothing can make a squirrel garment a real dressy one. It is a fad, and the wise woman in buying a fur garment will keep to the old fashioned and refined dark furs, especially when she desires a warm wrap.

Lace dresses are the rule, and they are made in every possible manner. Some have the whole dress of heavy lace over silk of some delicate color, and others have a thin silk underskirt, and the outside is made of point d'esprit, in white or tint. This is dotted and usually made more simply than the point applique. Gowns of this are finished at the bottom with a great fluff of lace and chiffon, held out in the accepted manner by judicious bands of featherbone tape and piping cord stitched in with the inner edge of the ruffle and the lower edge of the silk lining. Some of the flounces are made of silk muslin of rather strong quality, and over this is applied a rich design of bruges lace in a tint different from the white of the lining, like cream or ivory. Cream, ivory, butter and ecru are all seen in the superb lace dresses. White lace is seen on black, and vice versa, the chantilly and some silk guipure being best liked. There are also some beautiful appliques of silk and chiffon and embroidery. They are as fine as the heavier laces. There is a new fancy for an old and almost forgotten lace, a woolen guipure. Black silk guipure and hand run Spanish lace are also in again. The applique guipure resembles the old escurial closely and is used only as an applique.

Hats are trimmed so generally with lace that one cannot go astray if she puts a piece of good lace upon any hat she may possess. The very flat hat is the most popular, and this is made of everything in the way of lace material. These hats are covered with ribbon made into loops, or feathers, lace, flowers or fruit at will of the maker. All are fashionable and pretty. Some of the most elegant are those that are trimmed in the plainest manner. Fancy quills and a little plain drapery make some of them so stylish that one cannot but like them. Still color runs riot on most of the millinery. There are all sorts of shades. Bluets and violets in a number and many intermediate shades. The feathers and the flowers and fruit also offer cheerful tints. Many of the finest tailor suits, however, have the unaingest little touches of the material with scarcely a hint of color aside from that in the suit. Possibly a plain quill will be put on somewhere.

FOR USEFUL WEAR.

Gowns of Tweed and Homespun Short Haired Furs.

The smart gowns of cloth, homespun and tweed are arranged with fine tackings, which have the effect of cords, and strappings of silk or material. The strappings are much wider than of yore, and braiding is also employed, especially in scrolls and detached ornaments over the straps. The plaited skirts are generally quite plain or merely ornamented with rows of stitching.

Short haired furs are combined with woolen materials for gowns, and a sack bolero of fur quite short and loose

The clever woman always keeps by her two smart blouse patterns, and she can then, with the aid of a seamstress, evolve separate waists from her old gowns.

EVENING GOWNS.

They Are Distinguished by Lightness of Texture.

There is a delusive simplicity about some of the newest and most elegant evening gowns, delusive because the simple effect is really most difficult to achieve successfully and demands a fairylike lightness and delicacy of touch on the part of the worker whose task it is to manipulate the dainty gauze chiffon and crepe de chine, for diaphanous fabrics are more fashionable than ever.

The revival of early Victorian fashions with respect to bodices is very noticeable. On most of the new evening gowns the length and slope of the shoulders are emphasized even in the high sacked demitoilets, which are more fashionable than decollete gowns for all occasions save balls. This is a very sensible fashion in cold weather, for even transparent chiffon and lace yokes provide some sort of protection for the lungs and throat and, if well managed, are quite as becoming as the decollete bodices—in fact, far more so to those women who have not perfect necks.

The crepe de chine gown in the illustration is made with a yoke and double collar effect of lace. The sleeves are puffed into deep lace cuffs, and the entire gown is tucked perpendicularly.

Nickel Against Aluminum.

Yachting rumors in Great Britain say that in the building of the bull of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock III. aluminium will be used freely. On the other hand, it is believed on this side of the Atlantic that nickel steel will be the material for the body of the new defender of the America cup. Yachtsmen all over the world will watch with keen interest the test of the relative value of the two metals.

COLORS THAT ARE WORN.

Flame Tints—Daring Combinations of Bright Shades.

The new flame color is very effective when worn by the right woman, but some of the varieties of this color and of green, too, are horrible when worn by all sorts and conditions of people. This is the worst of a popular craze or a new shade.

Colors are growing stronger, and this we owe to eastern art and the craze for everything Japanese.

Never attempt daring color combinations in cheap materials. Bright shades in cheap materials are invariably crude and lose all the richness of light and shade. Different tones of black blended together are very effective. Panne is of course the order of the day, as its glory can be toned down by somber black chiffon, lightened again perhaps by a curious kind of gauze. The touches of jet seen on so many smart black gowns aid in relieving the somberness.

At least one black gown is indispensable to every woman, be she wealthy or in modest circumstances.

The black taffeta blouse has a tucked yoke and undersleeves of black mousseline de soie, and there are, in addition, touches of black chantilly lace.

FASHION NOTES.

Ridiculous Millinery—Lace Blouses Over Pale Colors.

Most of this year's millinery is pretty, but there is some that verges on the ridiculous—for instance, the so-called picture hats when they have exaggerated streamers hanging down the back; like widows' weeds. That is the worst of such a mode; if soon degenerates into a caricature. Lace blouses are all the rage, and they are made over the palest of satin linings, often these lace blouses being delicately jeweled in spray effects. One of the prettiest color combinations is pale pink covered with yellow lace and fastening with little rhinestone buttons.

Nowadays transparent yokes are giving way to high lace and chiffon jabots. Frenchwomen are all wearing this way with three little grouse paws and tails. The loose sack coat of squirrel is often lined with ermine and has a wide shawl collar of the same fur. This makes a very artistic garment.

The expensive Russian sable is closely imitated in this year's dyes of fine baum marten.

Next to the sack coat, the blouse style postilion back is the favorite style in fur coats.

The illustration shows one of these garments. It is made of sable with wide revers, a blouse front and a tight fitting postilion back.

WALKING SUITS.

Sibellines and Speckled Materials. Motor Coats.

Walking suits are made with the skirts just clearing the ground. The materials are usually speckled tweeds or sibelines.

There is no doubt the craze for motoring has given a great impetus to the fur trade. Many of the motor coats have fur hoods large enough to throw entirely over the hat or toque. Those that are long have the fullness of the skirt of the coat secured by buttons or loops on either side of the front, which certainly makes them very comfortable wear, for they are ready to let in and out at will. The sack shape and the three-quarter length characterize the newest garments of the moment, while pouched bodices are the mode for gowns.

Nearly all the jackets for out of door wear accompanying gowns are made wide enough to cover the chest well, and a great many have capes on the shoulders. Deep cuffs to the sleeves are still in favor.

The brown tailor made in the cut has a three-quarter length coat trimmed with applications of panne. The collar is especially smart.

Fur stoles are growing wider and even flatter. One of the newest ways of wearing them consists in tying the stole in a loose knot directly over the bust and letting the ends hang unevenly.

Muffs are very flat and larger than ever; they are trimmed with paws and tails.

The graduated collar with long stole ends is another smart style. Baum marten is especially effective made up

The smartly dressed woman cannot have too much lace on her garments, and there is hardly any kind which is not fashionable. Old embroideries are invaluable worked on any kind of muslin or jaconet. They are laid on a backing of silk muslin and then interrun with gold thread, sometimes mingled with spangles.

SEPARATE WAISTS.

They Must Harmonize With the Skirts With Which They Are Worn.

Although separate waists are not considered as dressy as gowns, yet a great many of them are worn for theater and informal dinner wear. The blouse, however, should not be of a contrasting shade, but should match as nearly as possible or at least harmonize with the skirt. Pretty all black and all white waists look smart with corresponding black and white skirts.

Plain skirts of white broadcloth are very useful to wear with white chiffon or lace waists, and these skirts are economical as well, for they admit of much cleaning.

Some of the prettiest evening waists are of black chiffon trimmed with fine

LOVERS OF LIBERTY.

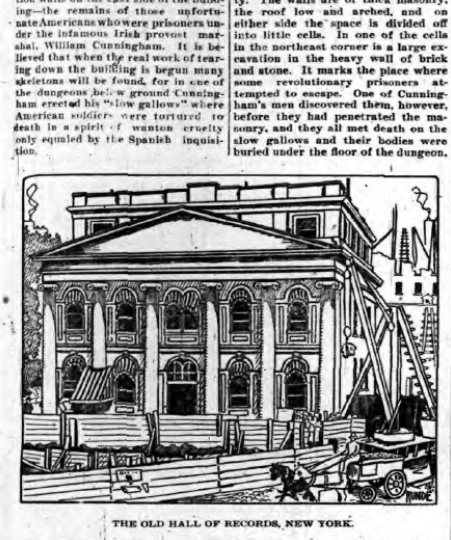
Many Were Put to Cruel Death in Old Hall of Records.

Razing of One of New York's Historic Buildings Recalls Some of the Saddest Days of the Revolution.

[Special New York Letter.]

WITHIN six or seven weeks one of the most historic buildings in New York will be razed to the ground. It is the old hall of records, which was known during the time of the revolution as the provost prison. Directly in the line of the Rapid Transit Tunnel, on the east side of City Hall park, it is necessary that the solid walls of masonry, which have been the scene of terrible tragedies and untold miseries, shall be demolished.

Across the way on Chambers street a magnificent new hall of records has been erected of white stone and marble which is in strange contrast to the old building with its tall Doric pillars reaching to the projecting roof and its dull, grim walls and dingy windows. But with the passing of the old prison the unhappy days of '76 are recalled to us. Only the other day workmen unearthed human bones in digging in the trench near to the foundation walls on the east side of the building—the remains of those unfortunate Americans who were prisoners under the infamous Irish provost marshal, William Cunningham. It is believed that when the real work of tearing down the building is begun many skeletons will be found, for in one of the dungeons below ground Cunningham erected his "slow gallows" where American soldiers were tortured to death in a spirit of wanton cruelty only equaled by the Spanish inquisition.



THE OLD HALL OF RECORDS, NEW YORK.

The original hall of records was built in 1756 as a suburban prison and later on during the early days of the city, when the law for imprisonment for debt was in full force, many an unfortunate debtor was confined within its gloomy walls. Its appearance then, however, was far different from to-day. The Doric columns now in the front and rear were not then in place, and the third story has not been added.

After the evacuation of the city by the British and till the year 1832 the building was used as a debtors' prison. At that time its convenient location to the city hall resulted in its being transferred into a hall of records, for which purpose it has been used up to the present. It was the decision to make it one of the buildings of the city that brought about the change in its architectural construction. It was at the time when the custom house and subtreasury were being constructed and stately Parthenons were being erected along the Hudson. So, in keeping with the architectural ideas of the period, the stiff columns were added, along with another story.

Just before the old prison was turned into a hall of records, however, another chapter was to be added to the long chronicle of sufferings that had been endured within its walls. In 1832 occurred the cholera epidemic in New York, and, on account of the lack of proper accommodations, the newly-altered building was utilized as a hospital for several months.

But it is the revolutionary period in which we are the most interested. The building was the principal military prison of the English, although several churches, sugar houses, Columbia college and the hulks of old ships of war were also pressed into service. A few days ago the hull of one of these old prison ships—the Jersey—was discovered in the Brooklyn navy yard. It was buried 20 feet beneath the soil upon which is being built the ways for the new battleship Connecticut.

But "the Provost," as the old Hall of Records prison was called, was reserved for the most important captives of war. Among the famous American prisoners confined there was Ethan Allen. Cunningham, who was placed in charge, rapidly developed into a most cruel and oppressive tyrant. Not only was he insulting and coarsely insolent, but he devised some of the most exquisite forms of torture ever known in fiendish ingenuity. Among the fearful instruments to "break the wills of the stubborn Yankees," as he expressed it, were the cat-o'-nine-tails, the searing irons and the slow gallows. In the basement of the building may still be seen a low vaulted arch. It was there where the slow gallows was erected, and never was a more terrible machine of torture invented. It was different from the ordinary instrument of death in the fact that it permitted the noose to slowly tighten around the necks of the victims, thus prolonging the frightful agony of strangulation.

If one will take a walk through the dark basement of the building he will see on every hand the signs of cruelty. The walls are of thick masonry, the roof low and arched, and on either side the space is divided off into little cells. In one of the cells in the northeast corner is a large excavation in the heavy wall of brick and stone. It marks the place where some revolutionary prisoners attempted to escape. One of Cunningham's men discovered them, however, before they had penetrated the masonry, and they all met death on the slow gallows and their bodies were buried under the floor of the dungeon.

It was to such acts of atrocity as these that Cunningham doubtless referred in this statement, said to have been made by him on his death bed at Tyburn, England, shortly after he returned to that country:

"I shudder to think of the murders I have been accessory to, both with and without orders from government, especially while in New York, during which time there were more than 2,000 starved in the churches by stopping their rations, which I sold. There were also 275 American prisoners executed and hung without ceremony, and then buried in the Black Pioneer of the Province."

Cunningham called the northern part of the second floor of the prison "Congress Hall," in a spirit of irony, because it was there he herded the bulk of his prisoners. In this apartment they were compelled to lie so close together on the floor that when one became tired and desired to turn over he had to awaken the others, and the word for all to turn at once was given.

When the happy days of the British evacuation of New York came there were still several prisoners in the old building, and as Cunningham and his deputy, O'Keefe, were preparing to leave hurriedly, one of the Americans cried out:

"What is to become of us?"

"You may go to the devil!" ejaculated the provost, as he threw the prison keys to the floor.

"No, thank you," was the response of the American. "We have had enough of your company in this world."

In 1830, when the "provost" was turned into a debtor's prison, the bell, which had hung in its cupola for over three-quarters of a century, was taken down and, after doing service in the Bridewell, was presented to the Naiad Hose company in Beaver street.

It will require several weeks of incessant labor to transfer the records from the old hall to the new. Few realize the extent of the work in keeping the records of the metropolis. There are no figures available as to the actual number of papers recorded until after 1868. An indication of the business done by the register may be obtained, however, when it is known that during the last year the total number of papers and instruments which passed through the recording department, and which represent hundreds of millions of dollars, was 118,936. This number 42,976 were recorded in liber 5 by the folio writers and 75,614 were chattel mortgages.

HUSBAND S. VED HER

Deed of Valor Performed by Count von Goetzen.

Germany's African Viceroy Takes Good Care of His Wife, When Attacked by a Giant, Blood-thirsty Panther.

[Special Berlin (Germany) Letter.]

THE vast German possessions in Africa are ruled by a governor general, who exercises autocratic functions over natives and settlers alike. The present viceroy is Count von Goetzen, the husband of a charming American woman, who was Mrs. William Matthew Lay, of Washington, and before that Miss Lowney, of Baltimore. Her position in German Africa is frequently likened to that of the wife of the viceroy of India, Lady Curzon, nee Leiter, of Chicago; but, as a matter of cold fact, it is even more consequential. The countess is queen of half a million more subjects than the regent of Bavaria, and the kings of Wuerttemberg and Saxony combined reign over fewer people than her ladyship. When she rides in parade ten regiments of well-trained troops lower their colors before her.

Count von Goetzen has been a traveler all his life, and his bravery has earned for him many medals, both at home and abroad. His latest feat of courage was saving his wife from the fate of being eaten alive by a giant panther.

His was a deed of prodigious valor—having no firearms, he drove off the maneater with a whip of rhinoceros skin that chanced to be in his carriage.

Count von Goetzen is the absolute ruler of a territory embracing 1,470,413 square miles and 6,550,000 of blacks. The adventure here told occurred about a month ago, in the evening, on the Pugu road, about one mile outside of Dar-es-Salam, capital of the German African empire, as the count and countess were returning from a visit to friends living on a plantation near the edge of the virgin forest, as hour or so farther in the interior,

COUNT VON GOETZEN ATTACKING THE PANTHER.

they drove in an open phaeton, the box of which had been lowered to allow the count to handle the reins from his accustomed place. Their team was a pair of grays, light in color, and quite recently imported. Having heard that wild animals will rarely attack persons clad in white, the kaiserin of the countess two white carriage horses, with a graceful note saying he hoped she would be "able to drive them herself, as they were gentle and proof against surprises by denizens of the African forest."

The imperial surmise was quite correct, as will be seen presently.

The countess had just remarked that after the next turn in the road they would see the lights of their palace, outside the city, when something dark bounded from the bushes into the middle of the street, causing the horses to halt and rear.

"At the same moment," said the countess afterwards, "I felt a painful twitching at the roots of my hair—yes, I was frightened, what woman would not be under the circumstances? While the count threw the reins to me and told me to hold on for dear life, I perceived two faint yellow glimmers piercing the darkness. My first thought was: 'A lion—the natives had often told me of the unbearable brightness of the lion's eyes, of the fairy lights of his metallic glance. It made me shudder, but nevertheless I looked at the object of my terror with a keen air, sinking my eyes in his. I had read once that it is not impossible to hypnotize a wild animal that way."

The count says the animal was no more than five feet from his horses' heads when they stopped and refused to go further; there the brute stood stock-still, regarding the trotters with eyes like fire balls.

The viceroy continues: "The rearing mares had smashed the lantern in front and I was obliged to go to the rear of the carriage to get the one fastened there. It was of the American, electrical kind, giving out a big, white light. When lantern in hand, I again passed by my wife, she handed me a heavy whip of rhinoceros, which, on that day, I had confiscated on one of the outlying plantations, as it is against the law to use this terrible instrument of punishment, that, at one time, no native chief or slaveholder could do without.

"The whip weighs about fifteen pounds and many a poor black devil's back has been broken with one of its kind. To reassure my wife I said, in advancing: 'If it's a dog he won't hold up the viceroy's carriage a second time after I get through with him.' But I knew all the time that it wasn't a dog and was upbraiding myself for having gone without pistols. A kingdom for a Mauser revolver! such as I had at home.

"Such and similar thoughts passed through my mind as I jumped forward, whip in right, lantern in left. Then I suddenly remembered the paragraph from the emperor's letter, accompanying the gift of horses. 'I must not object the view of the animals,' I concluded hastily, 'they may, after all, prove an element of protection.'

"The light of the lantern now fell full upon the object in the road. First I saw only the head of the beast. It was as big as a lioness's, but I recognized at once the panther's outlines. As I approached nearer the beast raised his tail, a powerful appendage, round like a stick, and towering two or three feet above his head. The animal himself appeared to be some three feet high by three and a half feet to four feet long.

"I struck him a terrible blow with the rhinoceros whip across the face, following it up with another and yet another across the shoulders. There upon, to my surprise, the panther turned tail without offering any violence, though as the whip first descended he showed a formidable array of teeth and his pointed tongue. He turned tail and ran sideways, I after him, raining blows upon his back, some of which, I am sure, took effect. Next I heard the young wood lining one side of the road creak and rustle. The panther had leaped into the thicket and made off in a hurry."

Then the count jumped into the carriage, took the reins from his wife's hands, and, giving her the lantern, told her to wave it in order to keep off possible other intruders of the sort just encountered. But the horses were too frightened to move at once, and it took a lot of persuasion and no end of whipping to make them go. Once coaxed to a gallop, they flew along the road at breakneck speed. "No troika chased by wolves ever made better time," says the countess.

The viceroy is undecided as to what circumstances he shall attribute their marvelous delivery, and, courageous man that he is, he hesitates about taking too much credit to himself. "The color of the horses, my lantern, the fact that the beast was crammed with food—all worked together," he said to his military household upon reaching home. That is probably true, but the person with the rhinoceros whip, advancing upon a 300 pound king of the wilderness as if he was an unruly house dog, was evidently the decisive figure in the one sided battle.

"But don't forget the countess," wrote Von Goetzen to Kaiser Wilhelm; "who but a nervy American woman would have managed those plunging horses at the crucial moment? Ninety-nine out of a hundred women would have fainted, the hundredth would have jumped out to seek salvation in flight, or would have run me over to get away. Not so her excellency. She held the horses in a firm grip, and at the same time coaxed and encouraged them with the best German at her command. Then, as we drove home, I standing upright in the carriage to keep the frenzied animals under control, the countess leaned far out waving the lantern, once as a protection against other wild beasts that might follow us and again as a signal for our servants."

"I really had no time to be afraid, except for a few moments, when looking at the roots of the hair, but I confess it makes me shudder when I think of the savage cry the panther uttered as he leaped into the bushes," writes the countess.

"The danger that threatened the first lady in the land and the way in which she conducted herself on this trying occasion," say the kaiser's reports, "have increased, if possible, the respect in which her excellency is held by natives and whites alike."

MIGHTY MEAN DEAL.

Engineered by the Champion Mean Woman of Washington.

Her Dearest Enemy Got the Dress She Wanted Herself and Then She Bought Another to Get Even with Her.

The address of the champion mean woman of Washington doesn't make any difference, but for the sake of convenience she is designated in this story as Mrs. Gethunk, by the Washington Star.

Mrs. Gethunk's dearest feminine enemy is another young matron who lives next door in the same row of houses. Mrs. Howsad will about fit her for the purposes of this narrative.

A few weeks ago a Washington supplement came to Mrs. Howsad for sale in one of its windows a couple of "Paris model" mid-time pique dresses. They were mighty tiny looking affairs, both of the dresses. One of them was a little more elaborate as to the bottom of the skirt than the other, but they were both distinctly handsome and stylish, and, being samples, they were marked at a reduced figure.

Oddly enough, Mrs. Gethunk and Mrs. Howsad, next door neighbors and perfect lives of enemies, contrived to make a dead heat of it in getting into the department store after those gowns. They both wanted the one with the more elaborate trimming around the bottom of the skirt.

The wrangle waged pretty fiercely, but as Mrs. Howsad had crossed the wire, as it were, just a fraction of a second ahead of Mrs. Gethunk, she got the slightly more desirable gown.

Mrs. Gethunk must have framed her little scheme up then and there for she took the other pique dress.

But she didn't wear it. She watched for Mrs. Howsad to emerge with hers, and she was found to confess to herself when Mrs. Howsad did appear with her "Paris model" pique that she looked mighty stunning in it.

On the following Saturday morning Mrs. Gethunk, from her kitchen window, heard Mrs. Howsad, who was in her back yard, attending to her flower beds, tell the young woman in the next yard that she intended going to the White lot that evening to listen to the Marine band concert.

When Mrs. Gethunk heard this her eyes sparkled.

"It will cost me $15, the price of the dress," one can imagine her murmuring to herself, "but it will be worth the money."

"Lily," she said aloud to her likely looking yellow maid servant, "I've bought a nice new pique dress for you, and I want you to wear it to the White lot concert this evening."

Lily executed the appropriate grin of delight, which changed to ecstacy when Mrs. Gethunk brought the unworn dress downstairs and handed it over to the servant. Lily slipped up to her room and tried the dress on, and it fitted her to a T.

"Your beau has half a day off on Saturday, hasn't he?" inquired Mrs. Gethunk of the colored girl, and the reply was in the affirmative. Lily's beau, as Mrs. Gethunk knew, was a ragtimey-looking young yellow individual who drove a doctor's buggy, and who arrayed himself like a cake walker during his leisure hours.

"Well, get him to take you to the White lot concert, then," suggested Mrs. Gethunk, and Lily hustled out to mail the young colored person to the appointment.

That afternoon Mrs. Gethunk helped to tog Lily out. She even lent the flowing green veil around Lily's hat, for she knew that Mrs. Howsad was addicted to the green veil habit, and would wear hers to the concert.

It went through magnificently, and just as Mrs. Gethunk had arranged it, Mrs. Howsad, very early, did appear on the White lot, with her husband, waiting for Mrs. Howsad to see the dusky Lily in a makeup identical with her own. She saw the meeting between the two. Except for their difference in color it might have been thought that Mrs. Howsad and Lily had dressed so as to be taken for twins.

Everybody saw it, and of course everybody grinned over it and chuckled over it. As soon as Mrs. Howsad came full tilt into the grinning Lily she flushed many tints of scarlet, and raced off the lawn for a car. She hasn't worn her pique model dress since, but Lily is more than reveling in hers.

TRUTH ABOUT VERNE.

Famous French Author Has Never Been Blind and Is in Excellent Financial Condition.

There have been so many contradictory reports recently about the condition of Jules Verne, the most famous writer of purely imaginative fiction that the world has ever known, that the correspondent of the New York World visited his home the other day at Amiens for the purpose of ascertaining the exact truth.

It has been said that Jules Verne had become blind, that his eyesight had been restored, that he was in destitute circumstances, and that he was living in comfortable retirement upon the proceeds of his successful novels.

The truth is that he has never been blind, and that he is in excellent condition financially, a man of wealth, in fact, as fortunes are estimated in Amiens. His eyes, however, have long been a source of trouble and anxiety to him.

He lives in a plain house on the Boulevard Longueville with his devoted wife, who speaks of him with great admiration and recites his virtues with eloquence. It was she who received the representative of the World.

"Yes, he has some trouble with his eyes," she admitted, "but he has not been hampered with his work, the study where he works being so arranged as to let in only a ray or light. Of course, the operation for cataract will be postponed as long as possible, on account of the danger which might result from it at his age."

In order to show how exaggerated the newspaper reports were, Mme. Verne went out on the porch and called: "Jules," and in came the novelist, in his morning gown.

Tall, with his white curly beard, he looked the picture of strength. The half-closed condition of his eyes was the only indication of his infirmity.

He is now 74 years of age. The idea that his American friends were concerned about him was gratifying to him, and he began at once to give many details about his work. He expects not to lay down his pen until he has reached his hundredth book.

MARTYR TO SCIENCE.

Tries to Get Tuberculosis to Prove His Pet Theory.

French Doctor Believes That Consumption Can Be Transferred from Cows to Human Beings and Inoculates Himself.

Paul Garbault, a young and promising French physician, has placed his life in the balance in order to prove or disprove a theory. He does not believe that tuberculosis, the most famous German scientist doctor, that the tuberculosis of men and animals is so widely different that neither can be inoculated with tubercular germs taken from the other, and in order that the world may know which is right Garbault has taken a step which he believes may end his life.

Unlike most persons who offer themselves up for the benefit of science, Garbault has gone into the matter from a positive standpoint. Heretofore, when scientists have been desirous of proving that such a condition is, or is not true, they have taken up the problem on its negative side, and have shown how various contagious and infectious diseases cannot be acquired. Then the subjects upon whom the experiments are performed are reasonably sure of passing through the ordeal and coming out safely enough. But Garbault occupies another position. He believes it is possible for man to contract consumption by inoculation from bovines.

Soon after Dr. Koch had conclusively proved one-half of his claim by demonstrating that cows inoculated with germs of human tuberculosis would not become infected with the disease, Garbault, who was intensely interested in the experiment, offered himself as a subject to test the validity of the other part of the claim—that the same results would be obtained by inoculating a human being with bovine tuberculosis. Dr. Koch was too conscientious to burden his soul with any such experiments, for, while he was convinced of the truth of his conclusion, he was not willing to go to extremes in proving it.

Garbault, however was not so easily satisfied. He argued that the world should know wherein Dr. Koch's arguments were correct and wherein they were lacking in fact. He was young, in perfect health, had received the degree of doctor of natural sciences, and had held the position of chief of the researches in zoology and comparative anatomy at the University of Bordeaux. Therefore when he offered himself to Dr. Koch for purposes of demonstration there was a perceptible stir among medical men. Dr. Koch consistently refused to consider the offer and Garbault continued his investigations to show that the theory of the German scientist with reference to tuberculosis inoculation was incorrect. When he offered himself to science he was firmly convinced that he would catch the disease and in all probability would not be cured. He spent a year or more in further research of cases of tuberculosis with the avowed purpose of refuting the Koch thesis.

Even then he was not satisfied. He still believed that a practical test should be made, yet he was not willing to ask for or accept volunteers, so in order that the world might be made the wiser he determined that he himself should carry out the experiment which Dr. Koch had refused to attempt. With this end in view he gathered about him several eminent French physicians, and with them went to the great butchershops of La Villette in Paris to carry out the demonstration.

Baring his right arm, the courageous physician with an unflinching hand cut a wound in the forearm. Then for more than two hours he applied to the wound a fragment of a bronchial ganglion affected by tuberculosis and perfectly fresh, coming from a cow that had been seized by the sanitary inspectors of the stockyards because it was infected with the disease. At the same time a fragment of the ganglion was taken to be applied to another animal. Thus Garbault inoculated his blood with the deadly germs of tuberculosis and exposed himself to a terrible death should his claim that the theory of Dr. Koch is untrue prove to be correct. If however, the outcome is contrary to his expectations, he has already fully decided to begin anew by using a form of injection still more dangerous being that of application between the veins.

Garbault's experiment has attracted widespread attention, and medical men throughout the world are eagerly awaiting the outcome.

WHAT OTHERS THINK.

It is interesting to get a glimpse occasionally of what the people of the rest of the State think of the troubles in the Republican ranks in Somerset county. Under the caption, "More Foolishness in Somerset" the Jersey City Journal has the following to say:

"Somerset is one of the small counties in population, though it has nearly 300,000 acres of area. Its population is only 32,948. Its largest town is the borough of Plainfield, with about 5,000 population. The county seat, Somerville, has 4,843 population and these two towns have fully one-third of the entire population.

"Between these towns there has been political rivalry and jealousy, as might be expected between the slow-growing old town and a new and more progressive borough.

"The interests of the borough are more closely allied to Plainfield, in Union county, from which it is separated by an invisible boundary then with the rest of the county, and the rivalry in politics led last winter to an effort to separate the borough from Somerset, to add it to Plainfield in Union county, of which it is an outgrowth.

"This secession scheme was defeated in a referendum, but the special election added to the bitterness of the factional strife and the county went Democratic last month, though it has a normal Republican majority.

"There are 6,841 voters in the county and last year these divided into 3,490 Republicans, 3,181 Democrats and 175 Prohibitionists. Last month 616 Republicans failed to vote for their party, and 214 of them seem to have voted for the Democratic candidates.

"This was the net result of the factional strife in the Republican party in the county. It was not satisfactory to the party in the rest of the State and it could not have been satisfactory to the majority of the Republicans in Somerset.

"It is proved that the leaders of the faction fight would see the folly of their proceedings and devote their time between now and the next election to repairing the damage they had done, but this belief does not appear to have been justified.

"The latest move made by the Somerville faction is to drop Newton B. Smalley from the Republican county committee.

"Mr. Smalley has been identified with one of the factions and is Mayor of Plainfield borough. It may be that the men who control the county committee had cause to wish that Mr. Smalley was not a member of the committee, but then he was chosen by the Republicans of his borough and his dismissal is not calculated to add strength to the party in the county.

"There is too much of this peanut business in the squabbles which marked the last election and Somerset county Republicans should have more sense than to continue it."

NEW NORMAL SCHOOL.

Another Normal School for New Jersey seems a necessity and the advantages of Plainfield for such an institution are again pointed out. This subject was discussed a year ago and it became apparent at that time that there was little or no chance of securing it for Plainfield. It may be, however, that the present effort will be more productive of good results.

There is certainly no city in New Jersey that is more adapted for the location of such an institution. It is generally conceded that the new Normal School will have to be in the northern section of the State and within easy reach of the centres of population in that section. While Paterson and Passaic, with some of their neighbors, have not the best of transportation facilities for reaching Plainfield, Essex and Hudson counties are near neighbors and the Jersey Central runs direct to both. There may be some sites that have perhaps a more central location but the difference is slight and more than made up by the other advantages which Plainfield offers.

For a city of its size, Plainfield has no rivals in New Jersey as an ideal suburban community. The undesirable element is almost without representation here. It is a clean city, morally and materially, a place where the young people of a Normal School could come without fear of injurious influences. There are plenty of comfortable houses where the pupils for such an institution could find board if the dormitory plan was not adopted at the start. Then there are plenty of excellent sites to be obtained at a very reasonable cost.

Plainfield has always been famous for its school system. The very atmosphere of the place seems to favor educational work. A Normal School, while essentially a State institution, would necessarily gain much from a location in such a community. The pupils would have one of the best, if not the best school system in the State, right under their personal observation. Then the local school system would have the advantages which would naturally accrue from a State Normal School. While it may happen that the school will not be located here, there can be no doubt that Plainfield has superior advantages to any other city in the State.

THE CHRISTMAS DISPLAY.

It can be truthfully said that the local shops never presented such a host of attractions for the Christmas shoppers as they do this year. The time was when Plainfield stores were not up-to-date but that time has passed. The holiday shopper no longer has to go to New York or Newark in order to find what he or she is in search of. A trip through the local stores is all that is necessary.

This enterprise on the part of the local merchants in giving such a variety of choice is the direct result of the excellent patronage that has been accorded them in past years. As soon as the public discovered that their wants were being catered to, they went to the local stores. The result is that today Plainfield has the best and most complete assortment of all kinds of wares to be found in any suburban city near the metropolis. If the present patronage is continued, then the public may expect to see even a larger display of goods in the future.

THEATRICAL.

"The Ninety and Nine" runs smoothly along on its successful career at the Academy of Music, New York, and it needs only a few nights to cover fifty consecutive performances. This means that the management are discussing souvenirs for the one hundredth night. The advance sale of seats far ahead is something wonderful for so successful a house as the Academy; and it looks now as if "The Ninety and Nine" were to divide honors with "The Homestead," the way of popularity and durability. "The locomotive scene," as it has come to be known, is of course the distinctive feature of the play in the way of a thrilling sensation, but the quiet scenes hold the audience with a grasp equally as firm as that obtained by the strong situations, in fact no story seen in recent years on the Metropolitan stage has exercised such a potent spell over its audiences. It is full of human interest, it's sunshine and shadow; and a woman's boundless love, and her steadfast enduring sense of duty, illume the darker side of the story brought about by the hero's weakness, like a beautiful ray of light. And the hero in spite of his downfall is a man to be loved; for the audience feel that "the one who was out on the hills away," will be brought back safely to the fold in the end.

"The Ninety and Nine" is being seen under the most favorable of auspices to say, so great is its appealing force, that hundreds of people have witnessed it over and over again.

The fourth month and last two weeks of the pleasing musical comedy "A Country Girl" at Daly's Theatre, New York, are announced although the piece could easily run the entire winter, judging from the crowded houses which have greeted it since the opening in September last. But existing contracts for attractions booked last year, could not be changed and the popular piece will go on the road for a short season after December 27, returning to New York later in the season to finish out its run. The 100th performance will be given next Monday evening, and Miss Ashley, Mr. Morris, Miss Freeman, Miss Marvin, Miss Deyo and the other members of the cast will unquestionably be greeted by a crowded house on this occasion and also at the extra matinee to be given on Christmas Day.

Woman in Court.

For disorderly conduct at her home on West Fourth street, Saturday night, Mrs. George Moore was arraigned before City Judge Runyon, Tuesday. The woman has been before the court before and an attempt was made to reform her but without avail. On this occasion she was given ten days straight.

Hope Preparing.

The annual Christmas entertainment of the Hope chapel Sunday-school will be held Monday evening, December 30. A committee, of which Assistant Superintendent I. W. Travell is the chairman, is completing arrangements and promises that it will be an elaborate affair.

To Fix Date Soon.

There is some talk of holding the Christmas entertainment at the Mt. Olive Baptist church on Christmas Day afternoon. The committee in charge will meet within a few days to definitely decide the matter.

The New Rochester.

Other lamps may be offered you as "just as good"—they may be, in some respects, but for all around goodness, there's only one. To make sure the lamp you get is a Rochester, look for the name on it; every New Rochester lamp has it.

We make all stoves too, just as good as the lamps; in fact, anything in oil or gas fixtures.

A CONCERT CONCLUDED FAIR

FOUR DAYS BAZAAR ENDED AT MT. OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Clever Concert Was the Concluding Event—Under Auspices of Faithful Workers of Church.

With a large attendance and a clever concert the fair, which has been conducted by the Faithful Workers of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, came to a close last Tuesday after a four night's run during which the church cleared over $75. The bazaar was held in the basement of the church on Liberty street and was largely attended each night.

The committee which had charge of the fair was as follows: Mrs. Lulu Dempsey, chairman; Mrs. E. E. Jackson, Miss Oliver, Miss Henrietta Jones, Miss Ida Taylor, Miss Sadie Taylor, Miss Sarah Jones, Miss Landon, Miss Melinda Jackson, Harry Kinslow and Henry Nelson.

Those who took part in the concert last evening were: Mrs. Lulu Dempsey, Misses Bettie Davis and Ida Mitchell, Everett Morris, Miss Annie Davis, Misses Maude and Hattie Green, W. T. Wright, Miss Alice Maynard, George Tumey and Bert Reading, Miss Hattie Thomas, Horatio Randolph, Miss Gertie Hamilton, Bert Green, Charles VanHorne, Miss Ida Vanzens, Edward Blair, Harry Mitchell and Harry Kinslow, Miss Stella Hill, Miss Lizzie Daniels, Miss Bertha Hill, Miss Lizzie Kingsley, and Miss Patsey Landers.

The booths were very tastefully decorated with the colors of the Faithful Workers Society and here and there was bunting of red, white and blue making in all an attractive appearance.

TROLLEY IN TROUBLE.

The Traffic Between Plainfield and Elizabeth Was Blocked Saturday.

The trolley company has had its troubles the last few days trying to operate cars on schedule time. For some time Saturday night traffic between this city and Elizabeth by trolley was effectually blocked. Drifts covered the tracks with snow at numerous points along the line. The cars from this city to Dunellen were able to run on half schedule until the sweeper arrived and cleared the tracks. Ice forming on the trolley wire made the electrical contact poor and the cars were unable to make very rapid headway.

Death of Mrs. Fraleigh.

Mrs. Jerusha Miller Fraleigh, a former resident of Plainfield, died at the home of her son-in-law, P. H. Oakley, of Bound Brook, December 7. Her father, Stephen W. Miller, served in the War of 1812, and once lived on farm in South Bound Brook and was a member of the Reformed church there until his removal to Plainfield where he died. She is survived by three children, as follows: Stephen L. and Charles P. Fraleigh and Mary Oakley, all of Bound Brook. The funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon, and the interment was in the Bound Brook cemetery.

Gave Them Sleighing Party.

Mr. and Mrs. John Abbott, of Park avenue and Fourth street, gathered a party of young people in their sleigh on Monday and took them for a ride to Westfield and Rahway. Among those who made up the party were: Evelyn Manley, Ethel Searing, Hattie Bailey, Adelia French, Russell Abbott, David Roger, Frank Hart, John Yoss, Albert Manley, Alfred Manley and William B[illegible].

Another Lodge.

Grand Master Workman V. W. Nash will institute another lodge of Ancient Order United Workmen Saturday. The new organization will be instituted at Washington, N. J., and a delegation from Plainfield will accompany the grand master workman to Washington to witness the interesting ceremony.

Gone to Porto Rico.

Walter N. Martin, who returned to this city several months ago, sailed Saturday for Porto Rico, where he will represent Clifton & Campbell in selling vegetables on the island. Mr. Martin was formerly in Porto Rico representing a large beef concern.

Miss Lillie Felmley, of Pleasant Run, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Mark Hipp, of West Fourth street.

ENOUGH GOAL FOR SCHOOLS

BOROUGH SCHOOL BOARD INVESTIGATES THE COAL QUESTION.

But it is Not All at the Schools—Will be Sent to Them and Stored There.

The coal question occupied part of the meeting of the Borough Board of Education at its meeting in the office of Superintendent of Schools Homer J. Wightman last Monday. It was found that there was a supply on hand sufficient to meet the demands of the schools during the winter but it was not all in the schools. It was decided to have the total supply moved to the school houses as soon as possible.

Usually the board meets on the last Monday of each month but on account of the holiday vacation it was held last evening so that the teacher's salaries might be paid before vacation. Other claims were also ordered paid. Necessary repairs to the buildings were ordered made. None of the repairs will be very extensive.

At last night's meeting it was decided to thoroughly investigate the merits of the vertical and slanting penmanship and an exhaustive report will be made at the next meeting which will be held on the last Monday evening in January. There is still some discussion about the relative merits of these two systems and it is proposed by the board to make a most thorough report on the results as shown in the improved penmanship of the pupils.

ATTACKED BY RACCOON.

Two of Them Chased Into a Stump, Where One Showed Fight.

John Mair and Lambert DeCamp, Jr., of the borough, had an exciting experience Sunday with a large raccoon in the bushes behind Hyde's Pond. They were strolling along talking when they saw two of the animals in a tree. They gave chase and cornered the animals in a hollow stump. Mair put his hand in the tree and pulled one of the animals out but the other showed fight and boldly attacked the two. They were obliged to kill the animal with a club. One of the raccoons weighed sixteen pounds. The other one weighed but ten pounds.

NEW QUARTERS.

Woman's Exchange Will Move to Watching Avenue and Fifth St.

The Woman's Exchange, which has been located on Park avenue for the past two years, is about to move into a larger store, where it will have a much better location. The exchange will move into the store in the brick building at the corner of East Fifth street and Watchung avenue.

The exchange will occupy its new quarters on the first of the year. The old quarters on Park avenue have proven too small for the needs of the institution, and it has been felt by the managers for some time that it was necessary to have larger quarters.

COLLISION OF VEHICLES.

One Was Damaged and An Occupant Thrown Out.

A collision between a hack and phaeton, the former driven by William Kennedy, occurred on Somerset street, near the bridge, Saturday afternoon. One wheel of the phaeton was dished and a Mrs. Castello, of New Market, who was driving, was thrown out. She escaped with a few bruises. Although it seemed to be a case of equal blame, Kennedy agreed to pay for the damage.

May Move Club Rooms.

The O Be Joyful Club has under consideration the removal of its headquarters from North avenue to East Front street in the building partly occupied by the Salvation Army. The matter was brought up at a meeting held last Monday.

For Children's Home.

The offering at the Crescent Avenue church, Sunday, will be for the Children's Home.

Mrs. W. W. Warnock, of Craig place, has returned from a visit with relatives at Englewood.

Miss Emma Tantam, of Central avenue, has recovered from an illness of two weeks' duration.

MISS FLEMING'S DEBUT INTO LOCAL SOCIETY

Was Formally Introduced at a Reception Given by Her Mother Saturday Afternoon.

SOCIETY IN ATTENDANCE

AFTER THE RECEPTION AN INFORMAL DANCE WAS HELD IN THE EVENING.

Residence of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fleming, of Park Avenue, Was Charmingly Arranged for the Event—The Receiving Party.

A most brilliant coming out reception was held Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fleming at 1012 Park avenue, in honor of the debut of their daughter, Miss Marjorie Fleming. The reception was held between the hours of 4 and 7 o'clock, during which time there was a constant coming and going of prominent society folk who assembled at the house to welcome the debutante into the realms of Plainfield society. During the latter part of the afternoon a dinner was served and in the evening dancing was enjoyed until a late hour by the younger set.

The house was tastefully decorated with flowers and potted palms and ferns. In the parlors the predominating colors were white and green. Carnations were interspersed with the green leaves of ferns and palms and here and there white ribbons were arranged with much taste.

Shortly after the hour set for the reception carriages began to arrive bearing well-known society folk of this and other places, notably from Boston, New York, Boston, Jersey City, Newark, and many other cities. Those who received with Mrs. Fleming and Miss Fleming were Miss Helen Brown, Miss Margaret Goddard, Miss Marie Finch, Miss Elizabeth Bowen, Miss Helen Martin, Miss Elizabeth Harman, Miss Margaret Wadsworth, Miss Edna Strong, of this city, and Miss Emily Gould and Miss Agnes Steele, of Brooklyn; Miss Mac-Cabe, of Jersey City, and Miss Katherine North, of Philadelphia.

After the reception an elaborate supper was served to the guests. The dining room decorations were very attractive and, like those in the parlors, carnations and palms were arranged in a most artistic manner.

During the evening dancing was enjoyed until a late hour, the music for which was provided by an out-of-town orchestra.

THROWN OUT OF CUTTER.

Horse Ran Away and Upset Cutter on Madison Avenue.

While Fred Ivamy, of Scotch Plains, was making some purchases in Harry Dreier's store, Monday afternoon, his horse became frightened at a passing trolley car and ran away. It dashed across the sidewalk to Madison avenue, upsetting the cutter to which it was attached and throwing out Lynus Marsh, also of the Plains. The animal was captured after a short run and Marsh was taken into Dreier's store. He was uninjured beyond a painfully bruised shoulder.

Holy Cross Fair Netted $521.61.

The fair and bazaar held at the Church of the Holy Cross on the evenings of December 2, 3 and 4 was a grand financial success. $521.61 were realized as the net proceeds of the affair and this amount will be spent in the re-decoration of the interior of the church.

Banquet for Workmen.

Columbia Lodge, No. 58, Ancient Order United Workmen, will have a banquet after its meeting Friday evening. There will also be an informal programme.

To Give Concert.

The young people of the Mt. Olive Baptist church will give a concert at the church on Wednesday evening, December 24, under the direction of the pastor.

NEW RECTOR INSTITUTED

The Ceremonies Took Place at Grace Episcopal Church Sunday Morning.

BISHOP WAS PRESENT

Keys of Church Presented to New Rector, Rev. E. V. Stevenson, by the Senior Warden—Impressive Services Were Held—Sermon by Rev. J. P. Peters.

With the impressive form and ceremony of the Episcopal church, the new rector, Rev. Edward Vicars Stevenson, was instituted at Grace Episcopal church, Sunday morning. This important event in the history of the church attracted a very large number of members and friends of the parish, who took an especial interest in the services. Every seat in the handsome edifice was filled at 10:30 o'clock, the hour for the service, when the vested choir led the way in the processional, followed by eight priests and the Bishop of the Diocese, the senior and junior wardens of the church.

Rev. Edward Vicars Stevenson.

After the choir there walked Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector emeritus, Rev. J. P. Taylor, Rev. William Bryce Morrow, Rev. Dr. W. H. Neilson, of Plainfield; Rev. Mr. Harris, of Somerville; Rev. Dr. J. P. Peters, rector of St. Michael's church, New York; Rev. Dr. John Charles Roper, of the General Theological Seminary; Rev. Edward Vicars Stevenson, the new rector; Bishop Scarborough and De Witt C. Ivins and Marion S. Ackerman, senior and junior warden of Grace church.

The services opened with morning prayer by Rev. Dr. W. H. Neilson, after which Rev. Erskine M. Rodman read the first lesson, followed by Rev. William Bryce Morrow, who read the second lesson. Dr. Neilson read the prayer, after which Bishop Scarborough took charge of the institution of the new rector. During this part of the service, DeWitt C. Ivins, as senior warden, presented the keys of the church to the rector.

Following the institution, which was brief, the morning sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. John P. Peters, rector of St. Michael's church, New York, where Mr. Stevenson was the assistant prior to his coming to Plainfield. Dr. Peters delivered a strong and impressive discourse, taking for his text, "The Shepherd Giveth His Life for His Sheep." The divine dwelt at some length upon the duties of a pastor saying that he should be a devout and earnest student of God's Word and that he must realize that all truth is of God. He said that a pastor must be a student of political and social problems and exemplify the true meaning of the brotherhood of men.

Dr. Peters continued by saying that it is the duty of a pastor to study the life of Jesus and the writings of His followers. He must be self-sacrificing and thoroughly devoted to his calling. Turning to the congregation, Dr. Peters told them what the rector had a right to expect of them. He said that they should give their entire support to him in his every effort for the welfare and growth of the church and that they, too, must be close students of God's Word.

"The relationship between pastor and people," said Dr. Peters, "should be one of love, service and sacrifice; a unit, both seeking to enter that supreme light wherein a consecrated service for God is to be found." In conclusion, Dr. Peters spoke a few words to the new rector.

At the end of the sermon, the communion service was held, the celebrant being the new rector. During this service, Dr. Roper read the epistle and Dr. Peters read the gospel. A pleasant feature of the services was the short address by Bishop Scarborough, in which he congratulated Grace church upon securing such an efficient and able rector and he also spoke words of praise for Rev. Mr. Stevenson. He expressed himself as being sure that the new rector and his people would work in unity and harmony for the upbuilding of the Kingdom of Christ. It was nearly 2 o'clock in the afternoon when the services were concluded.

The new rector of Grace church enters upon his duties under most favorable auspices, being well qualified for the work. In 1890, Mr. Stevenson graduated from Trinity University, Toronto, Canada, and received his degree from same college in 1892. He was ordained deacon by Rt. Rev. Arthur Sweatman, Bishop of Toronto, in July, 1892. The same Bishop ordained his priest in advent in 1893. From 1892, to 1895, he was curate of St. Stephen's church, Toronto, and from 1895 to 1899, curate of St. John's church, Peterborough, Canada. In 1899 he came to St. Michael's Parish, New York, and was appointed curate in 1900.

For the last ten months the rector of St. Michal's, Rev. Dr. John P. Peters, has been abroad and Mr. Stevenson had charge of the parish which is one of the largest in New York City. He is very fond of outdoor sports and especially an ardent golfer. He is athletic in build and full of vigor. He is exceptionally well pleased with Plainfield and he has strong hopes that his new charge will be not only a prosperous, but a very happy one.

UPSET OIL STOVE.

Set Fire to Bathroom at Home of James L. Love, of Duer Street, Saturday Evening.

While taking a bath Saturday evening at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Love, of 23 Duer street, Roy Love upset an oil stove in the bathroom and in a few minutes the room was ablaze. An alarm was sounded from box 148 at the corner of Duer street and Lincoln place and the borough fire department responded with promptness.

The firemen arrived at the scene of the fire before the alarm stopped sounding and soon had the flames extinguished. The blazing stove was thrown out of the window together with some blazing oil soaked rugs. The damage will probably amount to about $100.

Box 148 has never been used before and the key was secured from the home of Dr. Buchanan.

The eleventh anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church was observed Saturday morning at the church. Orra S. Rogers was in charge of the service. At present the active membership numbers seventy-six, and during the past year $300 was raised and expended for benevolent purposes.

After the reading of the report an excellent address was delivered by Ira J. Ordway, of Chicago, to which the society was congratulated for its prosperous condition and good showing.

FIRST SLIDE ALMOST PROVED FINAL ONE

Little Ethel Campbell Nearly Dashed Her Brains Out Against a Tree Monday.

WHILE OUT COASTING

THE ACCIDENT OCCURED ON THE ROCKVIEW AVENUE HILL.

Daughter of Chief Marshal Campbell Was Out Playing With Children of Mayor Smalley—Was Badly Cut—Teeth Knocked Out.

Ethel Campbell, the six-year-old child of Chief Marshal William T. Campbell, met with a serious accident while sliding down a hill Monday afternoon in company with Lizzie and Helen Smalley, the young children of Mayor Newton B. Smalley, and narrowly escaped having her brains dashed out against a tree. As it was she received very severe injuries to her throat, face and head, besides having four of her teeth knocked out.

In the morning she begged her father to buy her a sled and at noon the toy arrived at the house. After lunch she started out to the home of her little playmates. Together the children dragged their sleds to the hill on Rockview avenue. The children were coasting down the hill on their sleds when the sled on which the little Campbell girl was riding got away from her and dashed down the hill at tremendous speed.

She was unable to steer the sled and it dashed against a tree with such force that the child was thrown against it, striking on the side of her face. A deep cut was made in the child's throat, narrowly missing the jugular vein and four of her teeth were knocked out. All the skin on the right side of her face was scraped off, leaving the flesh bare and she was also painfully cut about the head. The sled was wrecked.

Her companions rushed to their home where they told their mother what had occurred and she hurried to the spot and carried the child to her home. A telephone call was sent to the office of Dr. A. H. Dundon and he dressed the child's wounds. Upon examination he found that no bones were broken.

Mrs. Smalley then telephoned to Chief Campbell and he came after his daughter and the remains of her sled. Today the child was resting easily and, although still suffering from the shock, she appeared to be doing nicely.

A little bush was all that saved the child from having her head crushed in by the force of the impact. As the sled rushed down the incline one of the runners caught in the bush and this served to swerve the sled so that the child struck the tree a glancing blow instead of a straight one. The Smalley children, who were on another sled close behind, escaped uninjured.

CHILDREN'S PARTY.

Guests Will Not be Young, But the Costumes Will—Arranged by the In and Out Club.

Another decidedly unique affair is to be given by the In and Out Club in the Park Club during the holidays which promises to be as successful an affair as the dance given by that club in the barn at the Barnaby estate Thanksgiving eve. On that occasion it was a barn dance but this time it will be a children's party at which all the members and those invited will appear in children's costumes. Invitations have already been issued for this event which promises to be equally as novel as the previous dance.

Those who have the affair in hand are Miss Charlotte F. Lowe, Mrs. L. E. Waring, Miss May Waring, Miss Florence Waring, Mrs. Clifford M. McGee, Miss Fanny C. Cox and Miss Helen Bushnell, and they are planning several novel features for the "party."

ALIS WON OUT FROM HOPE FIVE

Prettiest Contest of the City League Saw Veteran Team Win by Two Points.

AT THE Y. M. C. A. GYM

Great Team Play by Alis, But Hope More Accurate at Goal Throwing—Both Sides Covered Well, Particularly in Second Half —The Score in Detail.

PLAINFIELD AMATEUR BASKET BALL LEAGUE.

	Won.	Lost.	Ave.
Alis A. A.	2	1	.667
Hope Y. M. A.	2	2	.500
I. C. T. Club	1	2	.333

In the prettiest game since the Plainfield Amateur Basket ball League was opened, the Alis A. A. defeated the five of the Hope Y. M. A. at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last Monday by a score of 15 to 13. For the first time this season, the Alis boys began to develop the team play for which they have been so famous in the past. At goal throwing, the Hopes were a trifle superior. Had they had the team play to back them, the result might have been different.

From the start, the play was clean but lively. Alis assumed the offensive but Hope's aggressiveness evened things. It wasn't long, however, before the Alis team work became apparent. Alis had many more opportunities at the goal but Dilks and Whitley were throwing more carefully than usual and so Alis only managed to score one more field goal in the first half although that team had the advantage of the unobstructed goal. Dilks was again a host in himself and failure to guard him cost Alis a goal. Porter and McCombe guarded well although they found the combination work of their opponents troublesome. The play in the first half was remarkaly clean, only three fouls being called on Alis and four on Hope.

The score stood 11 to 7 in favor of Alis when the first half ended.

Both teams started off with a rush in the second half and fouls became a trifle more frequent although the game was not a rough one at any time. Alis' guards were more effective while their team work kept chasing the ball away from the goal. The Hope boys were playing the game of their life and so well did they cover their men that Phillips was the only one who was able to score from the floor and that on a rather unusual carrom shot. Alis' new men, Phillips and Robeson, were both a little inclined to foul as the excitement began to grow. There it was that Dilks' wonderful accuracy came to Hope's aid. Out of thirteen trials, he scored six times. Smith made but one goal in six and Long one in two trials.

A foul was called on Alis just as the ball went from one Hope man to another and Coss tossed it in the basket. As the foul was called before the try for goal was made, the goal was not allowed. As the end drew near, the game became more and more exciting but neither side could score from the floor and the decision finally went to Alis by two points when time was called.

It was expected that the Alis boys, most of them being at home in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, would have no trouble in winning but the Hope five was playing an unexpectedly strong game and the result was the prettiest contest that has been played since the league was started.

The teams lined up as follows:

ALIS A. A.	HOPE Y. M. A.
H. Phillips	right forward — Whitley
Rodford, Robeson	left forward — Dilks
Smith	centre — Coss
Long	right guard — Porter
Keith	left guard — McCombe

Score—Alis A. A., 15; Hope Y. M. A., 13. Goals from the field—Phillips (2), Smith (2), Long, Whitley, Dilks (3). Goals from foul—Smith (4), Long, Dilks (7). Fouls—Alis A. A., 16; Hope Y. M. A., 12. Referee—Charles B. Morse. Umpires S. B. Joseph and Robert W. Mecker. Timekeeper—Fred Warner and Harold A. Chandor. Scorers—John H. Doane and George R. Firstbrook.

THREATEN TO CUT WIRE

RAILROAD OFFICIALS PROMISE SUMMARY ACTION FOR TROLLEY CO.

Electricity Still Leaks at Watchung Avenue Bridge—Linemen and Police There.

Trouble of another nature may result now at any time from the escaping trolley current beneath the Watchung avenue bridge, which charges the depot dividing fence with electricity. The officials of the New Jersey Central have heretofore protested only by letter with the result that a new running board and better connections were installed. Now they assert the trouble is still there and yesterday men were sent to the bridge to cut the wire.

In some way the trolley people learned of their purpose and forestalled any action by placing guards all about the spot. The police were also informed that trouble was in the air and a couple of bluecoats were posted within sight of the structure. The two gangs met but beyond a heated pow-wow nothing was done.

It is the intention of the railroad people, however, to remove the obstruction by force unless all danger of escaping electricity is taken away. In the meantime the trolley people will guard the point at all times.

Trip to Niagara.

W. C. Walsh, Jr., district passenger agent of the New Jersey Central, has arranged for the Elizabeth Liederkranz Singing Society, a personally conducted tour to Buffalo and Niagara Falls. The trip will be taken next June and there will be 200 people in the party. The trip will be made in a special vestibuled train over the New Jersey Central to Scranton, thence by the Lehigh Valley to Niagara Falls.

PROMOTERS OF PARK WANT CITY'S HELP

If City Will Make Improvements, Philadelphia Capitalists Will Build Park Here.

IN WESTERN SECTION

PROPERTY BOUNDED BY PLAINFIELD AVENUE AND WEST EIGHTH STREET.

One Feature Will be An Automobile Charging and Storage Station —George Taylor is at Head of the Enterprise.

There has been for some time some talk of establishing a park in this city but it has been left to outside capitalists to secure options on property here with that object in view. These capitalists are Philadelphia men, whom, it is said have almost unlimited capital behind them, and during the past few days they have been in this city looking over the different sites on which a park could be located.

The park will be on the west side and will be bounded by Plainfield avenue and West Eighth street and extend in a southerly direction several blocks. George Taylor, of this city, is at the head of the project and it is believed that he interested the Quaker City men to come here with the view of placing some of their capital in this city, for the purpose of further developing it.

Charles H. Lyman whose place of business is on North avenue, and who is interested in the future development of Plainfield, is also interested in the project and when seen at his office Saturday said that there was every likelihood of the park being a reality provided certain improvements which must be guaranteed first, were made. It is understood that the city will be asked to do its share in the matter of improving that locality but in what shape these improvements are to be made has not yet been given out.

The park will consist of a number of trees laid out in pretty drives and bordering on these will be erected between 75 and sixty houses which when completed, will be very handsome residences equal to any of those now located in this city.

It was hinted that if these improvements are not made, the park scheme will drop through. One feature of the place will be an automobile charging and storage station which will harmonize with the other places which will be built there.

Alleged That a Member of Democratic Club Collected Donations, But Failed to Settle—Suspended.

Constantly increasing dissatisfaction with one member's management or mis-management of affairs resulted in a stormy meeting of the Democratic Club, Monday evening. Allegations were preferred which resulted in his being dropped from the rolls while some others wanted further action taken.

The members in question was, it is claimed, entrusted with the collection of funds to defray the expenses of the smoker, held in the headquarters recently. It is declared he received some substantial donations but that none of them reached the club and up to Monday no bills were paid. The club board of the true state of affairs and after doing the dismissal act, at once made arrangements for the settlement of all expenses incurred through the smoker.

DR. HONEYMAN IS INTERVIEWED

Secretary of Borough Board of Health Talks on the Question of Sewage Disposal.

THE MAYOR'S PLANS

Discussion of Methods of Disposal of Contents of Cesspools—Mayor and Dr. Honeyman Do Not Agree—Mr. Honeyman Favors a Sewer to Tide Water.

The action taken by the Borough Board of Health at the meeting held at the home of Dr. Honeyman, last week, when it was inferred in a set of resolutions, that the sewer system in this city was almost useless as the water which was supposed to have been emptied into Green brook in a purified condition was actually making the brook dangerous to the public health of the community; has raised considerable a storm in both North Plainfield and in this city.

Just before his departure for the west, Mayor Newton B. Smalley was asked by a reporter what he thought of the resolutions adopted by the Board of Health when he said:

"They had better go out of business if all they have to do is to attack Plainfield's sewage plant. As reformers the whole crew are on a par with the reform administration in New York. They don't know what they do want."

Upon the invitation of the Mayor the reporter was driven to what the former calls the "sewage disposal plant" of the borough, which was located on the Maher property on Belmont avenue, near Mountain avenue, not far from Green brook.

"There you are," said the Mayor, "that refuse will flow into the brook when it rains, so you can see where the real pollution of the brook comes from. I don't find fault with their using the fields as a dumping ground but with such a sewage disposal plant they ought not to attack the up-to-date plant of Plainfield."

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett, who has charge of the sewerage disposal plant in this city, would not make a statement in reply to the action of the Board of Health of the borough and said that he would not dignify the board's action by any reply.

In reply to the statement of the Mayor, Dr. Honeyman, of the North Plainfield Board of Health, said, when seen at his home:

"The dump which Mayor Smalley referred to is not used now as a dump for the contents of cesspools, or even for ashes. That dumping place has not been used by the borough in over a year. The borough now dumps the contents of its cesspools in a field near the estate of the late John Taylor Johnston. The dump referred to by the Mayor has been abandoned for some time excepting by scavengers from Plainfield who sneak over into the borough at night and dump their loads in the Mountain avenue site.

"It is the Borough Council which determines where the contents of cesspools shall be dumped and if I mistake not, and I have it here on the minutes, the permission to dump garbage and the contents of cesspools at the Maher property was granted by Mayor Smalley himself for he took the matter on his own hands and gave permission to dump the refuse there. But some time ago there was a complaint made that the odor was offensive which arose from the dumping ground and since then the borough has abandoned the grounds and has been dumping further toward the mountains."

Mr. Honeyman was asked if the location of the present dump was near any stream which emptied into Green brook and in reply said:

"As far as I know there is no stream within a mile of the present dumping ground and the owner of the property on which the dump is located told me a few days ago that he plowed over the ground on which the refuse is dumped for the purpose of fertiliser."

Asked if there was any danger of the heavy rains washing down from the high lands into the brook, the secretary of the board said that this was an impossibility as the water would have to flow over a mile over sandy soil to the nearest stream. He said that even in cold weather when the ground was frozen there was very little likelihood of the water flowing that far as it would soak into the land and disappear before it had traveled half that distance.

"What do you think of the proposed scheme to secure tidewater drainage for this town?" ventured The Daily Press reporter. "Do you think it a better plan than to have a disposal system such as is in use in the city of Plainfield?"

"Yes, a thousand times yes," replied the member of the Board of Health, with vehemence, "it is far better to have a system that carries the matter to tidewater than to have a plant such as that now in use in Plainfield."

"Don's you think the plant now in use in Plainfield, a good one?" replied the Press man.

"No, I do not," Mr. Honeyman replied, "that system they have in use in the city is not a success and never will be. The overflow from the beds flows into the brook in an impure condition and there is no evidence whatever, that I have been able to find, which shows that the State Sewerage Commission has approved of the plant and therefore the city of Plainfield has no right to empty the overflow into that brook."

When asked if he did not think the State Sewerage Commission would take a stand against the sewerage of North Plainfield, being emptied into the Raritan river without septic tanks, Mr. Honeyman said that if the Sewerage Commission objected and New Brunswick objected to having the crude matter emptied into that stream, the three towns of North Plainfield, Bound Brook and Somerville, could unite and build a large septic tank at some central point where all the sewerage of the three towns could be emptied and purified before it was dumped into the stream.

The inverter asked why the borough did not make arrangements with the city of Plainfield to dump the sewerage of the borough in the disposal plant of this city to which he replied that he would not think of making the conditions in that city worse than they were at present.

SOME CLEVER SKETCHES.

George Wharton Edwards is Contributor to a Christmas Magazine.

A pleasing feature of the Christmas number of Everybody's Magazine is a collection of short stories, by well-known writers, under the general heading "A Christmas of Good Deeds." Among the writers is George Wharton Edwards, of this city, well-known in the world of literature as well as in that of art. Mr. Edwards' contribution is entitled "Silver-Lined Clouds," and consists of two very brief sketches of New York life, showing how kindliness and the Christmas spirit are often found in unexpected places. The background of New York scenes and people, as well as the cleverly drawn figures of the "chin-bearded man with the heavy basket" and the tall policeman whose coat was rendered shapeless by the little foundling he was keeping warm beneath it, show that Mr. Edwards can paint as lifelike a picture with his pen as with his brush.

CHRISTMAS TREE.

Perseverance Lodge, Knights of Pythias, Makes Great Plans for Its Christmas Festival.

Continuing its list of social features for the members, Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., at its meeting, last Friday, made arrangements for a Christmas tree festival to be held Friday evening, December 26. A similar affair was given last year in charge of Chancellor Commander William N. Runyon and is conceded to be the most enjoyable entertainment ever conducted by the lodge. The stamps will be made to eclipse it and a committee of three, composed of S. J. Robinson, Thomas Muir and Walter L. Heifield, Jr., was appointed to assume charge.

Other business was the conferring of the first and second rank upon eleven candidates and the receiving of one proposition.

The Adirondack Forest.

The state of New York now has a baby forest in the Adirondacks where trees are being raised to reforest a denuded tract. This has brought the state fish, game and forest commission to the consideration of a project to establish tree nurseries in the woods on much the same principle of the state fish hatcheries. After trees have had the proper growth they would be given free to citizens and municipalities, and used where needed on state lands. In this way it is hoped to reclaim much denuded land. The proposition is commendable, it emphasizes however, the folly of permitting what remains of the Adirondack forest lands to be cut over, if the state later is to be at considerable expense to undertake the slow process of reforestation.—Rome Sentinel.

They Break the Avalanche.

In Switzerland the people have entered upon effective plans to defeat the avalanche in its devastating work. No more need the traveler be told: Beware the awful avalanche," for these rolling, pitching, sliding bodies of snow that accumulate into masses of destruction are now broken up before they gain in force of material or velocity sufficient to make them dangerous. Along the mountain sides, where avalanches form, earthworks in the form of a V are constructed, with their points upward, and when moving bodies of snow come in contact with them they are broken apart and so deflected as to be rendered harmless. —Chicago Chronicle.

How to Give Away an Orange.

When giving away an orange it was formerly considered that all that was needed was to say: "I give you this orange." The real modern up-to-date way is as follows: I give you all, and singular, my estate and interest, right, title, claim and advantage of, and in, this orange, together with all the skin, rind, juice, pulp, and pips; with full power to bite, cut, suck or otherwise eat the same or give the same away; together with all the rind, skin, juice pulp and pips anything heretofore or hereinafter or in any other deed or deeds, instruments of whatsoever nature to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.—Woman's Home Companion.

His Business Was Looking Up.

A young man who had been born and raised in Kentucky, this state, recently returned there after an absence of six or seven years. As he walked from the station to the home of his relatives, he encountered the old negro who had attended to the town's whitewashing from time immemorial. There was an exchange of greetings, after which the returned native said:

"Well, I see that you and the whitewash brush are still in partnership. How's business prospering, Uncle?"

"Yes-a! yes-a!" chuckled the old fellow. "That be the way jes' now, sah. Yo' see, Ise kal-so-min-in' the ceilin' ub de Baptis' church, sah."—Philadelphia Times.

Friars Still Own the Lands.

The friars are still the real owners of the vast estates in the Philippines from which they were driven by the natives four years ago, and the impression sought to be created in the dispatch from Rome printed the other morning is characterized as distinctly erroneous. The dispatch is not accurate in the statement that information has been received that the Vatican that almost all the real estate belonging to the friars was sold to syndicates headed by Americans living in New York, and the allegation that although the friars hold no shares they do not hold controlling interests is distinctly untrue.—Albany Journal.

What the Cakewalk Really Is.

By the time of the Louisiana purchase, the negroes, especially those of the interior, had lost all recollection of Africa, and with the failure of members to teach their children even a few words of their old speech that tie disappeared. Being an imitative race, they soon learned to adopt the songs, dances and customs of their masters applicable to their conditions. For example, the "cakewalk" is but a grotesque variation of the stately minuet of long ago.—Leslie's Monthly.

Fish Flour in Norway.

The fisheries represent one of Norway's chief industries, and quantities of fish are sold at very low rates, particularly during summer. One way in which these are utilized is by means of an invention which quickly dries and pulverizes the flesh of fresh fish. The resulting product, called fish flour, is easy to transport from one place to another and has great nutritive value.—N. Y. Sun.

KODOL Digests What You Eat

Shopping in Peking.

The Chinese are "peculiar" for many other things than those set down by Bret Harte in his immortal chronicle, and among them is the extraordinary custom among the merchants of Peking. A Japanese correspondent has been recently explaining to his businesslike countrymen the great waste of time in shopping in the Chinese capital. "Frequently a whole day is wasted in trying to find a small article of daily use. This is largely due to the fact that trading is despised by the higher classes in Peking, and the merchants are scattered over the city and over a space of three miles outside the city wall. In order to purchase a quire of paper the Japanese had to go to Ling Chang, three miles outside the city, and had also to get out of the city to buy beef. Hours a day were spent in going from shop to shop, often several miles apart. In what seems to be the shop, very few articles, and they of the lowest quality, are kept, the goods being upstairs, and will be overlooked by the customer in search of that peculiarity. The shopkeeper is quite ready to detain a customer in gossip in the lower shop for several hours. The shops are open from eight or nine o'clock in the morning until five or six in the afternoon, and at night all are closed except restaurants and drug stores.—Japan and America.

Shot Down Danish Flag.

In view of the purchase of the Danish West Indies, pardon me for recalling an incident of twenty-odd years ago that nearly caused serious international complications. An American marksman, paying a visit to Charlotte Amalia, amused the governor by an exhibition of skill with the rifle. Sitting on the veranda of the government house, he said he could put with a bullet the signal halyards on the flagstaff of the fort, and when the Danish standard to the ground. As the lines were almost invisible in the distance, the governor was willing to bet that he could not do it. The shot rang out and the flag fell. Presently a horseman dashed up, informing the governor that some one had fired on the flag. There was great excitement. The governor, none too popular, it seems, with the military, ruined his politicel future by admitting that the affair was a joke in which he connived. Report being sent to Copenhagen, highly colored, of course, by the commandant, his excellency was summarily removed.—N. Y. Press.

What Puzzled Tommy.

Tommy had been worrying papa with the usual number of unanswerable questions, and had been threatened with condign punishment if he did not keep quiet. He fidgeted about in silence for some time, but at length broke out:

"Say, they say the rain falls alike upon the just and the unjust, doesn't it?"

"Yes, yes. Don't ask silly questions."

"And it isn't just to steal another man's umbrella, is it?"

"Certainly not. If you ask any more—"

"But, pa, the rain doesn't fall upon the man that steals the umbrella, and it does on the man that had his stolen. Funny, ain't it, pa?"—London Answers.

In the Same Situation.

A funny story about a physician at Monroe City is going the rounds of the state press. A resident of the town set out four shade trees for the doctor. A short time later the physician was called to attend the mother-in-law of the man who had set out the trees. The old lady died and the physician presented his bill. After paying it, the citizen thought of the trees, and made out and presented a bill for them. "But," protested the man, "you killed the doctor. "So did my mother-in-law," retorted the other man. The doctor paid the bill.—Kansas City Journal.

Helping the Lord.

Pension Commissioner Ware, who was at the capitol the other day, is very much interested, as all new officials are, in his correspondence. One of the letters which he received amused him greatly. It was from a widow out in Illinois, and this is what she said:

"Dear Mr. Ware: I am trusting in the Lord to get my pension, but as I need the money, I do hope you will give a little help yourself."—Washington Post.

A False Statement.

"See here!" angrily replied the machine politician, "in your report this morning you say Councilman Grabb admitted it was so that he was getting out of politics. I never said that."

"I thought you did," replied the reporter.

MINISTER BOWEN ONCE LIVED IN PLAINFIELD

The Most Prominent Figure in the Venezuelean Troubles is Well-Known in This City.

BROTHER RESIDES HERE

HERBERT W. BOWEN HAS ALREADY FIGURED IN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS.

Was a Consul in Spain When War Was Declared—His Wife Traveled Across the Desert to Wed the Minister.

The eyes of the world are now centered on Venezuela and the people of both hemispheres are awaiting with much interest the future developments of the trouble there between the English and German governments and the South American Republic. But perhaps in no city in the United States is the interest more keen than it is in this city because of the fact that one of Plainfield's former residents is one of the most prominent diplomats at the scene of the difficulties. It has been for some time a most remarkable co-incidence that in almost every great event in any part of the globe this city is represented in some way or another, and in the present troubles in South America it is the United States minister at Caracas, Herbert W. Bowen, who formerly resided here with his brother, Henry E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue, that the interest of the people of Plainfield is centered upon.

During the recent difficulties in that country Minister Bowen has acted for England and Germany in the absence of their representatives and in a recent telegram to the Philadelphia Record from Berlin an account was given of the great esteem in which the American minister in Venezuela is held by the Germans, as a result of the prompt intervention taken by him in favor of the German and British governments at Caracas.

Minister Bowen was the consul at Barcelona, Spain, at the time of the outbreak of the Spanish-American War and his bravery and rare diplomacy at that time won for him worldwide fame. The story of how he came out of the porch of the house there when the Consulate was being bombarded by the Spanish mob and successfully prevented them from raining the place is well known in this city. He was appointed consul by President Cleveland and when the late President McKinley was elected he appointed him as Minister at Caracas where he has been ever since.

German and English papers have been publishing pictures and sketches of the life of the "great Minister," as they are pleased to call him, and the outlines of his eventful life are most interesting.

He was born in Brooklyn where he resided for some time until his parents moved to this city where his brother, Henry E. Bowen, Jr., now resides. His father, Henry E. Bowen, Sr., was the proprietor and editor of the New York Independent, but died in this city some time ago.

Minister Bowen has been married twice. His second marriage was a very interesting romance. He was engaged to a young woman from New York but as he was at a distant point in Asia in the land of the Khedive he was unable to come to this country to be married. His fiancee made the journey to Asia alone and a part of her journey was over the great deserts that are inhabited by the Bedouin tribes of stalwart Arabians. For thousands of miles she journeyed over the burning sands in the heat of a torrid sun and was united in marriage to Minister Bowen at a small town near Cairo. Mrs. Bowen is now with her husband in Venezuela where she has been for the past six or eight months.

ART AND MUSIC WERE COMBINED IN RECITAL

'Immanuel" or the Life of Christ, Produced at Y. M. C. A. Hall Last Thursday.

WAS QUITE IMPRESSIVE

THE SOLO PARTS WERE TAKEN IN VERY ACCEPTABLE FASHION.

Miss Holley Was Particularly Pleasing, Despite Fact She Was Suffering From a Severe Cold—Local Singers Assisted.

"Immanuel," or the life of Christ, illustrated by pictures from the paintings of famous artists and accompanied by selections from sacred compositions, delighted a small audience at the Y. M. C. A. last Thursday. It was a combination of art and music that was unusually impressive. The production was given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and was arranged by J. Fletcher Billet.

William H. Miller was directly in charge of the vocal work. The soloists were Miss Frances Holley, of New York, and Miss Ethel Derby, soprano; Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto; William Tallamy, tenor; and William Holmes, baritone. They were assisted by a large chorus composed of the best local singers.

Although suffering from a severe cold, Miss Holley was able to appear and sang sweetly, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth" from Handel, and "O, Sacred Head How Wounded," from Gounod. It revealed more than many other selections could have done that her voice possesses a natural charm and great volume. In addition to rendering exceptionally well, "The Good Shepherd," Miss Derby acquitted herself creditably in the recitation parts. Her selection was illustrated with scenes from the Twenty-third Psalm. Mrs. Ward gave in her usual faultless manner, "He Was Despised" while the other solos were, "The Trumpet Shall Sound," by Mr. Holmes, and "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," by Mr. Tallamy. The selections by the men were very pleasing.

The chorus was as follows: Tenors, Messrs. Hewson, Moffett, Williams, Apgar, Rogers; bass, Messrs. Gilbert, Hampston, Davis and Reynolds; sopranos, the Misses Lena Bass, Ida Tallamy, Cornelia Miller, Mrs. Stillman and Miss Gould; altos, Mrs. J. H. VanWinkle, Mrs. S. A. Togwell, Miss Daisy Houston, Miss Ada Clarke, Mrs. J. H. Manning, and Miss Grace Phillips.

JUST A LITTLE RUN.

Horse and Baker Wagon Passed Through It Safely.

A horse attached to John Wirth's baker wagon, standing in front of R. W. Barne's grocery on Park avenue, last Saturday started to run away. The animal ran from Park avenue to West Second street and into the alley next to Trinity Reformed church. At this point a butcher, who happened to be close by, caught the horse and held him until the driver put in an appearance. There was no damage, although as the rig made a turn from Second street to the alley, it looked as though it might crash into the corner of George Cole's undertaking establishment.

BIG BANQUET BY BOARD OF TRADE

Plainfield, Past, Present and Future, Was Described by Enthusiastic Speakers.

HELD AT HOTEL ROSELLE

City Business Men and Officials Gathered at the Board to Partake of Excellent Repast and Listen to Remarks on Subjects of Interest to All—Three Score Guests.

The secret of Plainfield's power and superiority over sister cities of the same magnitude was easily to be discerned by a glance about the dining room of the newly opened Hotel Roselle, where the local Board of Trade gave, Dec. 10, the first of a series of banquets which it has arranged. It was a representative gathering, comprising the men of intelligence who have the best interests of their municipality at heart and devote time and money to promote its growth. Every walk in life was represented and the speeches that came late in the evening revealed the fibre, the foundation as it were, of what constitutes the city's makeup.

In all sixty men responded to the invitations issued, all of whom with few exceptions are connected with the board. It was 9 o'clock when they seated themselves at President Woolston's command and a glance about the room showed them to be the following: Mayor O. L. Jenkins, Chiefs T. O. Doane and Patrick Kiely, Sheriff B.F. Coriell, Assemblyman Wm. Reeves, Dr. A. Martin, J. Fred MacDonald, M. C. VanArsdale, Wm. R. Stanbury, M. J. Cashin, Peter McDonough, James Daley, E. M. Laing, Herman Schwed, Councilman R. I. Tolles, A. E. Giddes, Edward Kapp, William A. Woodruff, W. C. Dobbins, J. P. Mosher, Thomas Muir, Councilman J. F. Buckle, Stephen Schleif, Andrew MacCardell, Simon Mantz, City Collector Frank H. Smith, Henry Nischwitz, Ralph Chrystie, J. A. Fass, Henry Liefke, Amos Andrews, Michael Armstrong, Amos Ellis, James Hansen, M. Leichtentritt, J. C. Pope, Former Assemblyman W. R. Codington, J. T. Vail, F. W. Runyon, H. Otis Newman, John Abbott, E. P. Turner, Charles W. Runyon, H. A. Bonn, F. W. Dunn, William Schloss, M. P. Elderton, William H. Brokaw, Horace M. Sherwin, and A. S. Giles. At a separate table at the head of the room were President L. W. Woolston, Senator Charles A. Reed, Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, James M. Martine and Secretary of the Board Harry C. Runyon, these latter having been selected to make the addresses.

Fifteen courses comprised the dinner served and from this end of the affair there was nothing lacking. The cuisine and service were perfect while Miss Host Rosell had arranged and provided for the minute details which often cause annoyance by being overlooked. Decorations of palms and plants placed in convenient corners enhanced the surroundings.

It was 11 o'clock when coffee and cigars were served and the diners settled back comfortably for the other side of the banquet—the speeches. The subject and those who gave them were, "Plainfield of the Past," Alex. Gilbert; "Plainfield of the Present," James E. Martine; "Plainfield of the Future," Charles A. Reed; "Benefits of a Board of Trade," S. S. Swackhamer; "What the Board of Trade Has Done," Harry C. Runyon. These addresses were supplemented by a few remarks from Mayor O. L. Jenkins, which, although impromptu, showed the city's Chief Executive to have its interest always at heart.

Going back to the year 1800, when what is now Plainfield was a mere collection of huts without any special appellation, Mr. Gilbert traced the growth of the place up to the present day. He dwelt particularly on the year 1835 when it was then a town of 1,000 inhabitants and 300 houses. Proceeding to 1866, the year he came here, he compared the railroad facilities, the roads, the paths used for sidewalks, the school facilities, fire department and officials with the up-to-date accommodations of the same kind which residents enjoy today.

All these were acquired, he said, after much effort, and his description of the constant fights between the "rooster" element as the New York commuters were called, and "haydseds" or "Reubens," the return cognomen given the old inhabitants, was very amusing. He paid a touching tribute to the memory of Evan Jones, who built up the southern portion of the city and had so much faith in its future that he sank his fortune in developing land.

He referred to the late Daniel Marshall as the "watch dog of the treasury" as not a motion or ordinance could be introduced into the City Council without his tearing it to pieces and objecting to the expenditure of money for anything that was not absolutely needed. In conclusion he ascribed the city's growth in a great measure to the extremely healthful conditions brought about from the soil and its peculiar fitness as an abiding place for people affected with pulmonary troubles.

Mr. Martine's subject confined him to the present time and his remarks were especially appropriate coming at the close of Mr. Gilbert's as the contrast was especially noticable. Plainfield today, he said, has factories aggregating a pay roll of $1,450,000 per annum; it contributes daily to the New Jersey Central Railroad $1,250 in freight and passenger traffic excluding the New York commutation tickets. It has fifty miles of streets, thirty-four of which are macadamized and curbed, excellent walks, twenty-five miles of sewage pipe already laid, water mains, and school advantages that are second to none in the country. He warmly commended Street Commissioner Gavett's attention to the duties devolving upon him and declared the governument of the city to be without blemish.

The subject assigned Senator Reed had originally been given Former Mayor W. L. Saunders, of the borough, but he was unable to respond at the last moment owing to business. The short time allowed him to prepare was no detriment to the Senator and he cleverly told of a far ahead Plainfield as he saw it. At the commencement he touched upon annexation and declared himself in favor of it, just as much as ever, and that the time would soon come when it would be accomplished. With the city and borough combined, he said, and with a railroad running across country connecting this place with Newark, Morristown and the sea coast towns, there was nothing to prevent Plainfield becoming the capitol of the State.

Things he wished to see permanent fixtures within a short time, he continued, were another railroad running along the foot of the Watchung mountain range, thus opening up vast amounts of desirable residential tracts, a double tracked street railway system, a central market place, a comfortable and roomy theatre such as the place needs and demands, better gas, the water plant a city asset and underground telephone, trolley and fire alarm wires. He predicted that factories would soon be extending along the railroad from Fanwood to Bound Brook, that Plainfield would absorb Scotch Plains and Dunellen and that when the census of 1910 is taken it would show a population of 40,000.

The benefits of a Board of Trade were clearly and concisely explained by Assemblyman Swackhamer in a speech that was profoundly applauded at frequent intervals. Men of brains, of tact and diplomacy were needed, he said, and these Plainfield possesses. With them combined and allied, working together for mutual interest, the city having such a board is sure to succeed. He commended the local organization for the persistent and thorough manner in which it has conducted its affairs and for the good work it has accomplished.

Just what the board has done for the city was made known by Secretary Runyon who has been with it since its organization. Starting in January 1898, with thirty-four members, it now numbers seventy-three and is daily growing. It has secured the new Central depot, brought factories here, agitated and accomplished the extension of Madison avenue to Duer street, had storm sewers built in Plainfield avenue and Richmond street, suggested and secured the passage of the building ordinance and compelled the trolley officials to give better service. It also suggested and took part in many municipal questions, such as the Bergen trolley scheme, the Martin Act law and annexation.

As the secretary concluded Mayor Jenkins was called upon and responded with an address in which he hoped for a grander, greater and better Plainfield. He wished particularly, he said, two public parks at least, a public lake which could easily be made and a continuation of the methods which has given Plainfield precedence in the Metropolitan district today.

It was 1 o'clock when the Mayor finished and before adjournment was taken, at the suggestion of Andrew MacCardell, a vote of thanks was extended the board for its hospitality.

The committee which arranged and had charge of the affair consisted of Harry C. Runyon, chairman, C. Pope, J. Fred MacDonald, Herman Schwed and H. C. Runyon.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 21.—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Christmas; its message and motive.—Luke ii, 1-20; John iii, 14-17.

Every memorable ecclesiastical and national day has its message. The Passover feast spoke to the ancient Jews of their deliverance from Egypt. The Lord's supper speaks to the Christian world of Christ's death and the world's salvation. Resurrection day speaks of the resurrection of Christ and of the confirmation of man's hope of a future life. Christmas day, the brightest, most joyous day in the calendar of the church, has its message of joy, of salvation and of good will to men.

1. The Christmas message is a message of joy. "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy!" This joy is caused by the fact that salvation was to come through the Babe of Bethlehem. "For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord," a cause for joy, indeed, for here was a message of light to a world in darkness, a message of hope to a world in despair, a message of redemption to a world in the valley of the shadow of death. Well might the angels sing, ascribing "Glory to God" and "peace, good will, to men." Such a message of joy the world has never had before or since, and at every Christmas season this message should come to us with increased appreciation as we realize more and more what it means to us and to the world.

2. The Christmas message is one of universal joy, "I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people." The birth of Christ brought joy to heaven and to earth. The angels of God sang for joy. The Judean shepherds returned glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen as it was told unto them. The wise men from the east must have rejoiced. Simeon and Anna were filled with joy and prophesied of the blessings to come through the child Jesus. Christ's birth is a cause for universal joy. We may well sing, "Joy to the world, the Lord has come." If the message is not a joyous one to us, it should be and may be if we will accept Jesus the Lord as our Saviour and Redeemer. And if it is a joyous day for us, we should strive to bring joy and happiness into the lives of others.

3. Christmas has a motive as well as a message. Christ's birth was not by chance. There was motive and purpose in everything that God does. We would therefore expect this to be particularly true of such an important event as the birth of His Son into the world. And it is so. John gives us God's motive in sending Christ into the world, and that motive was love. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son" for it. Love is the most powerful of motives, and it was this motive that caused God to send to live and die. It is the motive above all others also that should inspire response. Since God so loved us we should so love Him that we will give our lives to Him in return for "the unspeakable gift" which He has given to us.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. iii, 15; Isa. vii, 14; ix, 6, 7; xi, 1-10; Mal. iii, 1; iv, 1-6; Matt. ii, 1-15; Luke i, 26-33; Rom. v, 6-8; Rev. xxii, 17.

Missionary Committee Points.

The missionary committee in one aggressive union sent out the following pithy suggestions to its societies:

"Give to it that the missionary committee always includes some of the younges members of the society.

"Have committee meetings at least once a month and devote the evening to them. Do not allow them to be a mere 'annex' to some other gathering.

"Remember that your work is chiefly educational. If your society knows no more about missions at the close than at the beginning of your term of office, some one is responsible for the failure.

"Use leaflet literature freely, circulate your denominational magazines and have a missionary library, if possible.

"By whatever methods you raise money let them be adequate, systematic and Scriptural.

"Be aggressive and progressive. Do not rest satisfied with quarterly missionary meetings and the '2 cents a week plan.' Find new methods or invent them."

Our Watchword.

Voice of God, inspiring to victory yesterday; voice of God, inspiring to victory today; voice of God, inspiring to complete and final victory in some glad tomorrow, is the watchword of our society, "for Christ and the church."—Rev. Dr. William S. Wallace.

A Tireless Endeavorer.

Rev. Dr. Clark is an indefatigable worker. He met the entire expensés of his last six months' tour of Europe in the interest of Christian Endeavor by writing for different publications about his unusually varied trip.

Quiz Box.

[Any question may be asked that pertains to any phase of Christian Endeavor work. Address Lock Box 674, Binghamton, N. Y.]

18. Pe. M., Maine.—Rev. Dr. Clarence E. Eberman, the field secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, is an ex-president of the Pennsylvania state union. He made an exceptionally good record in that office. One year he spent his entire summer in making a tour of the state in the interests of the movement, addressing large assemblages of people and making a host of friends for Christian Endeavor.

20. N., Massachusetts.—Dr. A. A. Patton of Canton, China, was the man to first suggest the "2 cents a week" plan for missions.

THEATRICAL.

Nothing that the New York stage has seen has surpassed the success of Mrs. Fiske's magnificent production of "Mary of Magdala" that is now being presented at the Manhattan Theatre, New York. Seldom, if ever, has a play excited the widespread action that has been given to Paul Heyse's powerful drama. The play, bearing as it does on the greatest story in the world's history, has been pronounced remarkable in plot and treatment, and the beauty of the English adaptation has been greatly admired. Mrs. Fiske in the title role, does what is undoubtedly the most superb work of her brilliant career. The wonderful art of this foremost of American actresses is seen in its fullness amid surroundings that befit its quality. Both the play and its sumptuous staging are considered to work a distinct advance in drama presentations. "Mary of Magdala" is declared to have, without exception, the most beautiful setting ever seen on the American stage.

To counteract the customary lull in theatrical traffic during the week before Christmas, Manager F. F. Proctor has scheduled especially attractive offerings at his popular theatres. The continuous vaudeville at the Twenty-third Street will have the funny Russell Brothers in George M. Cohan's clever sketch, "A Romance of New Jersey," as the topping feature ot a twenty-five act programme. The Fifth Avenue Stock Company will present a sumptuous revival of Henry Arthur Jones' and Wilson Barrett's famous English melodrama, "Hoodman Blind," with its stirring features faithfully depicted. "Fallen Among Thieves" will be the sensational offering of the Proctor Stock Company at the Fifty-eighth Street. William Gillette's successful comedy, "All the Comforts of Home" will be played by the Proctor Stock Company at the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street with Adelaide Keim in the leading role. The "twice daily" vaudeville entertainment at Proctor's Newark will have Charley Case, the witty black face comedian, as its headline.

Miss Eleanor Robson, who has so completely won the hearts of the New York critics by her performance of "Audrey" at the Madison Square Theatre, is a child of the stage. Her father was well known as a player, and her mother, Mrs. Madge Carr Cook, has supported the boy "stars" in the country. Miss Robson was known throughout the country to the player-folk in whose company she traveled with her mother. She learned through them all the arts of the realm behind the footlights. Thus when she made her debut at sixteen in a stock company in Milwaukee, she astonished both those with whom she played and the audiences by her exquisite art. She was discovered in this company by a New York manager and given more ambitious work. As Audrey she is artistic and charming as in any role in which she has so far appeared.

LITERARY.

Most prominent and perhaps most interesting among the many special features of The Outlook's Annual Book Number is a discussion called "The Most American Books," in which ten authors contribute their views in reply to the question: What are the books most characteristic of American genius and life—literature which could not have been written on any but American soil? Among the writers are Colonel T. W. Higginson, Brander Matthews, Owen Wister, Hamlin Garland and Dr. Edward Everett Hale. The number has also portraits and sketches of Miss Hegan, author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," Mrs. Lillian W. Betts, whose "The Leaven in a Great City" is attracting much attention; H. H. Furness, the great Shakespearian; Booth Tarkington, and Helen Keller—the last a sketch by Edward Everett Hale.

In Leslie's Monthly for December the contents fully justifies the temporary rise in price. The increased number of pages are partly filled by stories by Ralph Connor, Eden Phillpotts, Harry Stillwell Edwards, and with a tale by Egerson Castle, printed in tint, and another by Seumas Mac Manus, on colored paper. There are a series of full-page drawings, by Reginald Birch, John Cecil Clay, W. Glackens, Florence Lovell Shinn, Howard Giles, Ladislaw Rends, and Harry Wolcott Adams. There is a rattling good football story, by Edwin Oviatt, and some excellent Christmas verse by F. L. Stanton, Emmett Campbell Hall and Ellis Parker Butler, while the Marginalia stories are worthy of the number and the season.

Cold Comfort From Doctors.

Doctors say neuralgia is not dangerous. This is poor consolation to a sufferer who feels as if his face were pierced with hot needles and torn with a thousand pairs of pincers. A word of advice to him: stay indoors and use Perry Davis' Painkiller. The blessed freedom from pain which follows this treatment cannot be told. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 21. "Christmas: Its Message and Motive"—Text, Luke ii, 1-20; John iii, 14-17.

"That whosoever believeth may in Him have eternal life."

From Anglo-Saxon customs and ancient times comes much of the practice of the great festival of the winter solstice. The sun has reached his farthest southern limit and wheeled on his return to the northlands. From ages beyond record our ancestors kept this time as a season of festivity and feasting. Great logs for the hearth fire, wild beasts for food, evergreens for decorating home and God's house, greetings and good cheer marked the occasion as the grandest of all festivals.

It was wise in the early Christian missionaries to recognize the worth and deep significance of this annual Yuletide observance and give to the Anglo-Saxon heathen practices new and better meanings. Under their teaching it became the festival of Christ's birth and the most joyous of all Christian holy days. Better than the sun returning to the frostbound earth in the face of the coming of the God Man to earth with heavenly salvation for all men.

Our custom of making gifts and all the other observances which have grown up and around Christmas and to which the hearts of the young cling so fondly have much to commend them beside the momentary gratification of kindly impulses. Beyond all the benefit which the business of making and trading gets from this season we prize the rehearsing of Christ story. The wonderment grows greater as the years pass. Childhood takes the precious narrative so eagerly and realistically! Why should not angels come from heaven and sing to listening shepherds? Have not angels always been near and dear to the heart of childhood, which has no difficulty in believing in them and can almost see and hear them at all times.

To the young people Christmas means somethat more than it used to mean. It holds vaster truth, deeper purity and reaches of love unfathomed, perhaps unfathomable. It is promise of unutterable riches and revelation unceasing. It beckons into years yet to come with marvelous possibilities of achievement and enjoyment. It means the limitless unfolding of the Christ life in self and in society—all possibility of all good.

To the middle aged it speaks no less decisively, even if more soberly. The virgin birth and angel song may be held less clearly than once, but the eternal life in prospect comes nearer, and the hopelessness of the struggle of the world before the Babe "stars" in its consecrating influence. Christmas brings a mellowing influence to the spirit, a mystical touch to the faith almost childlike in its simplicity. And songs and mother sweetness mean more than in all the bygone years. Heaven lies not far away.

To all the Christmas message is eternal life for you if you believe and love Him who is life eternal.

Real Joy.

Real joy is as sacred and divine a thing as there is. You know that it is true that we may if we choose begin to enjoy the inheritance of eternal things now, here, in this life. Especially is this the case with this divine gift of gladness of the soul. Do not rest content with any more small, finite, temporary thing and call that joy; it is some passing earthly exhilaration of spirits. That is merely a selfish impression. That is not connected with any feeling of regret for our imperfection, as true joy must ever be. In true joy there can be no selfishness. It is that spirit that comes from consciousness of the nearness of God, consciousness of love to Him, consciousness of sin forgiven, consciousness of living for the good of our brothers and sisters of the human family.—Sinclair.

Satisfy the Heart.

If with the heart a man believes unto righteousness, his intellect will be drawn as his heart leads. It will be a help instrument of faith and truth. But if it is principally with the head or intellect that a man believes there is not much heart in his belief or faith in his heart. His may be the religion of scholarship, but not of experience. And while natural reason or science is his authority for the spiritual realm his heart is unsatisfied and his intellect much the less enriched.—Friend.

Pleasure In Religion.

A religion whose tendency is to make the possessor disagreeable is not the one commended of the church. Pleasure is an ordinance of God. It is a lily planted in the desert, and we thank Him for it. We are not to keep from its form and color, but the memory of it remains, like the notes of an old song, in the silence of other and sadder years.—Presbyterian Journal.

A Way to Avoid Trouble.

How much trouble he avoids who does not look to see what his neighbor says or does or thinks, but only to what he does himself, that it may be just and pure!—Marcus Aurelius.

Excuses.

Beware of excuses when you feel prompted to pray. Pour forth the longings of your heart to God and you will experience great lightening of your load.—Presbyterian.

Endurance.

It profits naught to prate about our wrongs
And chatter of our wound when we are hurt;
If we the wrong and wound cannot avert,
To silently endure is to grow strong.
—Susie M. Best, St., New York.

CRANFORD TOOK TWO GAMES FROM PARKS

Poor Showing by Local Bowlers on Their Own Alleys at Park Club.

IN PRESS TOURNAMENT

NEITHER TEAM MADE SCORES THAT WERE PARTICULARLY HIGH.

Lack of Practice Seemed Cause of Trouble for Local Team Which Was Way Out of Form—The Parks Won One Game.

The Park Club bowlers met the Cranford Casino team last Thursday on the local alleys in The Daily Press Bowling League tournament and while the home team made a better showing than in the first series with Westfield, this is not saying much. The Parks succeeded in capturing one game, the second, and in that the individual scores were creditable. However, with the exception of Littell, of the visiting team, who made a score of 202 in the first game, all of the scores were somewhat below the average. There was good individual bowling in a few instances and this was a redeeming feature of the tournament.

The fact that the alleys have just been put in order may have had something to do with some of the poor work. They were a trifle sticky, and besides the Park team showed weakness in lack of practice. The team did not display the vim and snap that is usually a feature of their bowling. In the first game the local team seemed to lose heart, and the visitors won with forty-five pins to the good.

In the second game the Parks made a determined effort to do something and in this spurt they managed to win out by a margin of fifty-eight. The third game, however, found them back in their poor form and they lost by fifty-seven pins.

As for the individual bowling Townsend rolled a consistent game throughout, although his scores were not the highest. VanBuren rolled in the first game for Park, but in the other games gave way to Dumont, who seemed to be in better form and put up a stronger game. The veteran, Dr. Thiers, had a streak of luck and in the first game he was high man with a score of 178. His other scores were good, but not very high. Willis at times rolled well but generally was off his game. Peck held his own fairly well, bowling the best in the first two games.

As for the visitors they were in better form and as a team they were quite strong. Emmons was out of form and after the first game his place was taken by Sharp, who did better. The Cranfords were somewhat favored with luck and just when they needed extra pins they did not seem to have any trouble getting them.

The scores of the games are as follows:

PARKS.
	1st	2d	3d
Townsend	139	162	143
Willis	155	134	175
Peck	156	146	121

METHODISTS WERE OUT TO HEAR OF MISSIONS

Missionary Assembly Was Held at Grace M. E. Church Last Thursday.

INTERESTING SPEAKERS

BISHOP MOORE, OF CHINA, TOLD OF WORK IN THAT EMPIRE.

Miss Agnes McAllister Spoke on Experiences in African Mission Work—Rev. A. H. Tuttle, of Summit, Made An Address.

Despite the disagreeable weather of Thursday afternoon and the dangerous condition of the sidewalks that evening, the attendance at the missionary assembly which was held at the Grace M. E. church, Thursday afternoon and evening, was large and there was much interest was taken in the accounts of the work among missions in foreign lands.

At the afternoon session Rev. Dr. Daniel Halleron, presiding elder of the Elizabeth district, was in charge and made a few remarks of welcome at the opening of the session. Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, missionary secretary of the Elizabeth district, who was expected to be present to tell of the great Cleveland missionary convention, was unable to attend and Rev. Dr. E. L. Earp, pastor of the church in which the assembly was held, conducted the discussion on religious work assisted by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, of the First M. E. church, and Rev. Dr. John MacMurray, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church.

Miss Agnes McAllister, of the Garraway Mission, West Africa, interested the young people with an account of the devil worshippers of Africa. Special music was rendered at this session and a liberal collection was taken.

At the evening service, Rev. Dr. Henry R. Carroll presided. Dr. Carroll is secretary of the Missionary Society of the Methodist church. A short prayer and praise service preceded the address of Rev. Dr. A. H. Tuttle, of Summit. His topic was "The Spiritual Preparation for the Work of Mission," and proved to be an interesting address.

"Present Opportunities in China," was the subject of an address by Bishop David Hastings Moore, of Shanghai, China. In an interesting manner he told of the people of that great heathen empire and of the opportunities which await the missionaries in that country. He told of the difficulties encountered in the work among the people of that land and also told of the dangers of reaching the field of work when once in the Orient. The wonderful changes which have been wrought in that land since the advent of the missionary and of the work which is being done to enlighten the superstition-frought nation showed that the work which has been accomplished has not been in vain but on the other hand has been productive of much good.

A vocal rendition was a feature of the programme and was given by Mrs. Thomas MacDonald, of the choir of the First M. E. church, of Plainfield. Several selections by the choir of the church was a pleasing feature of the evening session. The session close with a benediction by Rev. Dr. Moore after the doxology had been sung.

The next meeting of the missionary department of the Elizabeth district will be held at Bloomsbury this week and the last of a series of five will be held at Port Richmond, S. I., next week.

NORMAL SCHOOL HERE.

Jersey Likely to Have Another and Plainfield Suggested As a Possible Site.

There is some talk of the possibility of the State erecting another Normal School for the purpose of supplying the demand for teachers and it has been said that Plainfield is being considered as a likely place to locate such a school. H. G Wightman, principal of the North Plainfield public schools, has taken considerable interest in the matter and, it is said, that he has received encouraging letters from the various principals throughout the State.

The question of establishing another Normal School arose from the fact that at present it is necessary to go out of the State for teachers, the Trenton school graduating but five hundred annually. It is believed that New Jersey can furnish all of her school teachers if another institution is established.

Classes for Boys.

Plans are being formulated by the members of the boys' work committee of the Y. M. C. A., to arrange a class in that institution for instructing the youth of this city who have not had the advantage of an education.

HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS HEARD IN SHAKESPEARE

Scenes Given From "Midsummer Night's Dream" by Class of '03 of High School.

WAS VERY SUCCESSFUL

FAIRIES AND THE COURT OF THE DUKE OF ATHENS FIGURED IN THE SCENES.

The Costumes Were Pretty and the Young People Made a Decided Hit in Their Acting—It Will be Repeated on Friday Night.

Despite the wintry weather Saturday evening, over two hundred and fifty people attended the first performance of Shakespeare's comedy, "Midsummer Night's Dream," given in Franklin Hall by the class of 1903, seniors of the City High School. The full play was not given but merely the scenes in which the clowns figure and those setting forth the quarrel and reconciliation of Oberon and Titania, king and queen of Fairyland. The last scene is that in which the clowns give the tragedy of "Pyramus and Thisbe" before Duke Theseus and his bride.

Throughout the performance, Mendelssohn's obligato to the play was pleasingly rendered by Miss Dorothy Walde, violin; Miss Jessie Utter, piano; Fullerton Walde, violin; and Miss Elizabeth Long, soprano.

The makeup of the clownish mechanics was most ludicrous, their swarthy complexions, matted hair, and knotty hands well portraying their rough callings. All took their parts with an ease and perfectness which showed careful rehearsing. Robert W. Meeker, who took the part of Nick Bottom, the weaver, went through his long and difficult speeches with a swing and character which excited much applause. The part of Flute, the bellows mender, was taken by Alden E. Moors, Ralph S. Lane took the part of Quince, the carpenter, Charles N. Doolittle was Snug, the joiner, Vincent B. Miner, Snout, the tinker, and Norman C. Hill made a decided hit as Starveling, the tailor.

In the next scene Titania and her fairies met Oberon and his attendants in the woods. The light effects, together with the beautiful costumes of the King and Queen of Fairyland and their elves, rendered this the most beautiful scene of the play, and the sight of the fairies, in their green and white gowns dancing to soft music about their King and Queen in the forest, could not fail to please the eye.

Arthur F. Conant and Miss Helen C. Moodey, as Oberon and Titania, were very skillful in the execution of their parts and Cyril Brown, as Puck, "Sprippet" about the stage in a manner highly pleasing. The Misses Gertrude and Harriet Moodey, dressed in white and carrying yellow scarfs, took the parts of Oberon's attendants while the Misses Edna Long, Alice Pugh, Annis Kinsman and Ethelyn Davis, dressed in white and carrying green scarfs, formed Queen Titania's bodyguard of fairies.

The following scenes where the clowns rehearse their play in the forest and are there surprised by Bottom, who enters, wearing an ass's head and causes wild confusion among the rustics were well acted and caused continuous laughter from the audience.

In the last scene, the clowns gave their play, supposedly a tearful tragedy, mid roars of laughter. Merriment reigned in the audience from the time when Ralph Lane, as Quince, entered for the prologue of the tragedy until Alden Moore,—as "Fairest Thisbe" fell in the throes of death across the already lifeless body of Pyramus "her" lover, fatally wounded by the too-vigorous use of the "trusty blade," a glittering tin sword.

Frederic T. VanAuken took the part of Theseus, Duke of Athens, before whom the tragedy was given. Miss Lucy Coriell took the part of Hippolyta, and Albert Beers played Philostrate, master of revels. Miss Harriet Randall and Miss Grace Wyckoff took the parts of court ladies and G. Archibald Brakeley and Michael T. Moynihan were the Duke's courtiers.

The play will be repeated on Friday evening. Miss Katherine F. Ball and Miss S. Lena Bass had charge of the rehearsals and were assisted by Miss Harriet Goddard, who took the part of Bottom when the play was given by the Shakespeare Society of Wellesley College last June. Lindsey Best was stage manager.

At the close of the play, the evening broke up with an informal dance.

A SMOKER AT PARK CLUB

TRIO OF PROFESSIONAL ARTISTS ENTERTAINED MEMBERS AND FRIENDS.

An Enjoyable Time at Annual Event at the Park Club Last Monday Evening.

The annual "smoker" at the Park Club, last Monday, attracted a large number of members and their invited friends, and everyone had a good time, thanks to the efforts of the house committee.

At 9 o'clock the guests adjourned to the main room, where the balance of the evening was passed in a social manner. There was plenty to smoke, and while the Havanas and pipes were being enjoyed, a trio of professional artists entertained. H. O. Winans and Eugene G. Cassler gave musical selections and incidentally cracked a number of jokes, while Charles H. Simerson, a clever impersonator, kept his audience convulsed with laughter while relating humorous stories and singing popular songs. The trio was assisted by Andrew G. Carpenter on the piano.

After the entertainment the committee furnished refreshments in abundance. The house committee in charge consisted of Samuel Townsend, chairman; George D. Hallock, S. St. John McCutchen and Augustus Van Deventer.

CAKE AND BREAD SALE.

Although Day Was Stormy, Everything Was Disposed Of.

Despite the storminess of Saturday afternoon, the home-made bread and cake sale given in the Monroe Avenue church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, proved a success. While the attendance was not large, every article contributed was sold. Some of the members who made cakes for the church and did not attend sold them to their neighbors and in this way helped out. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. Nicholas Brouard, Miss Annie Stafford and Mrs. Histon.

THE DOG SHOW.

New Jersey Kennel Association to Have Meeting Soon to Arrange for Next Exhibition.

The New Jersey Kennel Association is growing. Many new members have joined this fall, including some of the most noted dog owners in America.

The second annual show will be held February 17 to 20, the week following the famous New York show. The annual meeting of the committee was recently held to elect new officers, hear the annual report and to decide on important details connected with the coming show.

Next Sunday's Preacher.

Rev. Dr. Robert Bruce Hall, a talented Baptist divine of Brooklyn, will occupy the pulpit at the First Baptist church next Sunday morning and evening.

George Voehl, of West Front street, who has been in New York State for the past few days on a hunting trip, has returned home.

ANOTHER OLD RESIDENT GONE

MRS. ELIZA VAN NEST DIED AT ALTON SUNDAY MORNING.

Was in Her Ninety-Fourth Year—Injured in Fall Three Years Ago —Leaves Four Children.

In the death of Mrs. Eliza VanNest, widow of the late Peter VanNest, which occurred Sunday morning at the home of her son, William VanNest, at Alton, another one of the oldest residents is taken away. She was in the ninety-fourth year of her age, having been born in the vicinity of New Market in 1809. Up to three years ago she enjoyed excellent health but at that time she had a fall, which crippled her and, up to the time of her death, she was compelled to keep to her bed.

Mrs. VanNest was a thoroughly devoted Christian woman and was the oldest member of the Baptist church at South Plainfield. Her faith was strong to the end. Recently her son, Firman VanNest, of this city, died suddenly, but on account of her condition she was not informed of the fact. Mrs. VanNest lived with her son, William VanNest, the greater part of the last twenty-five years, and the funeral service will be held there tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The interment will be in the Baptist cemetery at South Plainfield.

Mrs. VanNest leaves four children, William, Thomas and Nelson VanNest and Mrs. Morgan Compton, the latter of Metuchen. She was a grandmother of Mrs. Charles Conover, of Elmwood place, and Mrs. Ida Harris, of South Plainfield.

FUNERAL OF MR. PEET.

Former Business Associates Turned Out to Honor His Memory.

The funeral of Charles B. Peet, who passed away at his home on Putnam avenue Wednesday morning, was held Friday afternoon at the Grace P. E. church. The services were conducted by Rev. Edward Vicars Stevenson, assisted by the rector emeritus, Rev. Erskine M. Rodman. The church was very nearly filled with a large number of prominent New York business men, who had been associated with Mr. Peet in the clothing and insurance business, and members of the clubs of which the deceased was a member.

The interment, which was held at Bridgeport, Conn., was private and took place Saturday.

"Hello" at Home.

A beautiful Angora cat wandered into the local exchange of the telephone company, Thursday, and was immediately adopted by the operators. It has been named "Hello" and the young women have appointed several of their number to care for it.

Even Smell Wears Out.

The sense of smell is weakened when ceaselessly exposed to powerful odors. Those engaged in offensive trades become unconscious of their loathesomeness. Snuffmakers must nonchalantly pursue their work in atmosphere so permeated with that article that the non-habituated person *cannot breathe it for a minute with*out painful irritation of nose, eyes, throat and mouth, sneezing and the like resulting. The teataster's loss of his sensitiveness of palate to such an extent that sooner or later he must inevitably quit his business, is witness to the consequence of long continued use of the tasting faculty. The skin shows one of the commonest forms of occupation trade marks. Harpists and guitar players show callosities of the fingers. Horny thickening of the skin from handling heavy implements is common on the palm of day laborers. Laundresses, dyers and bleachers have the same, in combination with blisters, thickened and softened skin. Porters have shoulder knots. "Housemaids' knees" mean blisters from long pressure. Miners have swellings of knees and hips.—Chicago Tribune.

"Tips" on the Sly.

"No; we are not altogether out in the cold," said the barber who works in a shop where the rules against tipping are absolutely adhered to. "Of course, we don't get any fee or tencent tips, such as come to barbers in the ordinary shop, but I guess we fare as well in the run, if my experience is any criterion. Most of us have our regular customers, and they don't forget us. For instance, a man whom I have shaved for several years once asked me when my rent fell due. I told him on the 15th day of the month. Every month since then, on the 13th, I have received a dollar bill by mail, just wrapped in paper and inclosed in a plain envelope. Other men who have taken the pains to find out where I live have sent me presents of a substantial nature, and once I even had a ton of coal dumped into my cellar without ever knowing where it came from. Every two months I get a box of cigars, and I don't know where any of these things come from. Lots of men like to do these sneaky, kind, little things."—Philadelphia Record.

Odd Wedding Customs.

Giving wedding presents is an old custom, but it differs in various countries. Scotland's penny weddings were peculiar. They were called penny affairs, but the invited guests contributed a shilling and occasionally a half crown, and out of this sum thus collected the expenses of the wedding feast were paid. Germany has a pay wedding at which the bride receives her guests with a basin before her, in which each person entering deposits a jewel, a silver spoon or a piece of money. In some parts of Germany the rule is that the expenses of the marriage feast shall be met by each guest paying for what he eats or drinks. The prices paid for viands and drinks are high, and the young couple often make a handsome profit out of their wedding, often realizing a sum quite sufficient to start them nicely in life. Often as many as 300 guests are present at such a wedding.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Advice to a Harried Congressman.

Representative Beidler, of Ohio, had a chunk of wisdom thrown at him by a waiter when he went into a restaurant for his breakfast.

"Yes," said Mr. Beidler.

"Then, boss," suggested the negro, "why don't yo' have yo' steak rare, and then you'll get it sooner."—Washington Correspondence of the Boston Traveler.

Lord Kitchener's Reward.

King Edward's recognition of the services rendered by Lord Kitchener in South Africa, created him a viscount and promoted him to be a general. The king also asked and obtained from parliament authority to make him a grant of $250,000. The grant was voted June 24, which was the third anniversary of the vote making a grant of $150,000 to Lord Kitchener for his brilliant success in the campaign in the Sudan.—Youth's Companion.

Lasquid Japanese Lady.

In a recent address in Tokyo a prominent Japanease educator said: "The indolence of Japanese ladies is something amazing. I know a daughter of a certain peer, neither an old court or a feudal peer, but a brandnew one, and this young lady's indolence is really beyond the idea of ordinary mortals. She will not even open her mouth of herself. As soon as the time to retire to her bed arrives she issues her order, 'Now I will retire,' and at once three or four maids spread the mosquito help her, for she merely stands like a doll—to change myself—she—at last the girl, swaddled in her night garment, is put to bed just like a person suffering from a serious illness and so the poor thing goes to sleep and releases her maids from their trouble until morning when the daily routine is resumed. First of all she issues to the maids waiting in her anteroom this extraordinary order, 'I shall get up now,' and then the process exactly the reverse of that the night before is forthwith commenced by the girls. Day after day this routine is gone through and the spoiled child of the proud upstart peer forces herself from her mistaken notion as to dignity to lead the life of an invalid and to cripple the normal development of her body."—Chicago Daily News.

Filipino Boy's Kites.

Just now as we came in off the street, we saw a Filipino boy, about eight years old, flying a feather for a kite. The feather was not more than two inches long, and an inch wide at the flaring end. The butt thereof tied to it in two places. Of course the feather did not fly much, but the boy amused himself with it for more than five minutes that we watched him. There were no other children about, and he never said a word. Never complained when it did not fly, or expressed any exclamations of joy when it did. These Filipino boys will fly most anything. A leaf out of a book, a leaf of a tree, a piece of newspaper, a beetle, or a live—no lie—out over the ocean, we came from. A Rope for Mark Twain.

The Missouri papers are telling this story of Mark Twain's recent visit to his home: A big crowd gathered at a railway station to meet him. A little boy knew that somebody was coming, but he did not know Mark Twain from Bossie Francis. This kid perched himself on top of a freight car, where he could see what happened. The train rolled in, and as Mark stepped off the people became excited and shouted: "Here he is! Here he is!" The kid on the box car heard a great criminal had been caught, and shouted: "Git a rope! Git a rope." Dr. Clemens laughed till the tears ran out of his eyes.—N. Y. Tribune.

What They Did.

"We had a delightful time last week," said the city cousin, who was describing the joys of metropolitan life. "We dined at Bustleyed out to a suburban home and ping-ponged until nearly midnight and next day we automobiled to the country club and golfed until dark."

"We had a pretty good time last week, too," ventured the country cousin, with a sarcastic smile. "One day we buggied over to Uncle Josiah's and us boys got out in the back lot and baseballed all afternoon, and after we had dinnered we sneaked up to the loft and lit a candle and pokered until I had every blamed cent in the crowd."—Baltimore American.

The "Royal Limited," is "the finest day-light train in the world."

The name is applied to two trains, one of which leaves New York daily via the New Jersey Central at 3:40 p. m., arriving Washington at 8:40 p. m.; the other leaving Washington 3 p. m., arriving New York 8 p. m. They are exact counterparts, and are composed of splendid coaches, Pullman parlor cars, parlor observation buffet cars and dining and cafe cars.

The drawing-rooms in the cars are finished in different designs; some are in green and gold; others in rich red. The general design of the main parlor of all the cars is Persian.

The cars are the most magnificent and largest ever built; seventy feet in length with all modern appliances, including wide vestibules with anti-telescoping device, empire deck, steam heat, Pintsch gas and air pressure water system.

SECOND ISSUE OF QUIVER

PUBLICATION BY YOUNG WOMEN OF RANDOLPH-COOLEY SCHOOL.

The Clever Little Paper Has Just Made Its Appearance—The Editors.

The Christmas number of The Quiver, a paper published by the Qui Vive Society of the Randolph-Cooley Collegiate School, of this city, has just made its appearance in its second issue since it was started by the members of that institute. In appearance its attractiveness of design and composition at once catches the eye and its contents are equally interesting to the pupils as well as to the alumni. It is fresh and breezy from the pens of its editors and contributors.

On the first page are the names of the editorial sponsors of the publication and at the head of the list is Miss Helen T. Batchelor as editor-in-chief. Associated with her are Miss Elinor G. Waring, Miss Margaret Lowe, Miss Ruth Fredericks and Miss Helen M. Ortshanck. The advertisements in this publication, like all other magazines, are not the least interesting reading by any means and those who have charge of this important department are Miss Dorothy Burke and Miss Marion Smith.

Among the contributions to this month's issue of the paper is a poem by Miss Helen Batchelor, in which each member of the school is mentioned in bright witticisms. Toward the last part of the reading matter are some really clever jokes which are entirely original. All things considered the paper continues to improve with every issue.

TOLD BY AN EYE WITNESS

Miss Marion Bowen's Clever Sketch of Castro and the Capital City of Venezuela.

RECENTLY RETURNED

Timely Article by Plainfield Young Woman Which Appears in This Week's Issue of The Independent—The Story of Miss Bowen Given in Full.

This week's New York Independent contains a very timely article on "President Castro and the City of Caracas," by Miss Marion P. Bowen, daughter of H. E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue, this city. Miss Bowen only recently returned from Caracas where she spent several months at the American Legation with her uncle, Herbert W. Bowen, the United States Minister, who is now a figure of international importance in the controversy in that South American republic.

The article in full is as follows:

"General Cipriano Castro, the President of Venezuela, is comparatively young, being only about forty years of age. His personal appearance is rather against him, as he is lame, short and dark visaged, being of a decided Indian type. But one cannot look at his face without reading there an indomitable tenacity of purpose and dogged persistency. His eyes are black and piercing, and he has every appearance of being a man who has perfect confidence in his own power to rule, and who is bound to rule with a rod of iron. I think no power on earth could make him change his mind after it was once made up.

"Even his enemies will admit that President Castro is an exceedingly clever man. I was fortunate enough to stand near him at the reception in 'Miraflores,' the Presidential Palace, immediately following his re-inauguration in March, 1902, and I could not but admire the way in which he received his many callers. He was surrounded by enemies and sycophants as well as by friends, and, in spite of his small size, there was something majestic in the way in which he carried himself throughout the entire afternoon. There was a steady stream of men to shake hands with him, and he had a different greeting for almost every one of them. I could almost tell what was passing through President Castro's mind as each man approached. With some he was coldly polite, with others a little more cordial, while others he would grasp warmly by the hand and would throw his arm around their shoulders, which is the South American mode of greeting one's best friends.

"His lameness is the result of a wound received in the battle of Tocuyito, where he succeeded in wresting the Presidency of Venezuela from General Ignacio Andrade. Before this wound had time to heal President Castro was awakened one night by the awful earthquake. It was on October 29, 1900, and, thinking the house was crumbling beneath him, he jumped out of a second story window in his palace, the 'Casa Amarilla' (Yellow House) and broke his wounded leg. This ignominious jump is not generally given as the cause of his lameness, for his countrymen think it sounds better to say their President injured his leg in battle. The 'Casa Amarilla' was not destroyed by the earthquake, but its foundations were so weakened by the severe recurring shocks that it was considered unsafe for occupancy, and the next day General and Madame Castro moved into their present home, 'Miraflores' ('Look at the Flowers'), which is one of the finest buildings in Caracas. A former President, General Joaquin Crespo, spent a fabulous sum of money in having this house built for his home, but he did not remain in power long enough to occupy it himself. President Castro has also spent a good deal of money in adding to the beauties of this attractive house, and it is now one of the most beautiful places imaginable, filled with all manner of valuable paintings, tapestries and curios, while the 'patio,' or open court, around which the house is built, is fragrant with the perfume of tropical flowers and palms, which grow in luxuriant profusion around the marble fountain in the centre. The air is filled with the singing of the brilliantly plumaged native birds of South America, which hang between the beautifully carved pillars surrounding the four sides of the 'patio.' But what pleases President Castro most of all is his famous earthquake room, built entirely of iron and made so that it can be shut off from the rest of the house, and which is supposed to be proof against the most violent earthquake.

"President Castro is very fortunate in having such a charming wife as Madame Yoita de Castro. She is a woman about thirty years of age and has a gracious and charming manner, which is greatly enhanced by her personal beauty. Her coal black hair is a great contrast to her ivory-tinted complexion, and her big brown eyes are soft and dreamy, but they change at the slightest provocation to the most wideawake and sparkling brilliancy. She has a quiet dignity which is rather surprising when one realizes that she was not born in a palace, but on a simple Venezuelan ranch, and no one has ever caught her in a faux-pas. She dresses with great elegance, and in the latest Parisian style, and her dressmaker and hairdresser are always close a hand to help her at any hour of the day or night when she wishes to be well gowned and groomed before presenting herself to the critical world of Caracas. She is 'at home' every Monday afternoon, and there are usually many callers who come to pay their respects to the first lady of the land. General Castro is never present on these occasions, but Madame Castro is assisted in receiving by her private secretary, General Barret de Na Yarris. As Madame Castro cannot speak a word of French or English it is necessary for Senor Barret to be near her always, as he speaks both languages fluently and is a most agreeable and courteous gentleman. Not only if Madame Castro attractive in appearance, but she has a very tender, sympathetic heart, and is always ready to help in a most substantial way her poor and less fortunate countrymen and women. There has been much suffering and want in Caracas during this past year that Madame Castro has spent $50,000 out of her own personal income. Is it any wonder that the Venezuelans love and almost worship this kind-hearted woman, who spends her time and money in trying to relieve the suffering of others?

"President and Madame Castro generally give many brilliant entertainments, but owing to the recent revolution they have lived a very quiet life during the past year, and have only once thrown open the doors of 'Miraflores' to their hosts of friends, both among the Venezuelans and the Foreign Colony. This was at the New Year's reception in 1902, when from 2:30 until 7:30 p. m. President and Madame Castro received the New Year's greetings from a throng of handsomely dressed men and women, who for the time being threw aside all their worry and anxiety over the revolution and enjoyed to the utmost the hospitality of their President and his wife.

"The Venezuelans are naturally an indolent, easy-going people, with all the excitable and emotional characteristics that are always found in the tropical countries. The ladies do nothing but sit in the windows all day long, waiting for some lover to pass along beneath and stop and chat for a while. A man has to be a favored suitor before he is allowed to do more than make a 'window call,' and even when he has gained entrance to the house of his lady love he is never left alone with her for one minute, but is always chaperoned by the father and mother, who sometimes have the kindness to fall asleep for a few seconds over their reading. The men all prefer loafing in the cafes or sitting in groups in the Plaza smoking their inevitable cigarets and twirling their canes, instead of going to work like Anglo-Saxons and making something of themselves and their beautiful country that is always being thrown into a state of unrest and poverty by petty revolutions. There is very little class distinction in Caracas, as some of the best families have intermarried in past years with negroes, Indians and natives of the West Indies. It is strange to see the few pure-blooded Spanish families mingling with their countrymen of almost every shade from light yellow to jet black. But the climate of Caracas has a great deal to do with making the people what they are, for the tropical sun is so hot that one is only too glad to let the days slip lazily past, and the nights are only made to be danced or dreamed away under the beautiful tropical sky, made brilliant with the moon and the countless stars and the wonderful 'Southern Cross.' It seems as if that beautiful country is made only for peace and romance and not for political controversies and continual warfare. The very

MILITARY WEDDING AT GLENCORAN

Marriage of Miss May W. Honeycutt to Lieut. Frederic W. Hinrichs.

ARMY OFFICERS THERE

GROOM AND HIS ATTENDANTS WERE ATTIRED IN UNIFORM.

Decorations Were Very Elaborate and Appropriate—The Groom is Stationed at Fort Hamilton, Where They Will Reside.

Glencoran, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, on Rockview terrace, was the scene, yesterday at 1:30 o'clock, of another military wedding, when Miss May Webster Honeycutt, was united in marriage to Lieutenant Frederic W. Hinrichs, Jr., U. S. A., stationed at Fort Hamilton, N. Y. The room, his best man and the ushers were all attired in the uniforms of the United States Army and the nuptial knot was tied in front of a draped American flag.

The ceremony took place in the front parlors in the presence of seventy-five people many of whom were of the army. Rev. Dwight Hillis, pastor of the Plymouth church, of Brooklyn, officiated.

As the wedding party entered an aisle was made through the parlors by four ribbon girls, all attired in white. These were Miss Gertrude Mills, daughter of Colonel A. L. Mills, superintendent of the Military Academy at West Point; Miss Elizabeth Allen, of St. Louis, a college friend of the bride at Vassar, and Miss Dora Waring and Miss Margaret McCutchen, of this city.

Down the aisle the bridal party proceeded to the bow window where they passed inside a chancel rail formed of white ribbons. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Cadet Francis W. Honeycutt, of the Military Academy, West Point. The maid-of-honor was Miss Elinor Lusk, a cousin of the bride and a daughter of Colonel Lusk, of the Engineers Corps.

The bride was attired in a gown of white liberty satin with trimmings of duchess lace. She wore a veil which was caught at the brow by a beautiful jeweled pin. She carried a large bouquet of white bridal roses. The ribbon girls were gowned in white silk muslin with lace trimmings and the maid-of-honor white swiss organdie with trimmings of valle lace.

The decorations at the home were very pretty and tasty. In the bow window were draped several large American flags and at the sides of the wall were clusters of Southern smilax and holly. Roses were the main decorations in the parlors and in the dining rooms, where a wedding supper was served after the ceremony had been performed. It was then that the bridal cake was cut and was distributed. This was followed by a reception which lasted until train time when the bride and groom departed, leaving the North Avenue station at 3:45. They will enjoy an extended honeymoon and when they return will take up their residence at Fort Hamilton where the groom is located. They will be at home Fridays in February.

GAVE CHRISTMAS RECEPTION

BY CHILDREN OF MERCY TO SUNDAY-SCHOOL PUPILS OF ST. JOSEPH'S.

Exercises Held at St. Gabriel's Academy Tuesday Afternoon —Clever Fan Drill.

A Christmas reception was given Tuesday afternoon at St. Gabriel's Academy, in the borough, by the Sisters of Mercy of St. Joseph's church to the children of the Sunday-school and the afternoon was very pleasantly spent in song and recitation.

The programme was opened by Miss Marie Kenney, who made the address of welcome. "The Rogue" was the title of a recitation by Philip Boone which was followed by some special music by the Christmas chorus choir. Miss Bessie Keisse recited "The Two Kittens," and Miss Berdette Duchesne favored with a piano solo. Ralph Smith, one of the pupils of the lower classes, recited "The Empty Stocking," and Miss Madeline Noonan gave a recitation, entitled "A Child's Offering."

Miss Mary McCullough rendered a piano solo after which an exhibition by the physical culture class was given when they went through a drill in dumbbells very cleverly. A piano duet was rendered by the Misses Annie Pedelinos and Irene Duchesne, followed by a recitation by Miss Irene Duchesne, entitled "One of the Little Ones," and Miss Dorothy Heise favored with piano solos.

A feature of the exercises, especially worthy of mention, was the fan drill which was not only a novelty but was very well executed by the children. The costumes were very pretty and some of the figures through which the children marched were very intricate, but the children did splendidly and not a break or mistake was made throughout the drill.

Refreshments were served after the exercises and a social time was enjoyed among the children until late in the afternoon.

CHRISTMAS RUSH ON AT LOCAL POSTOFFICE

Every Department Using Extra Men in Order to Deliver the Packages.

CARRIERS LOADED DOWN

IMMENSE AMOUNT OF BUSINESS CURTAILS REGULAR DELIVERIES.

Postmaster Bird Declares That His Force is Handling More Mail Matter Than at Any Time Since He Has Been in Office.

When the ancients were at work building the famous pyramids in Egypt they could not have worked harder than are the employes of the local postoffice in reducing the piles of mail matter which is poured into that office at all hours of the day and night at this time of the year. A glance through the window of the general delivery booth will show what the handling of a modern Christmas mail is in a modern city when prosperity reigns everywhere.

As each carrier leaves the delivery department for his route along the residential streets of his city he looks like Old Santa himself with the great pack of Christmas presents filling his mailbag and hanging on to his clothing by strings attached to his button holes and buttons and over his shoulder. So great has the business in the local postoffice been during the past three days that Postmaster Bird has found it necessary to supply an extra man for each carrier in order to assist him with his bundles.

Not only has the crush been great in the carriers' department but it has grown to such proportions in the office that every available man in the service in this city has been put to work behind the barred windows. The general delivery department has grown in business within a few days that there has had to be another man placed in that department to assist the clerk.

In speaking of the rush of business at the office during this time of the year Postmaster Bird said that is is always very heavy around the holidays but he thinks the rush this year is even greater than it was at any time since he has been in office. He recalled that in all of his five years as postmaster in this city he has never seen such voluminous business done in the registered letter department. The increase in this section has made it necessary to have several extra men to handle the mailmatter and one of these men does nothing all day but stamp letters and another man does nothing but assort the letters and packages.

James Rogers, the colored porter who carries the mail from the office to the Jersey Central Railroad depot, has his hands full with the rest of the employes. On each trip his cart is loaded to its utmost capacity and it may be necessary before Christmas to have another wagon and helper to assist him.

The rush in this city has reached such proportions that the carriers have not been able to cover their four routes daily in the business district and the business men have had to be content with three deliveries a day. This, Mr. Bird said, is unavoidable and he hoped that the merchants would be patient under the circumstances.

And with all this rush of mailmatter there seems to be no relief in sight for the rush in the postoffices does not cease after Christmas but keeps up for a week or two afterwards when belated mailmatter begins to reach the city. After that time the packages stop arriving but there is a large amount of letters which come and go for almost a month after the holidays until February when the business at Uncle Sam's offices all over the country settles down to its regular regime.

MUSICALE CLUB ENTERTAINS

THE INITIAL AFFAIR HELD BY THAT ORGANIZATION TUESDAY.

A Delightful Time Was Had at the Home of Miss Maude VanBoskerck.

The initial musicale under the auspices of the Musicale Club, of Plainfield, was greatly enjoyed Tuesday afternoon at the home of Miss Maude VanBoskerck, who entertained the club in a delightful way. The programme was a very select one and every number was a gem, receiving hearty genuine applause from those present.

The programme was opened with a piano selection, "Meditation," by Miss Maude VanBoskerck, and this was followed with two charming soprano selections by Mrs. William L. Saunders. The next number was a piano solo by Miss Ada Marsh, after which there was a piano duet by Miss Maude VanBoskerck and Miss Hyatt, which was very well received, as was also the next number, a violin and piano duet, by Mrs. John Doni Miller and Miss Cornelia Hyatt. The next number was a piano selection, a Christmas composition, by Mrs. George Stewart Ring.

At the conclusion of these musical numbers, Miss Elizabeth Stewart read a paper, prepased by herself, on "Bach." The closing number was a Christmas selection, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," which was sung by the entire club.

After the musicale a social time was enjoyed and refreshments were served by the hostess. During the winter these musicales will be held at regular intervals and a most successful season is promised.

WINTER WEDDING IN CHURCH

MARRIAGE OF MISS ALICE BURGESS AND WILLIAM G. BURTON.

An Event Was the Ceremony at Mt. Olive Baptist Church—Reception at House Followed.

An event of more than passing interest to the colored people of this city took place in Mount Olive Baptist church Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when the vows were pronounced which united as man and wife Wm. G. Burton, of this city, and Miss Alice Burgess, of Beaufort, N.C. Several hundred guests from this city and the south witnessed the ceremony.

Miss Burgess was attended by her sister, Miss Channie Burgess, as maid-of-honor while Miss Lucy Skinner and Miss Courtney Brooks acted as bridesmaids. Both were attired in white crepe de cline and carried pink roses. The bride's gown was of white silk with applique trimmings.

Attending the groom as best man was Fred White, while the remainder of the party was made up of the ushers, Austin Carey, Richard Harris, J. W. Brooks, R. T. Toney, Charles Barber, John Scott and W. E. Dempsey. Miss Henrietta Randolph presided at the organ and during the ceremony rendered appropriate music.

When the words, which bound them as one, had been pronounced, the bride and groom with their guests proceeded to the home of Arthur Venable, on West Third street, where a reception was held. It lasted until late last evening when Mr. and Mrs. Burton left for the south where they will spend a few weeks, principally in North Carolina. Both young people were remembered with many pretty presents. The groom is in the employ of Mrs. J. Parker Mason, of Stelle avenue.

The first recital will be given with explanatory notes on the development of the piano from the spinet, and the second recital will also be given with explanatory notes on modern composers.

MORE FUNDS FOR NEW FIRE HOUSE

Borough Will Probably Hold a Special Election to Vote on Question.

WANT AT LEAST $2,000

The Committee of Borough Council Opened the Bids Tuesday and Found Even With the Altered Plans That There Wasn't Enough Money to Build the House.

There will probably be another special election in the borough of North Plainfield for the purpose of appropriating $2,000 more toward the building of a new fire house in the borough. The committee on the proposed fire house, when bids were opened at a committee meeting in the Council Chambers, last Tuesday, found that the lowest bids for the work amounted to $10,000. The original appropriation amounted to $10,000 and the committee will recommend to the Council when it meets again, the holding of a special election to appropriate $2,000 more for the purpose of building the house.

The meeting of the committee occupied in all but ten minutes, which allowed the clerk, Frank Rowley, to open the bids and to discuss the matter of recommending a special election. It seemed to be the consensus of opinion that that was the best thing to do under the circumstances, as the building cannot be erected under $12,000 with the prices of material as high as they are at present.

The lowest bid for the mason work was that of J. H. Snyder, of this city. His bid was for $4,378. If the wooden floor was to be omitted the price of the work would be $3,921, and if the cellar was to be dug by some one else the cost would be $4,237.

The lowest bid for the carpentery work was that of George Hommer, of Stone street, who would do all the work for $5,350. If there was to be no wooden flooring $394 could be deducted from the amount.

There was but one bid for the electrical work and that was one sent in by Aaron M. Higgins, which stated that all bells as specified but no fixtures would be placed in the building for the sum of $164. There was but one plumber's bid and that one was submitted by C. W. Krasase, of this city for $983.45.

There were four bids submitted by different companies for the iron work and the lowest of these was that of W. T. Kirk Company, of this city; who offered to do the work for $1,595. This covers the price of supplying all the iron work for the structure.

The other bids submitted were as follows:

Mason work, Titus H. Laury, $4,957; carpentry work, John C. Mills, $3,815.45; iron work, Hay Foundry Co., of New York, $1,695; Berlin Construction Company, New York, $1,760; Levering & Garrigues, city, $1,690.

The total of the lowest bids which will complete the house according to the revised specifications of the architect will amount to $9,117, which will not include the cost of the lot. This does not include all of the plumbing for the house. After the lot has been paid for out of the appropriation there will be but $7,500 which will not be sufficient to erect the building as was shown by the bids received last evening, and for that reason the matter of holding a special election will be discussed before the next meeting of the Council. It is said that with the extra $2,000, the building could be completed with the concrete floor which has been found to be just as cheap as the wooden floor which was at first spoken of.

He's a Grandpa.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fulton, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Brooklyn, are the proud parents of a baby daughter born to them Monday. Among those who are receiving congratulations over the happy event is "Grandpapa" E. W. Mills, the genial manager of the United States Express Company, who is the father of Mrs. Fulton.

Other Good Things.

In addition to the election of officers, there will be attractive features of the programme at the meeting of Minnisconno Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., Friday evening. There will be musical numbers, short speeches appropriate to Christmastide and refreshments.

The New City Palace of Millionaire Schwab

He Is Adding Another to the Many Beautiful Homes of New York City.

MANY men from states west of New York have, after accumulating enormous fortunes, returned to the metropolis to make that city their home. A number of these wealthy westerners have built or purchased elaborate homes, but they have almost invariably followed the fashion of closely cramped buildings set together so that in many instances but one wall separates the two houses, built flush with the streets, with nothing in the way of lawns or possibility for landscape decorations.

And now has come another man from out of the west—but so very far west, to be sure—who has set aside all previous conceptions of what a New York home should be, and proposes to build for comfort as well as elegance from the French renaissance to the French gothic.

The materials of which the new home is to be built is cream granite and stone, surmounted by dark blue slate roofs for the main building, and stone and brick for the two side wings.

The building will consist of cellar, basement, first, second, third and fourth stories, attic and roof terrace. In the basement will be located one of the finest natatoriums ever built, either in this country or Europe, bowling alleys and gymnasium. The first floor is to contain all the main rooms; the second floor will be given over to bedrooms almost entirely; the third floor to guests' rooms, and the fourth floor to the servants' rooms. Of the two wings of the building the one facing Seventy-third street will be occupied by the kitchen and pantries, and the one facing Seventy-fourth street will contain the art gallery.

THE SCHWAB HOME OVERLOOKING RIVERSIDE DRIVE.

To the artistic finishings of the rooms quite as much care is being given as to the construction of the building. In fact, it is in the finishings and furnishings that the artistic taste of Mr. and Mrs. Schwab will be shown to best advantage. Mr. Schwab's tastes will predominate in the Flemish den, the library, the billiard room and other portions of the house that are more distinctly masculine. The Flemish den is being designed as a place of entertainment for the personal friends of Mr. Schwab, and it is to be fitted up in such a way that will lend to comfort rather than dainty elegance. It will be a man's room in every sense.

A keynote to the whole artistic finish of the building will be given by the both inside and out. He could not be satisfied with a 25 or 50-foot frontage, but has bought an entire block 200x400 feet, and in the center of this he proposes to build a palace 75x150 feet.

That man is Charles M. Schwab, head of the billion-dollar steel trust, and in many ways the most interesting man in America. He is a self-made man in more ways than the mere accumulation of money. Coupled with the making of an enormous fortune he has cultivated a taste for the best there is in art and literature, and in the construction of his new home he proposes to combine comfort with artistic elegance. To secure these, he and his wife studied the best examples of European architecture, and it was not until they had decided upon their ideal that they gave instruction to an architect to prepare the plans.

The site on which the New York home of the Schwabs will be built faces Riverside drive on the west and West End avenue on the east, extending from Seventy-third to Seventy-fourth street, attic and terrace. The modest sum of $863,000 was paid. But this is but the beginning of expenditure. As now outlined, it will take $3,000,000 more to complete the house, and new features that will increase the cost are being added almost constantly. When completed it will be one of the most notable homes on this continent.

The style of architecture is patterned after three famous French chateaus. The main building will follow closely the architecture of the Chateau Chenonceaux, while the designs of the side and rear buildings are taken from the Chateau Blois and the Chateau Azay-Le-Rideau, all three of which have been admired by many generations of artists. It is a style of architecture that is described as the French transitional, a style that led from the fortress to the chateau.

The main hall, staircase and reception hall. This is to be finished in the style of Francis I., the main hall being 24½ stories high and surrounded by a circular gallery which leads to the principal rooms on the second floor.

Many ingenious inventions are being utilized to add to the comfort of the home when it is completed. The temperature of the water in the natatorium will be regulated automatically; the lighting of all the main rooms will be from concealed and reflected overhead electric lights; in the summer time a refrigerating plant will cool the outside plant before it passes into the rooms of the house, and the air after being cooled will be circulated by electric fans and regulated automatically; in the winter the air will pass through heated radiators and the temperature regulated automatically; in the belfry of the observation tower a set of chimes will ring the hours and half hours, and these to be connected with the observation clock at Washington.

MAX OWEN.

ORDERED THEIR HAIR CUT.

What Happened to Two American Newspaper Correspondents in St. Vincent.

The large corps of newspaper correspondents which went down to the West Indies after the volcano disasters brought back any number of interesting stories of their adventures at St. Vincent and Martinique. The best of these, perhaps, is one concerning two well-known correspondents who started to explore the streets of St. Vincent town, says the Washington Star. One of them went into a hat shop and the other waited outside for his companion to emerge. While basking in the hot sunlight a great six-foot West Indian negro came up to him and inquired if he was from the United States steamship Dixie. The correspondent replied in the affirmative, whereupon the negro informed him that he represented the St. Vincent board of health, and that the correspondents must have his hair cut immediately or return to his ship. The newspaper man smiled scornfully. The negro did not, but firmly told him that he must take him back to his ship if he refused to lose his back locks. And the negro looked as if he could do it. At this juncture the correspondent's friend came out of the hat store and joined him. The big negro presented the same ultimatum to the newcomer, and finally both correspondents were escorted down the street by the alleged health official.

As they turned into an intersecting thoroughfare the trio met with a policeman, and in a twinkling the stalwart negro had become but a flying black streak as they dashed down the avenue. The two men told the story to the guardian of the peace, who smiled sardonically. "Why, that man is a barber," he said, "and keeps a shop right down on the next corner."

HAS AN'N 'S BEATEN.

A Philadelphia Boy Who Takes the Lauels from the Ancient Procrastator.

One of the two boys who figure in this tale should get along in the world with ability to get results with small provocation would seem to be great. Evidently he has little affection for the smaller denominations of figures, says the Philadelphia Times. When told by a gentle playfellow that the latter had been made a paternal present of a goat, he replied:

"Huh! My pop has a whole flock of goats down in his office."

The other boy seemed amazed, but went on with his joyful narrative.

"My papa bought me a wagon, too," he said.

"Well, what of it?" he was asked. "My pop had so many wagons he had to burn 'em, because he had no room for 'em."

The gentle boy did not believe this. Moreover, to hear it pained him; for he had faith in what he learned in Sunday school.

"But you know what happened to Ananias and Sapphira?" he asked. "They were struck dead for lying."

Patently, this was not information to his companion, who responded—impatiently, perhaps, but without bravado:

"I know it. I saw them struck."

THE CLOCK STOPPED.

And When It Did It Seared the Burglar Almost Out of His Senses.

"Ever hear a clock stop in the middle of the night?" said the retired burglar, according to the New York Sun. "I did, once, and I never was much more scared by anything for a minute, in my life.

"I'd just picked up a watch that was lyin' on the top of a bureau in a house that I was in when all of a sudden there seemed to drop right down, somehow, a stillness that was like death; and I found myself standing there holding that watch and looking around in the dark in all directions, expecting something terrible to happen; and scared?

"Why, for a minute I was scared almost out of my senses. And then all of a sudden it struck me that a clock that I'd been hearing ticking away good and strong up to that minute in the room back of the one I was in had stopped.

"That's all, but that was enough for me, and I just slid out.

"I like a quiet house, but I don't like one with that kind of stillness in it; and then, sometimes folks are woke up by a clock stopping just about as quick as they would be by the firing of a gun."

The Panama Hat.

According to a New York dealer the market is flooded with Peruvian Panamas. They are woven in Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador from the fibers of the palm, which are bleached and the fax before they are woven. Then the hats are shipped to Paris, where they go through a process which gives them stiffness and gloss. After journeying to Paris the hats are shipped to New York and sold for $1.75. Some of them are bleached and generally Americanized, in which case they are sold for five dollars. A really good Panama can be purchased in the shops this year for $15, whereas last year they were made $25 lighter by the same article this year. The modish persons in New York, it is said, are not purchasing Panamas this year, however. The Panama is growing too cheap to be exclusive any longer, and the swagger set has dropped it.

Paris Population.

Paris, according to the latest census returns, has a population of 2,630,000 persons, of whom 1,200,000 are either foreigners or provincials.

THE OLD MILL.

The Grown Up Boy was going to take Her to see the old mill. It was the first time he had been within 20 miles of the mill in 20 years, but all that time it had filled a green and pleasant spot in his memory. Often we let his mind drift about in a flat-bottomed scow on the smooth waters of the mill pond above the dam. That is an enormous mill pond. As he remembered it one could hardly see from the fringing willows on one bank to the green pasture lands which loped quickly down to the other.

And the dam! Possibly somewhere has been built a more tremendous engineering work, but certainly the Grown Up Boy had never seen it. He knew just how the great head of water gathered behind the dam came sweeping down on to the apron in a sheet of green and white water that was almost overpowering in its magnificence. Below the dam, where the big boulders lay in the path of the stream, lay bass and pickerel—better and bigger fish than the wild lakes of Wisconsin or the rivers of Canada had ever yielded to a more sophisticated spoon hook.

The remembered vista, added to the old mill was hilly—almost mountainous, a sort of an Illinois Switzerland. It took hours to climb one of those hills, particularly when you had a "dun-dasie" on your right big toe and you were lugging a sack full of fish and other trophies.

Considering the length of the road and the terrifying size of those hills as they loomed up against the horizon of his memory, the Grown Up Boy considered that it would be wise to make an all day trip of it. Possibly it may started early in the morning and drove a couple of good horses they might get back to dinner, but it was no light undertaking.

The Grown Up Boy had told Her what to expect. Of course he could not hope to do justice to the grandeur of the scenery, but he had done his best. For instance, when they had stood down at the Niagara Falls he had said, only half in joke: "But wait till you see old man Atkinson's mill dam."

And now here on their way. The two white horses went over the springy dirt roads at a swinging trot. They crossed the river and that stream, which poured a wide and tumultuous flood through the level plains of memory, looked strangely shrunken and quiet.

"Way-down low," said the Grown Up Boy—and then he was reminded that, on the contrary, it had been an extremely wet season.

But where were the hills? Pleasant, generous rolls and swells of land there were in abundance, but those towering, mountainous crags, and peaks of memory had vanished. The horses scarcely stopped to breathe on the steepest of the slopes. An old German farmer, riding with his hausfrau, two daughters, and a small son in a green farm wagon, came along the road, driving a pair of big gray Normans. In the pleasant country fashion greetings were passed as the Grown Up Boy pulled up beside him.

"Must have been cutting down the hills hereabouts," said the perplexed visitor.

"Nein," said the old farmer, with a slow grin. "Dey bin yust te same dey always was."

The white mares swung around a corner out of the main road down into a narrow lane, bordered with hazel and sumac bushes and a tangle of young underbrush.

"Keep your eyes open now," said the Grown Up Boy, "and in a minute you'll get your first glimpse of the old mill."

"There," he said, pointing ahead as the flash of something big and red caught his eye, "and is there still a shad run?"

"That" was soon seen to be a big bill-board. Below a huge lion with a bright crimson mouth and a bushy tail advised everybody to "Use Blank's Blue shoe," while above was a design calling peoples' attention to the importance of saving "your chewing tobacco tags." The mill had entirely vanished.

The Grown Up Boy was almost ready to weep or curse. He stopped his horses in front of a little store building and went in to ask what had become of that great stone mill which he had left 20 years before towering up above all the surrounding landscape.

"She's right down there behind the bill board," said the young storekeeper. "They built a new addition on to her last year and she's twice as big as she used to be."

The miller was there in his old place, finishing up the same job of tying the mouths of paper bags that he had just begun when the Grown Up Boy had left him 20 years before. At any rate, if he was not the same miller no effort was made to correct the error. A man may be allowed to keep one illusion surely. And inside the old mill was unchanged. There was the old, pleasant gurgle of water as it turned the wheel, and the same sweet, cinnamon smell of newly-made flour.

A single glance out of the mill window was enough to settle the mill dam, and the tremendous mill pond which had been so thoroughly believed in for a score of years. The mill dam looked like a toy and the mill pond would hardly make a good mud puddle. Down below the dam a little stream was bickering over the bowlders which had shrunk to the dimensions of good-sized pebbles. The Grown Up Boy determined to have a try at those memorial pickerel and bass.

He fitted a reel on a light steel pole and commenced to cast with the smallest spoon in his tackle box. Presently a freckle faced country boy, with an open mouth and wide blue eyes, came down from the store and sat down on the end of a log to supervise operations. He said nothing, but watched the fruitless casts with grim and amused silence.

"Catchin' much nowadays?" asked the Grown Up Boy in an effort to establish fraternal relations with a brother fisherman.

"Not with a hook big enough to catch a shark on, we ain't," said the boy.

"That's the biggest hook I've got," said the Grown Up Fisherman.

"You kin git plenty over to the store of you've got the price," said the boy.

He was sent to the quarter with a request to go over and buy a supply of shark hooks. He came back presently with some minnow hooks and a can of worms.

"Put 'em on them there here," he said, "and try it down there just below the spurn."

A moment later the Grown Up Boy felt a bite. He struck and missed feverishly, while the small boy snorted in contempt.

"Yank her out," he commanded. The Grown Up Boy yanked and landed a shiner about six inches long.

"That's a purty good one, now," said the boy. "I'll say the fishin's better this year than it's been in 25 years."

After all, it may have been the same miller, else how could the boy have come back that far to enter the net of those long cherished dreams? Chicago Tribune.

SHARK STEALS HENS.

Startling Story Told by Truthful Louisiana Lawyer.

The Rubber Fish Caught in the Act, With Chicken Feathers Between His Ugly Teeth—How He Worked the Game.

It is not often that a shark breaks into a man's henroost and steals his chickens. Such a case, however, is on record at Pointe-a-la-Hache. Emmet Hingle told the story as he showed a New Orleans Times-Democrat man around his father's back yard, which was full of lively and intelligent young chickens. Mr. Hingle has only had a few years' experience as a lawyer. His veracity is therefore unquestioned. He introduced the matter by remarking:

"We lost a great number of our chickens last year to a shark."

"White or colored?" asked the visitor, incredulously.

"A shark, man—a shark from the gulf—eight feet long."

"Did he walk all the distance or come in a fish car?"

"The affairs is not as impossible as you are inclined to believe," remarked Mr. Hingle in an aggrieved tone. "You notice the levee in front of the house. Well, each year during the equinoctial season, a strong southern wind blows the waters of the gulf into Pointe-a-la-Hache and floods the town. The water is three or four feet deep. We have to go in skiffs from the front of the house to the levee. Last year, as usual, when the floods commenced, we drove all our chickens into the big henhouse. Naturally when the flood became deep they could not come down to eat. In order to feed them we rigged up a rope parallel to each roost, and slowly pulled a basket of corn from one end to the other. In this way the chickens had to eat 'standing up.'

"If did not know that chickens ever ate sitting down or in a reclining position," interjected the visitor. "However, that may have been their custom during the days of the Romans."

"A SHARK, EIGHT FEET LONG!"

"It was only a method of expression," continued Mr. Hingle. "I meant that the chickens stood on the roost and ate the corn as it passed before them in the basket. Well we had been feeding them in this way for a few days when we noticed that they had begun to diminish in number. We then began to count each morning, and found that four or five disappeared each night. We finally decided, to watch. I rigged myself up a platform in the chicken-house and went out to it on the night, from ten o'clock until four nothing happened, and I was becoming pretty well tired, thinking probably that the negro who had been robbing our henroost had seen me and would not make another attempt while I was there. As the gray light began to dawn, however, I heard a series of splashes, and, looking toward the rear, I saw a large shark jumping the fences as if they had been hurdles. Naturally I was very much surprised. When the shark had jumped our fence he disappeared under the water. I was looking all around for him when I heard a noise in the henhouse, and looking down I saw the shark. He had come in by diving through the large hole through which our chickens had gone into the yard when they awoke in the morning. You can imagine my consternation. I was alone in henhouse with a chicken-eating shark, and I had no adequate assurance that he was not also a man-eater. The shark did not wait for an introduction; balancing himself upon his tail, he grabbed a chicken from the roost and swallowed it whole. He repeated the feat until he had eaten six, and then, diving through the hole, went through over the fences again, evidently very much pleased. He had failed to see me, otherwise he might have bitten me in the leg.

"Well, to make a long story short," continued Mr. Hingle, "we waited for him next morning and stopped the hole with which he entered. We then killed him with a rifle."

Taking the visitor to the rear gallery, Mr. Hingle showed the jawbone and teeth of the shark. In the teeth were a number of chicken feathers.

"We managed to kill him before he had had time to pick his teeth," remarked Mr. Hingle, modestly.

Billiards, Golf and Yachting

THREE SUBJECTS IN WHICH THERE IS UNUSUAL INTEREST AT THE PRESENT TIME

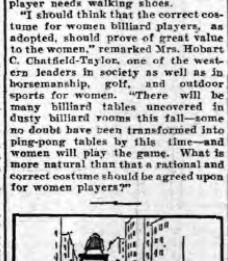
*Wise followers of the whims of so*ciety women have spent considerable time in making a rule for the costume to be worn by women billiardists. The demand for a national style that would do for Newport and the west became so pronounced when it was learned that parlor billiards had begun to share with ping-pong the attention of women members of country clubs and the smart set that it had to be attended to.

"No time for jokes about the society girl being a rack for shirt waists, with a receptacle inside for lobster salad and ice cream and one outside for dumping diamond rings into," said one leader. "We must find a rational costume for the billiard room. Women have got the billiard fever again. There will be more dusting of old tables and polishing up of long unused cues, billiard-room furniture this year than ever before. Ever since Champion 'Napoleon' Ives set a style for the billiardists—playing in an evening ress trousers and vest minus his coat—and Champion Jacob Schaefer hit this a body blow by bringing out a sort of a knit jacket provided with black satin sleeves, the big billiard tournaments invariably have been 'full dress' affairs. Women have attended the amateur tournaments, always wearing full dress. But for the women players the correct costume is a simple one."

The problem that had to be solved was to get the greatest possible freedom of motion consistent with making a good appearance. The costume selected as the best consists of a blouse, a loose and very short skirt—coming to the shoe top—and low heeled and broad-soled, comfortable shoes. The exercise gained in walking about a billiard room for a few hours is quite sufficient for any "pedestrienne," even should she be an English girl celebrated for her long walks.

The blouse, the edict says, should fit loosely and the sleeves should reach to the elbow. To prevent the skirt catching on the corners of the table, this garment should be made perfectly plain. High-heeled and tight shoes are the bane of any billiard player. It is said of Ives that once he essayed to play a big game wearing slippers. The following day he not only nursed his "sore" feelings, because he had been beaten, but had such sore feet that he could scarcely walk. The billiard player needs walking shoes.

"I should think that the correct costume for women billiard players, as adopted, should prove of great value to the women," remarked Mrs. Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, one of the western leaders in society as well as in horsemanship, golf, and outdoor sports for women. "There will be many billiard tables uncovered in dusty billiard rooms this fall—some no doubt have been transformed into ping-pong tables by this time—and women will play the game. What is more natural than that a rational and correct costume should be agreed upon for women players?"



One of the packers in a great wholesale hardware house is not a philanthropist, but recently he did more to spread some knowledge of the game of golf among the sidewalk urchins of *Chicago than a man in opulent circum*stances would have desired to do. The packer now realizes that the supply of gutta percha has been visibly decreased, that golf is an expensive luxury for newsboys, that putting balls worth six dollars a dozen before street urchins is like "throwing money to the birds," and is thanking his stars that the head of the firm for which he has worked for a quarter of a century did not make him pay for his carelessness that resulted in the loss of so many of the little white globes. Golf balls of the patented kind—the only ones now used in the tournaments, because of their resiliency and ability to fly far when well driven—are sometimes as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. The supply is less than the demand. In a "hurry up" order on the big hardware house, the packer hastily packed $150 worth of patented and gutta percha golf balls and the teamster hastened to the freight house with the box.

Passing a portion of the city much given to the street boys, a sly urchin is said to have wrenched a board loose and started the stream of golf balls. As the white spheres fell upon the pavement the boys bowled with delight: "Come on, kids; here's lots of fine mibs." In a few moments the wagon had a procession of small boys longer than the one that follows a circus calliope, and the balls disappeared in their jeans as rapidly as they bounded on the pavement.

It did not take long for the $150 offering of gutta percha to run out. The driver of the truck continued to the freight depot in blissful ignorance of the loss of the balls. Soon, however, he discovered the "leak," and asking the assistance of a police officer to recover the property, the pair went over the ground traversed by the truck.

Playing at "golf marbles" on the street, they found plenty of newsboys. Others were bounding the balls on the stone flagging, while those who had gathered an idea of the use of the ball in the game of golf were making frantic efforts to drive balls down the street with bits of packing boxes and wagon wheel spokes for clubs. The boys scampered away with their golf balls, and the head of the firm naively remarked: "Perhaps our loss is the country's gain. These balls may be the means of starting some boy on the path which leads to the national championship."

Where is the dashing, impetuous fresh water yachtswoman? One of the followers of salt water yachting has made the statement that the inland seas have produced very few like the women who handle the tillers and sheet in salt water. No one has taken that critic to task and made a moral indictment against him. Yachting is a grand sport for women, be it sailing in a steam yacht, a single sticker or riding the waves with a gasoline launch. There are hundreds of women yachtsmen on salt water to one in the inland lakes.

One great reason for the apparent lack of numbers on the small lakes is the element of danger. The fresh water yachtswoman feels that Old Ocean with all his moods is not so tricky as the small lake. Besides, there are more yachts on salt water than on fresh water. It is difficult to pick out a woman sailor on fresh water with a national reputation. But the fact obtains that there are plenty of yachtswomen who derive a great deal of sport from sailing on the little lakes.

Standing out in bold relief among the women who can sail is Miss Russell, of Detroit, who can handle La Belle Canadienne, her brother's boat, with as much skill as any man on the river. Mrs. George H. Terry, of Chicago, is another celebrated handler of the sheet and tiller. She sails her husband's 35-footer with the skill that comes from long experience.

What woman did not envy Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, whose picture in a sou'wester and rubber clothing, she stood on the deck of the Columbia during the America's cup race, was a feature of the pictorial representations of the international contest. She is, perhaps, the best known of the American salt water yachtswomen.

Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll has had more actual experience in cruising than any other woman known to the critics, it is said, and is able to handle a boat alone. Mrs. Frederic Gosler, of course, is premier among the steam yachtswomen. What a thrill of satisfaction must come over this immensely wealthy woman as she stands at the wheel and gives signals by electricity to the engineer far below that he causes her steam yacht to glide into its dock without scratching a flake of paint from its sides! The exhilaration is commendable, but, of course, it is impossible for all of the women lovers of the water who envy her to try their hands at the wheel. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt and other leaders in society are among the other well-known handlers of yachts. To be a good sailor requires such a combination of circumstances —wealth, yachts and leisure—that it will take time to build up a constituency for the inland seas that will equal that of the salt water bays.

GRAND ARMY HONORS.

Friends and Comrades of John McElroy Boom Him for Commander in Chief.

A circular has been issued by the department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, setting forth the claims of Senior Vice Commander-in-Chief John McElroy for the office of commander-in-chief, to be voted for at the national encampment in Washington, D. C., in October. It is believed that he has the lead in the race, because of being in line of promotion. The circular gives Comrade McElroy's record, and the reasons for his election as follows:

ber, 1862, to the close of the war, is above criticism. He enlisted at the age of 16 (having been born in 1846) in the MacClernand Guards, which subsequently became company L, Sixteenth Illinois volunteer cavalry, and was consequently only 19 when discharged.

"When a prisoner of war at Andersonville and other places, his excellent qualities as a soldier and comrade were fully tested. He refused repeated offers from the rebel authorities of assignment to duty outside the stockade, preferring to decline all favors and remain with his fellow prisoners in distress. He was known to all as 'Little Illinois,' and was a member of the band of Regulators, who arrested, tried and hanged six 'raiders,' July 11, 1864, and thus contributed to the restoration of law, order and security to life among the 25,000 prisoners then confined at Andersonville, many of whom were helpless and wholly at the mercy of the lawless. This incident shows his mettle as a boy, and was prophetic of the unswerving loyalty he has shown his comrades and the untiring efforts he has made to advance their interests continuously since the war.

"As a grand army man he requires no introduction anywhere among his comrades. His membership in the organization dates back to 1866, and he has been at all times during the intervening 36 years the loyal and unfailing friend of the order, never evading or shirking any duty or service within his ability to perform for the advancement of its interests or those of his comrades.

"In 1874 he became managing editor of the Toledo Blade, Toledo, O., a paper of wide influence and extensive circulation throughout the country, and immediately made it a strong advocate of veterans' rights, and in 1884 he accepted the managing editorship of the National Tribune, at Washington, D. C., which he yet retains; thus making a period of 28 years during which he has had editorial control of papers of national reputation and influence."

AN IDEAL EDUCATOR.

Charles W. Eliot, President of Harvard University.

One of His Grandest Achievements Is the Introduction of the Elective System in American Seats of Learning.

Charles W. Eliot, of Harvard university, who has recently been elected president of the National Educational association has for 30 critical years been the prime minister of our educational realm. He was born in Boston in 1834, and his preparatory education was acquired at the Latin school in that city. Graduating from Harvard with the class of '53, he became a tutor in mathematics in the university, and later assistant professor in mathematics and chemistry. Being appointed to the chair of analytical chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he served until he began his official life as president of Harvard in '69. He regards the administration of a university as a business. He is not, as are many educators, first an author or a teacher, and secondly an administrator. He illustrates the fact of making such presidency a business. President Eliot brought to his work a vigorous and impulsive personality, distinguished alike for moral and intellectual qualities. Some one has said that the normal man is two-thirds will and one-third intellect. Perhaps the two qualities possessed by Dr. Eliot which have done much to make all things possible to him in the line of his endeavor are the wonderful strength of his will and his absolute fearlessness.

The relations which a university president holds are probably more numerous and more important than those held by the average public officer. He holds a relation to the students, the faculty, the various governing boards, the preparatory schools, and, more important still, to the community at large.

President Eliot has put himself in close relation with the commonwealth of Massachusetts and he has closely identified himself with their system of public school instruction. He has pointed out serious defects in the system and has suggested practical methods of eliminating evils. The teaching of elementary science in the grammar and high schools is due to his recommendations. He believes that it is the duty of every educator to make American education of every grade better, and it is due largely to his criticisms and directions that public education has been organized upon a wiser and better basis. His ideas have resulted in increased respect for the teaching profession, less unnecessary labor for the student and have saved the people much unwise expenditure.

CHARLES W. ELIOT.
(New President of the National Educational Association.)

And it is in President Eliot's relation to public education that we touch the keynote of his career. In reality the success of his administration lies in the fact that he has kept himself and the university in vital touch with the community. He has coordinated it with the other social, commercial and educational forces of the time. He has made it a university for the men who are to rule affairs.

Perhaps President Eliot's most conspicuous work has been the introduction of the elective system, a subject which he discusses in nearly every one of his reports. According to his views on the subject, this system will promote concentration, individuality and equip each man to make the largest contribution to the betterment of the race. Its chief aim is to adjust a college education to at once the practical and the higher life.

His reforms have all been rooted in principles and purposes which are essentially moral and religious. He has gone to the whole length of the educational line, condemning every defect and rebuking every form of inefficiency as an injury to the community and a crime against the individual. Of a university he says that it should be its principal function to train leaders —women who have the religious power, who reach forward in all fields of activity and push beyond the beaten paths of habit, tradition and custom.

The National Educational association has chosen for its president a man who stands for the highest ideals, the new and progressive methods in educational reform. In truth, a man of "light and leading," who stands for the advancement of real knowledge in contrast to mere education.

The Giving Of Christmas Presents

THE library in the home of Mrs. Richly might easily be mistaken for a department store. It is nearly filled with all sorts of objects from a Louis XV. miniature couting a thousand dollars to a mechanical pony for little Tom Richly and half a dozen aprons for the cook. In the midst of this confusion Mrs. Richly's secretary wanders, pencil and paper in hand, trying to bring order out of chaos. Mrs. Richly herself lounges in a chair and lazily surveys operations.

"There now," she remarks, "do you think you have them all straight? I really have a score of things to attend to and can't waste any more time over Christmas presents. What a bother Christmas is anyway! Now see that they are wrapped up nicely in that white paper and tied with pink baby ribbon. You'll find a ball of it in that piece of brown paper. And, above all, don't forget to erase the price marks and to inclose my cards."

So much for Christmas in the Richly house, a mere matter of driving around to a few shops, of having a few things charged and sent home and of making the intelligent secretary do them up and inclose the proper sentiments.

It's a little different matter in Mrs. Stingybody's household. That lady, had she been of a different sex, would doubtless have been a successful financier. Christmas with her is purely a business proposition. It means the smallest outlay possible with the largest results. For weeks Mrs. Stingybody has haunted bargain sales, where things were to be found almost as good as certain other things which they resembled and which cost twice as much. All these $1.98 and $2.69 articles she carefully frees from all identifying marks and then sends them out beautifully done up in pink or blue cotton batting, which costs next to nothing, in boxes bearing the names of well known "swell" stores. I forget to add that one whole closet in Mrs. Stingybody's house is devoted to these boxes, which she collects during the year. She has the list of her friends carefully marked out and each one graded according to her future usefulness. The gifts are sent accordingly.

This sounds pretty bad; but, take my word for it, there are a great many women who, consciously or otherwise, follow Mrs. Stingybody's method.

Mrs. Largefamily's large family has resolved itself into a committee on ways and means. Money is scarce. There is always a pair of boots or a dress to be bought when least expected, or, worse still, doctors' bills. Still family pride makes the Largefamilys give out the same number of presents each year. If they did not, they have the firm idea that their position in their little circle would be lost forever. So each of the Misses Largefamily exploits her particular talent, or, rather, the talent she fondly believes she has. Amelia paints lopsided calendars, Bessie embroiders (?) impossible centerpieces, and even little Mary steals the time from her lessons to make wabbly pincushions. These works of art cause more than one pang of anguish among the recipients, for of course they have to be placed in conspicuous positions and kept there for a couple of months at least. However, no one has the courage to acquaint the Largefamilys with the fact that their friendship would be just as much appreciated without their gifts.

FLOWERS TO THOSE WHO CANNOT AFFORD THEM.

Take it all in all, I think Miss Bachelorgirl's way is the best. Her income is small, and so she doesn't try to give presents to all the people she knows by terms. Instead she selects, though, while inexpensive, is in good taste and sure to give pleasure to the one who receives it. If she has to choose between a poor and a rich friend, the poor friend gets the present every time, and it doesn't take the form of the ugly serviceable things so many women make the mistake of giving to their less fortunate sisters. No, indeed! Miss Bachelorgirl's presents are meant to be rays of sunshine. She sends a bunch of violets to the struggling typewriter who can never afford flowers and a print of some fine old painting to make beauty in the little teacher's gloomy hall bedroom.

That is Miss Bachelorgirl's way.

It is always better if you can afford to pay a good price to have it made to order, but if you cannot go to a first class tailor buy it ready made. THE KING'S MALADY.

Location and Functions of the Vermiform Appendix.

It Resembles a Gland, Like the Liver and Pancreas, and May Perhaps Perform Important Digestive Work.

The malady from which King Edward has been suffering for several weeks past is an inflammation of the vermiform appendix. This is a slender, wormlike attachment to the intestine, from three to six inches long. It is situated rather low down in the abdomen, on the right side. In the accompanying drawing the stomach is indicated at E, the long, much folded small intestine (or ileum) at A, and the large intestine (or colon) as at B. It will be noticed that the junction between the last two is not effected end to end, but that the former is inserted into the side of the latter in such a way as to leave a blind sac at the lower extremity of the colon. This sac is called the caecum, and is indicated by C. The appendix, D, hangs from it like a rat's tail, though not quite so slender or straight. In an attack of appendicitis the soreness often affects the caecum as well as the appendix, though the abscesses which form are generally attached to the appendix.

Anatomists and physiognomists have speculated a great deal as to the function of the caecum and appendix. In some animals the former is quite a large pouch, and is distinctly connected with the work of digestion. It is a useful organ, which is at times stuffed full of food, like an extra stomach. Birds have two caecums. Since the appendix is missing in many people, it has been suspected that the human race has reached a point in its evolution where the appendix is no longer needed, and that it has begun to deteriorate and disappear.

Dr. Clarence Kilbourn, of New Haven, in a paper contributed to the Philadelphia Medical Journal a few weeks ago, said that the appendix resembled a gland, like the liver and pancreas, which secrete fluids that perform some duty in digestion. The liver and pancreas discharge into the small intestine near its junction with the stomach. The tonsils are situated just at the junction of the throat and oesophagus. The position of the caecum is at another important station along the line of march. Dr. Kilbourn went on to say:

THE VERMIFORM APPENDIX.
(Cut Shows Exact Location of This Troublesome Gland.)

"The contents of the intestines become acid in reaction after passing the caecum, even if distinctly alkaline in the ileum. This is despite the fact that the mucous membrane of the large intestine, and hence the intestinal juice of that region, is alkaline. This is generally accounted for by the fact that fermentation processes are especially active in the colon. It is possible that the appendix has something to do with it. In the large intestine an enormous amount of microbic fermentation is constantly going on, as is shown by the hydrogen and marsh gas generated.

Of late a great deal is being written about intestinal sepsis (poisoning) and antisepsis (treating poison). In special diseases, such as typhoid fever and dysentery, the idea is not recent, for therapeutists have long aimed at intestinal antisepsis in combating them. But in the vague cases associated with neuralgias, myalgias, headache, lassitude, slight fever, and even lethargy, a great deal of stress is being laid upon the absorption of toxins (poisons) from the alimentary canal, especially the large intestine. There must be some protection against this condition normally, and I think we find it in the appendix. The germicidal properties of the tonsils, and their protection of the pharynx, are well realized; and in the appendix we must recognize an organ having a similar structure and capable of doing a similar work in its own territory.

Talked Herself to Death.

Mrs. Sarah E. Howell, of Atlanta, Ga., became demented through the continuous consideration of religious themes. For sixty-eight hours she spoke constantly, until she became unconscious, and in this condition died. She had talked herself to death.

Wood Pulp for Paper.

The forests of Norway and Sweden, which for many years have furnished pulp for the paper-makers of Europe, are almost denuded. The forests in the United States are rapidly thinning out, and now the paper-makers are looking to Canada for their supply.

FLAG OF PRESIDENT.

Radical Changes Have Been Made in Its Appearance.

Barely-Seen Ensign Has Been in Existence Ever Since There Has Been a Nation—The Colors Altered.

The emblem known as "the president's flag," which has been used on rare occasions for many years, will hereafter appear with a changed design. The new flag is now being made at the navy department.

The design of the present flag, which has been so long in use, is simply the coat of arms of the United States on a blue field. Aside from the new arrangement of the colors in the coat of arms, which will appear in the president's flag now in process of manufacture, the principal change is in the arrangement of the 13 stars above the eagle's head.

It is proposed to have a sunburst exactly circular in form above the head of the eagle, with the rays radiating from the group of stars. The new design consists otherwise of a pure, white eagle, its feathers heavily outlined with black, the constellation in white, with the rays in heavy stitching of yellow on a blue ground. The flag is to be of bunting, 14 by 10½ feet, for outside use, and of heavy taffeta silk, gold thread, and embroidery, for interior decoration. The president's flag is used only at sea on the marinmast of the vessel when the president is on board.

The president's flag is a century-old institution, and has practically been in existence ever since there has been a nation. Some ten years ago, when the late President Harrison went up the Atlantic coast on the Dolphin with the "president's flag" flying at the main, the writers for certain newspapers severely criticised the over-seventy-old custom they had never before observed, probably because latter-day presidents up to Harrison's time had gone boasting but little, yet it had been the custom up to 1895 for the blue field of the flag, known as the union jack, to be placed on the main when the president was aboard the ship, and all other flags were struck till the president left the vessel.

Congress has never legislated on the president's flag. It was established arbitrarily by the secretary of the navy, and presumably the changes made in the device upon the always blue field have been made at the suggestion of the president.

The first regulations authoritatively prescribing a flag to denote the presence of the president or vice president of the United States, members of the cabinet and governors of states were issued by Gideon Welles, secretary of the navy, April 18, 1865. By these rules the flag of the president of the United States was the American ensign displayed at the main royal, the flag of the officer commanding being struck for the time; the same flag for the vice president displayed at the fore. This flag was the union jack. These regulations were reaffirmed in 1866, again in 1869, and have been in existence ever since.

About 1879 the president's flag displayed upon its blue field, by order of the secretary of the navy, the coat of arms of the United States, slightly changed—the spread eagle in white, bearing the shield in pointed design, and the constellation spread in a single curved line.

A few years later the seal colors, sunburst and all, were exactly copied, the shield being squared, the eagle brown and the constellation appearing through a sunburst and encircled by clouds. It is almost impossible, it is said, at the navy department, to put the cloud ring upon bunting, so that it will not look ridiculous. It has hitherto been painted on, and when flying to the breeze and the main whips out in a few hours.

With the consent of the president the design is now a pure white eagle, its features heavily outlined with black, the constellation in white, with the rays in heavy stitching of yellow, on a blue ground. This flag is of bunting, 14 by 10½ feet, for outdoor use, and of heavy taffeta silk, gold thread and embroidery for indoor decoration.

A New Thing in Baths.

The electric bath is one of the newest things, although it isn't a bath at all. A thick robe is entwined with wires, and this is switched on, and the wearer of the electrical robe soon finds his body getting warmer, until a little while he perspires as freely as if he were in a Turkish bath.

MAKING CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

At this season when the shops are full of articles designed for Christmas gifts, and when the majority of men, women and children are planning surprises, loving remembrances and gifts of greater or less value for family and friends, the ethics, so to speak, of Christmas gifts naturally present a pleasant subject for contemplation. The "good will towards men" heralded by the angels who sang of the Christ-child underlies the thought of gift-making at this season.

It is unfortunate that the demands of modern society have somewhat marred the custom that should be without flaw, and the great expectations of gratuitous compensation for trifling service at this season sometimes makes a tax of Christmas giving. On the whole, the instinct is healthy and beautiful and he indeed is to be pitied who at this time of good cheer has no heart to give.

In spite of the jokes over husbands giving their wives boxes of cigars because the wives have for years given the husbands lace curtains, both husbands and wives find much pleasure in the household convenience or adornment that is smuggled into the house as a Christmas surprise, and the personal gift that is an expression of the thoughtful regard of the giver must always be a source of delight and sometimes "a joy forever."

Great tact finds expression at this season and the appropriateness of the gift often evinces deep thought mingled with loving regard. Those gifts are the finest that best express the heart and personality of the giver, as that is the noblest giving which is a part of one's self. Very often gifts that represent time and thought overrank those of greater money value. At no season of the year should money count for less and good will count for more than at the Christmas time. For this reason, he who can do little, may bring to the heart of the poor and friendless when he gives wisely and tactfully the trifles that represent time, thought and kindly consideration.

It still looks as if to Senator Hutchinson, of Mercer, would go the honor of presiding over the upper house of the State Legislature this winter. Both Senator Cross, of this county, and Senator Strong, of Middlesex, are still in the contest but there is little or no show for either of them unless there should be a sudden and unexpected turn of events. No one questions for a moment that Senator Cross would make an excellent presiding officer but it happened that his colleague, Mr. Hutchinson, went on a still hunt earlier in the season and secured enough promises of support to land him the place.

A foreigner, stopping in Newark, was desirous of mailing a letter to his home country. Searching for a mail-box, he spied a red one with a handle on the front of it. He put the letter inside and turned the handle to notify the postal authorities that he had done so. That he accomplished his object there is no doubt but it is not usually necessary to call out the fire department to bring such a thing to pass.

A general advertiser is quoted by the Philadelphia Record as saying that when an article has been thoroughly advertised and established in England the people do not need to be reminded of it; but in America it takes only a short time for the people to be drawn away by the advertising of another product of the same nature. Therefore he finds it necessary to keep up his advertising in this country.

It seems quite likely that Mayor Jenkins will have something to say regarding his plan for city parks and a public lake in his annual message which will be presented to the Council next week. It is to be hoped that the Mayor will call the attention of the needs of the city in that direction and that the Common Council will lose no time in considering the subject.

Public schools in city and borough are now closed until after the new year begins. Pupils and teachers are enjoying the well-earned holiday. Then there is a host of young people home from college and boarding school who are bent on enjoying the Christmas season to its fullest extent. Altogether there is prospect of plenty happening in a social way.

Mayor Jenkins' suggestion of public parks and a public lake are excellent ones. A public lake of proper dimensions would be particularly appropriate in the winter time when the young people of the city are in search of a suitable skating pond. It is to be hoped that the incoming Common Council will seriously consider the subject.

CHRISTMAS AT THE CHURCHES

Some Observed Christ's Natal Day Sunday—Others to Celebrate Next Sunday.

APPROPRIATE SERVICES

Yuletide Decorations, Carols and Recitations, Together With Appropriate Addresses Were the Chief Features of Yesterday's Programmes.

While Christmas will be observed at most of the local churches next Sunday, there were a few which held their Christmas exercises Sunday. Naturally the storm reduced the attendances materially and in several cases the programme was postponed a week. The exercises that were held proved quite enjoyable despite the rain.

PARK AVE. BAPTIST.

Christmas exercises of an enjoyable order were given by the pupils of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school, on Sunday afternoon. Despite the unpleasant condition of the weather they were witnessed by a large number, including many friends.

Those who took part in the programme by giving songs or recitations were all members of the junior or primary departments. They were as follows: Edith Lowry, Dorothy Smith, Anna Clarke, Marjorie Brown, Myrtle Dorman, Nellie Voorhees, Anna Smith, Marion Luce, Madeline Moy, Samuel Voorhees, Arline Brown, Ruth Pray, Walter Terry, Hilda Van Winkle, Margaret Fitch, Isabelle Harvey, Harold Marsh. In addition carols were sung by members of the two departments and selections were rendered by a special chorus choir and an orchestra composed of G. W. Moy, W. H. Spiers and Martin Korff. An opening prayer was made by C. R. Vincent, superintendent of the Scotch Plains Baptist Sunday-school, and benediction was pronounced by Rev. G. M. Shott, also of Scotch Plains.

The decorations were elaborate consisting of greens interspersed with red and a large star illumined with electric bulbs. The exercises were arranged and conducted by Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Special Christmas services were held at the Congregational church, Sunday morning, when the quartette choir, composed of Miss Etta Raybert, soprano; Mrs. Charlotte Ross, contralto; Louis Tallamy, tenor, and R. Wilson Derby, bass, rendered anthems and Miss Raybert sang a pretty solo. During the service, the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, preached an appropriate sermon on the subject of "Christ With the Children."

There was no special exercises in the afternoon, but tomorrow evening the Sunday-school will hold its annual festival, with special music.

MONROE AVE. CHURCH.

Owing to the inclement weather, the exercises prepared for the Monroe Avenue church Sunday-school, were not given. They will, instead, be held Sunday.

HOLIDAY SHOPPER KILLED.

C. G. Otto, Jr., Brother-in-Law of Miss VanDeventer, Met Death.

C. G. Otto, Jr., a prominent furniture dealer of Philadelphia, was struck by a trolley car at Foulkrod street and Frankford avenue, Philadelphia, Friday evening and received a fracture of the skull and other injuries from which he died in an ambulance while being carried to the Episcopal Hospital. He leaves a wife and five children. Mrs. Otto was Miss Tillie VanDeVenter, a sister of Miss VanDeVenter, of Grove street, North Plainfield.

A very sad coincidence is that Mr. *Otto was returning home after pur*chasing Christmas gifts.

The funeral services were held from the late residence, 207 West Norris street, Philadelphia, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

HANDBALL CHAMPION HERE.

He Will Make Plainfield His Headquarters During Eastern Games.

F. J. Henderson, of Bay City, Michigan, who is the champion handball player of the west, is a guest for a few days of Robert Ferris, of West Third street. During Mr. Henderson's visit in the east he will play some very interesting games in New York and Brooklyn in an effort to wrest the eastern championship from those who now hold it. He will make his headquarters in this city during his eastern engagement.

Since the First . . .

ROCHESTER LAMP was made there have been many "improvements" put in the lamp, but they were never sold in the "improvements" as it. One by one they fell by the wayside. The ROCHESTER of today is the same lamp, only better, and we make that, too.

THE NEW ROCHESTER

Is it so entirely all that is really worth having in a lamp, that we have never found any "improvements" possible since the first ROCHESTER was the name of the lamp.

If you still own one of the "first" lamps, whether you want a new lamp or more, or not, we can remodel or refurnish it NOW. Write us, mentioning the name of the lamp you own, the ROCHESTER, we can do it. Let us send you literature on the subject.

ALARM FOR THE COUNCILMEN. HIGH SCHOOL TEAM BEATEN

COUNCILMEN SAW THE MEN TURN OUT ON TEST ALARM.

Were Well Pleased With the Way in Which the Fire Department Responded.

Without their having any previous knowledge of its arrangement, the firemen at headquarters gave an exhibition response to an alarm, Saturday night, that highly delighted the members of the Common Council and a few invited guests.

The men were all in their quarters on the second floor at 9:50 when the City Fathers quietly entered the lower floor by means of a pass key held by Councilman Lee. While most of them noiselessly stowed themselves out of sight in the opening of the hose tower, one member, by means of a push button, sounded box No. 12 on the house gongs, then drew back in the shadows.

Instantly the orderly bustle which follows the reception of an alarms, took place, and every man and horse was in place when the Council party stepped into view. The surprise of the department can be imagined but they were well pleased when every witness expressed his complete satisfaction with the quickness and methodical manner in which the exhibition had been given, coming as it was, unannounced.

BOROUGH PAYING UP.

Over $12,000 Taken in During Two Days by Collector Brown.

Saturday evening at the office of the borough tax collector, George P. Brown, was a busy one and as the end of the two closing days of the past week he took in $12,000. The office was kept open until midnight and people continued to come in to pay their taxes until that time. After January first all the unpaid poll and personal taxes will be placed in the hands of a special constable for collection. Mr. Brown says that the tax receipts this year are a little over those of last year and the taxes were paid up much more promptly than they were a year ago.

DEATH OF MRS. STITES.

Following an illness of four days, Mrs. Abigal A. Martin, widow of the late Elijah Stites, passed away at her home on Chatham street, Sunday evening. Death was due to pleuro-pneumonia.

Mrs. Stites was sixty and had been a resident of the borough for a long time. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Robert Binning, of New York, and Miss Josie W. Martin, of the borough. The funeral services were held yesterday and were private. Interment at Sampton.

CHOIR CHANGES.

The male quartette will be abandoned on account of the resignation of several of the members.

Men's Club to Entertain.

OUTPLAYED AT EVERY POINT IN GAME WITH HASBROUCH HEIGHTS.

Only Goal Made From Field by Herbert Munro—Return Game in This City, January 14.

The basket ball team from the City High School met a disastrous defeat, Saturday, when the team of the Hasbrouck Institute conquered it in a one-sided game by a score of 49 to 4.

The High School boys were outplayed in every point of the game as the only time they scored was in the first half, when H. Munro threw a goal from the field. The snappy mechanical team work of the Hasbrouck boys did the business in short order and the city boys, with their lack of practice and experience were unable to accomplish anything. The boys do not feel discouraged about the game as they are agreed of the opinion that the present Hasbrouck team would have been a hard fight for the star last year's team.

Captain R. W. Meeker will have the boys out to regular practices as soon as school reopens. The Hasbrouck team will come to town for a return game on January 14.

YOUNG MEN HELD UP.

But the Colored Man Arrested on Suspicion Was Soon Released.

Walter Emmons and George Pope, of the borough, had an experience Saturday evening which they will not soon forget. They were in the vicinity of the Brookside Sanitarium when from out of the side of the road a man stepped. The road was dark and the young men did not stop to investigate the matter but put down the road as hard as they could. They claimed that the fellow held them up and later a man was arrested under suspicion who admitted being in the neighborhood at the time but the fellow is well-known in the borough as an inoffensive colored man, who is employed by a prominent borough official and was released by order of Chief Marshal Campbell.

The committee which has the matter in charge are George Harring, F. E. Barrie, Edward Koecfline and H. C. Bross.

WANTS HIS PIN.

Was Stolen With Wallet and Cash From George Fritts Saturday.

Somewhere in the shopping crowd on West Front street, Saturday night, a member of the light fingered gentry abstracted a wallet from the vest pocket of George Fritts, of West Fifth street. It contained $15, some checks and a society pin of the Gamma Nu Tau fraternity. Mr. Fritts would gladly give up the money for the return of the other articles, especially the pin, as it was presented to him by the class of '95 of the Hill School at Pottstown, Pa.

Funeral of Mrs. Gassner.

They were in charge of Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church and were for the immediate relatives only. Interment was made in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

Lecture of Japan.

Miantchoone Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order Red Men, will elect officers at the meeting to be held Friday evening, December 26.

BUCKLE WILL BE PRESIDENT

New Year May See New Police Headquarters, Patrol Wagon and a Call System.

TALKED OF AT CAUCUS

Members of 1903 Common Council Held a Caucus Saturday Evening —Selected a President and the Chairmen of Committees and Made Plans for the New Year.

The members who will compose the Common Council for 1903 held a caucus Saturday evening and transacted preliminary business preparatory to the formation of a regular organization for the coming year. All of the members were present and as previously stated in these columns it was unanimously decided to make Councilman James F. Buckle president of the new body. There will be a few changes in committees, though in the main they will stand as at present.

It is reasonably certain that Mr. Daniel will take Mr. Mellick's place as chairman of the finance committee, while it is also certain that Frank Randolph will be made chairman of the police committee. This will probably be done for the reason that if Mr. Gloak should be given the honor, it would result in the First ward having the president and chairman of two of the most important committees. Mr. Lee will remain as chairman of the fire committee, while Mr. Gloak will probably be made chairman of the poor committee. Mr. Tolles will remain as chairman of the street and sewer committee, where he has done fine work. Of course, it is the purpose of Mr. Buckle to place the new members, Councilmen Garrigues and Tyler, on some of the most important committees.

A most important matter introduced for discussion Saturday evening was that in reference to a police call system, a patrol wagon and a suitable police headquarters. It was the unanimous opinion of all the members that this improvement has got to come and it is almost a sure thing that next year will be the time to make it. The members believe that the city is large enough for this change and will support it.

The idea is to purchase a suitable piece of property at some convenient point in the city, not necessarily on one of the most important business streets, as the police headquarters that will be a credit to the city and will in every way be adapted to the purpose intended. It is the general opinion that the Gamewell system is the proper one to use and this system no doubt will be employed.

There were a few other matters of minor importance discussed and they will be reported on later. The caucus was a harmonious one in every respect and a successful year is promised in Councilmanic circles.

HOW CITY CAN SECURE PARK

Common Council Now Considering Co-operation With Capitalists for New Park.

PROBLEM OF SEWERS

Improvements of Property and Part Cost of New Roads Is What City Is Asked to Do—The Plans of the Capitalists Represented by G. H. Taylor.

Knocking at the door of Plainfield stand half a dozen capitalists of New York and Philadelphia who are willing to spend half a million dollars in improvements here providing this city will open the door and let them in. The door is co-operation and already the sound of the turning knob is heard from the Council Chambers where a special committee, at whose head is Mayor Junkins and Street Commissioner Gavett, has been holding meetings to discuss this important subject. $100,000 will be spent in the purchase of land, which now lies practically useless, and the rest will be used in making part of Plainfield still more of a modern community.

The plan is this:

G. Herbert Taylor, proprietor of one of the largest and most influential investment concerns in New York, with offices at 149 Broadway, and who lives at 520 West Seventh street, this city, has interested a number of very prominent capitalists of New York and Philadelphia in the scheme of making a part of Plainfield into a beautiful residential park at an outlay of $700,000 or more, providing the city with co-operate with them and make some improvements to the property and bear part of the cost of building the macadam roads. That is all that is asked by the capitalists and they will build the houses, bear half the expense of laying the streets, supply the water, electric power and lighting and put in a steam heating plant which will supply all the houses in the park with heat during the cold weather.

While all the capital in the scheme has been subscribed by the capitalists which have been interested by Mr. Taylor it is hoped that some of the local men of wealth will also become interested in the plan. So far there is no local capital in the scheme, excepting that of Mr. Taylor, who is financially at the head of promoters. He has had an engineer here on several occasions and plans have been drawn up of the park and the houses which will be erected if submitted to Mr. Taylor and to the special committee of the Common Council. The cost will be somewhere near a million dollars, including everything.

The site, which covers almost fifty acres, is bounded by Field avenue on the east, running along that street to Elizabeth street, thence to Plainfield avenue, over the Barnaby estate to Sherman avenue, on the west; to Grant avenue, thence over to F. A. Pinto's property at the corner of West Eighth street and back again four city blocks to Plainfield avenue, making in all about fifty acres, including the *old golf course. It is proposed to con*vert these fields into one of the most beautiful residential parks to be found in this part of the State.

Every house will be an attractive one, built on the plan of those which are now considered to be the show places of Plainfield. The streets will be sixty feet wide with ten foot sidewalks on each side making a street eighty feet wide including the sidewalks. These, it is proposed will be of macadam. Sewers will be laid. Water pipes and electric light wires will be placed underground, together with the steam heating plant which will connect all the houses from a central heating plant. This plant will take place of the automobile station which was said to be considered.

Mr. Taylor, when interviewed by a Daily Press reporter, said that in locating the park at the site mentioned, he had a tremendous problem before him in considering the sewer system. He said that it would be impossible for the sewerage of the park to empty into the main trunk line of the city's system because the grade there is in the wrong direction. He said that his engineer had prepared a report at this matter which has been submitted to the committee on streets and sewers of the Common Council and that committee has been considering this matter at recent meetings, which was called especially for this purpose. This committee, through Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, is preparing an estimate on the cost of making it possible to connect with the sewer and this estimate will, no doubt, be handed in to the Common Council at its meeting in the near future, at which time it is expected that the Council will report on what the city will do towards opening the city gates to this outside capital for the contemplated improvements.

Those who have visited Philadelphia will probably remember visiting Elkline, Overbrook and Pelham; all suburbs which have been beautified by capitalists, where beautiful drives through the shady streets, past the handsome residences which line those streets, are a delight. It is proposed to make that part of this city, lying between the boundaries described, a residential district like those of the suburbs of Philadelphia. $10,000 houses will be built and sold to New York capitalists and business men who desire homes in a modern up-to-date city. Over fifty of these houses will be built in time in the park.

Among the accommodations for the residents of that section of the town will be an electric omnibus service between the park and the Jersey Central Railroad station. These busses will run on schedule time and will make regular trips to and from this city.

POULTRY AT THE GARDEN.

The New York Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Show to Open Jan. 10.

Beginning on Tuesday morning, January 6 and closing on Saturday evening, January 10, the fourteenth annual exhibition by the New York Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association will occupy Madison Square Garden, New York. Important as this show always is to the lovers and breeders of birds, each year it increases in value and it's influence, with it's competition open to the world is shown by the number of exhibits, their fineness and purity of breed, and the close judging that is required in all the classes to determine the prize winners. The entries of all classes are in excess of last year, and all the space in the big Garden will be required, with the platforms over the boxes, for extra space, to take care of all that Secretary Crawford has arranged for. The Atlantic Cat Club will have the responsibility of the showing of cats, to be located in the Concert Hall, and there will be a fine display, with many prizes to be competed for. The show will open at 9 a. m. each day and close at 10 at night.

TO OPEN ROOMS.

Reform Club Plans to Resume Activity and Offer Special Attractions for Young Men.

At a meeting of the Reform Club, held Saturday evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, B. W. Hand; first vice president, David Bush; second vice president, William B. Ayers; recording secretary, Edward Smith; financial secretary, C. B. Stephens; treasurer, J. W. A. Banerachs.

The club will open in January, probably the second Thursday, and meetings will be held as formerly Thursday evenings and Sunday afternoons. *A series of evangelistic meet*ings is shortly to be inaugurated. The basement, which has had little or no use, will be fitted up as a club room for young men, having a complete assortment of games and a library of books and papers.

EXPRESS CO. RUSHED.

More Packages to Handle This Year Than Ever Before.

The entire outside platform used by the United States Express Company is completely occupied today with express matter. Judging by appearance every one in Plainfield should receive a Christmas present. The company is doing its best to deliver the packages on time, but no doubt there will be some delay. Manager Mills, as well as a full corps of assistants, is working from early morning to late at night and expects to for some days to come. Every train brings in additional packages so that the big pile does not seem to grow less. Manager Mills believes that this year's business will exceed that of any of recent years.

Checker Tournament Continues.

The Inter-City checker tournament held a meeting, Saturday evening, at North Plainfield when North Plainfield defeated Bound Brook 3 to 2; Rahway and North Plainfield tied at four games each, and Rahway defeated Bound Brook by a score of 4 to 1, giving the clubs the following rating:

	W	L	P. C.
North Plainfield	15	6	.625
Bound Brook	13	11	.542
Rahway	12	12	.500

Council Meetings.

Although the Common Council will meet Friday evening, December 26, in adjourned session, there will be another meeting probably Monday evening, December 29, to close up the year's business. The new Council will meet Thursday evening, January 1, to effect an organization. It will then adjourn for a week.

Express Employes Rushed.

Owing to the heavy rush the employes of the U. S. Express Company were obliged to work last Sunday. The express matter is now assuming large proportions and it gives the employes of the company all they want to do to deliver it on time.

ENGINE CRASHES INTO BARN

NO ONE KILLED, BUT HORSE HAD TWO LEGS BROKEN.

Disastrous Wreck Which Occurred in This City Monday Evening.

This city was the scene of one of the most disastrous railroad wrecks seen in this city in some time, last Monday, when a wildcat engine jumped the track while making a test run and plowed through a barn and a large quantity of freight piled alongside of the track and knocked over a horse and broke two of its legs. The accident was caused by a rear end collision when the engine crashed into four loaded freight cars. No lives were lost.

The wreck occurred in the show window of the Somerset Pharmacy where a toy railroad operated by electricity has been in operation for the past week displaying some perfumery. Yesterday afternoon the engine got out of order and it was sent away to repaired. When it returned a test run was made. The clerk who tried the experiment turned on the electric current without removing the cars from off the track. The track is about twenty-five feet long and when the engine made a complete circuit it crashed into the cars.

The cars jumped the track and plowed its way through some perfumery bottles, smashing them. The engine completed its tour of destruction by crashing through the side of a miniature barn and broke two legs off an innocent wooden horse grazing on the paper lawn about the building. The engine was just steering its course to plow through the lead mountain when the clerk reached over the partition and stopped the machine.

No lives were lost although a very pretty young woman in wax with her rope built of golden brown narrowly escaped losing her head as the eratic engine whizzed by and struck the pile of perfumery bottles.

BABY LEFT ALONE.

Passersby Thought it Was Forgotten, and Then Mother Thought it Was Kidnapped.

Some woman in this city became so interested in shopping for Christmas the other day that she actually forgot about her baby. She left the baby in the carriage in front of the store while she went inside to buy some little novelty for her other children which she had left at home.

The baby in the carriage was playing with a rattle. Several little ones passing by saw it and remembering that their little sister asked them to bring her home a rattle they "slid" up to the preambulator and gently but firmly removed the toy from the baby's hand and "fled," leaving the baby lamenting loudly. Shoppers wandered by until a man tried to quiet the baby, but all in vain.

Just then a well-known woman came along and tried to pacify the child but all to no purpose. She took the child in her arms and went inside the store in the hope that the mother would recognize her infant but after tramping up one aisle and down the other she returned to the street only to find a large crowd gathered around the mother who was crying out that her baby had been kidnapped. When the child was returned to her she was overjoyed and started off to buy it another rattle.

situation of Caracas would easily make it a valley of peace, as it lies 3,000 feet above the sea level in a green valley with mountains towering far above. To reach Caracas we must either make the trip from La Guayra, the seaport of Caracas, on the back of a donkey, a long and tedious journey, or else take one of the two daily trains on the English Railroad. This railroad is considered one of the finest specimens of engineering in the world, and the beauty and grandeur of the scenery that meets our eyes on every side is far beyond the powers of description. The line winds in and out, around and up the mountains, passing through tunnels and skirting along the edge of precipices, where if the engine jumped the track, the train would be hurled into the yawning abyss 1,200 feet below. At times we are above the clouds, and can see nothing but mist, and again the clouds are above us, and far below is the green valley stretching out to sea in the distance. It takes two hours and a half to make the trip, and it is well worth traveling all the way from the United States for a view of the *magnificent scenery. If you are for*tunate enough to know the very able administrator of this road, Harry J. Almond, he will probably ask you to make the trip from Caracas to La Guayra on his private 'trolley.' And you must accept his invitation, for you will have the most exhilarating ride of your life, besides seeing the scenery to much better avdantage. The 'trolley' does not come up to our idea of what a trolley should be, for it is nothing but a handcar, such as is used by our railroad laborers. It has a broad seat with cushions, large enough to hold four people, back to back, while on either side of the front seat is a very powerful brake, which can quickly bring the trolley to a standstill, even when moving at the rate of twenty-eight miles an hour.

"One can see many interesting sights in Caracas, if one of the many victorias is taken at the station and the 'cocliero' is told to drive around the city. The streets are narrow crooked, and very rough, the entire city being paved with cobblestones. On every side of the city, the dresses of children varying in color from the blackness of the ace of spades to the fairest of the fair. We pass women from Martinique, wearing their picturesque dresses of bright-colored calico, with a kerchief tied around their necks and crossed in front, and on their heads are the most dazzling bandana handkerchiefs, tied in such a fashion that two of the corners stick up like little horns. On the street corners we pass men smoking their cigarettes on one foot with the other leg is twined around their canes, thus serving the purpose of the other leg. These men are inferior looking and are most impudent in the way in which they stare at women, especially American women. They are quick-tempered, and think nothing of taking out a pistol and shooting a man if they have any dispute.

"There are many squares, or plazas, but the largest and most important one is the Plaza Bolivar, in the center of the city. This is where all the promenading is done, and every Thursday and Sunday evenings the National Band, which would be a credit to any country, gives an open-air concert. The children have their concert Saturday afternoon and the Plaza is crowded with pretty children dressed in the daintiest little white dresses and Parisian hats. These small tots are never seen during the week till Saturday afternoon, when they come out, every one of them, and show themselves off in perfect imitation of their pretty doll-like mothers.

"In the center of the Plaza is a large bronze equestrian statue of General Simon Bolivar, the Liberator of Venezuela. This statue was erected in 1870 by General Guzman Blanco, one of the ablest Presidents that Venezuela has ever had.

"Facing the Plaza Bolivar are the old Cathedral, which was partially destroyed in the earthquake of 1812; the postoffice, a handsome two-storied building, and the Hotel Amaritlla,' which used to be the White House of Caracas. A few minutes' walk from the Plaza brings us to the Museum, the University, the Federal Palace and Elliptical Salon. These last two buildings face each other on a very beautiful open square filled with all kinds of flowering shrubs and tropical trees. The government offices, Senate Chamber and House of Representatives are in the Federal Palace, while in the Elliptical Salon, where the President receives the Diplomatic Corps after an inauguration and on all state occasions, is a fine ceiling painting representing the battle near Carrababo, one of the *famous battles dur*ing the War for Independence. On the walls are fine portraits of all the Presidents of Venezuela, with the exception of President Guzman Blanco, which was destroyed in 1899, and portraits of many othe prominent men and heroes. If we have a little time to spare we should walk a few blocks farther on to the Municipal Theatre, a very handsome building, the interior of which reminds one of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York. On our way home we pass through the shopping district, where, if we care to pay the price, we can buy almost anything. The best and cheapest way to buy the beautiful lace work is from the women peddlers, who go from house to house to sell their wares, and during the recent revolution it has been very easy to buy at very low prices valuable old fans, laces, jewelry and curios from poor Venezuelans who used to be rich, but who have lost all their money owing to the troubled state of the country, and who are now forced to part with their old treasures in order to keep the wolf from the door.

"On our way to the Pantheon, the Westminster Abbey of Caracas, situated in the extreme northern portion of the city, we pass some of the best houses, but they are far from attractive on the outside. They are all one-storied, built of stucco of different colors, yellow and light blue predominating, with flat fronts relieved only by two closely-barred windows through which the senoritas flirt with their dark-skinned admirers The interiors of these houses are more attractive, as they all have open 'patois' filled with palms, shrubs and flowers and sweetly singing birds. The houses of the rich and poor are built right next to each other, and *there is no street reserved for the resi*dences of the richer class. For instance, one day when I was waiting at the door of one of the finest houses in Caracas I was surprised to have the door of the opposite house open and to see a man walk out leading a horse. Evidently the stable was in the back of the house and man and beast had to use the same door.

"The Pantheon, which stands at the end of the street at the foot of the mountains, is an imposing building of yellow stucco. It was formerly a cathedral, but has recently been converted into the last resting place of the heros of Venezuela. There are a few who have handsome marble monuments inside, but for the most part these are merely tablets bearing the names of the persons with the date of their birth and death. In front of the monuments and on the tablets are cheap memorial wreaths of imitation flowers and tinsel tied with the national colors—red, blue and yellow.

"Walking past the Pantheon we come to the Barracks, and a little farther on to the United States Legation, with its beautiful garden on one side. This house was built by an American and is considered one of the most desirable houses in Caracas. Its situation is certainly enviable, for it is on the outskirts of the city at the foot of the mountains, and there is always a decided difference in the temperature there from that in the city itself, where the heat at noontide is often unbearable.

"Tired after a day spent in seeing the sights of Caracas, we wander up the sides of the mountains back of the United States Legation, where we gaze down at the city below us and watch the glow of the setting sun on the roofs of the many-colored houses, and on the valley and mountains beyond. The sun sinks lower and lower, the twilight deepens and night comes on, and with a feeling of strange loneliness we walk slowly down the mountains back to our home in the beautiful but troubled city of Caracas."

GAY TIME AT COUNTRY DANCE

Never to be Forgotten Was the Initial Effort of the Pad and Pencil Club.

HALL WAS CROWDED

Such An Assortment as Accepted the Hospitality of the Pad and Pencil Club Was Never Seen Before—Some of the Most Remarkable Ones—Just Off the Farm.

From the highways and the byways the "gals" and "fellars" trooped in last Wednesday to the guests of the Pad and Pencil Club at the country dance which marked that organization's first plunge into the social swim. In all the annals of local newspaperdom, there was never anything like it. The guests, from the uncouth farmer's boy to the grand dame of the eighteenth century, who drifted in to see how it was done in the twentieth century, all declared that their fleeting glimpses of country life in "Pencil"vania was the event of a lifetime.

It had been arranged to have either Julian Ralph or Richard Harding Davis prepare the reports for the local papers so that the public might get a faint idea of the greatness of it all but, word was received at the last moment that neither of them could be present and the duty of chronicling the events of the night fell to the more humble users of the pad and pencil who managed to survive last night's ordeal. Words can but inadequately picture the remarkable array of "rubes" who assembled at the I. C. T. Club rooms where the country dance was held. Their wives, sisters and sweethearts had deserted their duties in garden and dairy as well and flocked about, pictures, every one of them, of grace and happiness. The room itself was bedecked in true rustic style, the pillars in the centre being hidden away by shocks of corn and stacks of wheat, the ceiling and walls receiving their share of the country products.

At one end was Sahr's Possom Hollow orchestra, as strange a collection of beings as you might wish to see, all perched upon barrels. But greatest of them all was Kenneth Stewart, whose bald pate shone in the gas light as he fiddled away and smiled genially upon the crowd, each smile displaying an apparently almost toothless jaw. Morris Sorensen, Charles Sahr and Frank Manchester were the other occupants of the barrels. Very realistic was this part of the dance.

Before obtaining entry to this remarkable gathering, it was first necessary to run the gauntlet of a keen-eyed bearded constable, who had a voice much like that of the manager of Hoppe's baseball team, John H. Coen. Safely past him, it was a host of jollity unconfined that came to view and drifted back and forth in the measured rythym of the more modern round dance or the hilarious dash and whirl of the country square dance. But the greatest part of it all was the collection of characters who assembled at the bidding of the Pad and Pencil Club.

While all the costumes were good, there were some that wandered slightly from the path of the true "Reuben" and bedecked themselves in outlandish fashion. They served to add to the motley throng. An excellent team were George L. Apgar and Charles Peterson, who struck town early in the evening, and wandered along the middle of West Front street and Park avenue, huge valises in hand, inquiring the way to the I. C. T. rooms. A troop of delighted small boys followed in their train. Once in the hall, they furnished more amusement. Both promptly fell in love with "Polly Vance," a dashing damsel with curling, bobbing locks and such a coy manner. She was decidedly the nit of the evening. By a strange coincidence, she disappeared later in the evening just before Thomas Muir made his appearance, mopping his brow.

Another great admirer of the fair Polly's was V. W. Nash, Jr., in a costume wonderful to behold. It was very evident that he had abandoned the plow but a moment before. The rustic Beau Brummel, some said it was Allen E. Beals, skipped about the floor, made sweeping bows, doffed his straw hat and waved the tails of his linen duster to the accompaniment of fluttering hearts on every side. Erwin Neighbor had more characters than the hero of a dime novel. When he appeared, there was none to rival. But his greatest masterpiece was his vest, the radish peelings which he fed to his friends as the evening progressed.

With his pupils all gone, the village school master, one Archibald Hacquer, wandered in and peered over the tops of his glasses, a homeless weary mortal who roamed about with never a smile for all the gaiety.

And the country maids, with rosy cheeks and gingham gowns, were a delight to behold. Some sweet faces were hidden away in sunbonnets but most of these were discarded as the evening progressed. Probably the most typical of the rustic belles were the Misses Emma Straw, Maymo Higgins, Marion Porter, Ethel Reynolds and May Squier. There were other of the young women who looked very bewitching but who did not look the part of the country maid with such effect.

Very striking and unique costumes were worn by the following: The Misses Susie Goff, Adah VanHorn, Belle and Elsie Slorah, Emma Foster, Emily Shortman, Christine Sorohsen, Elizabeth Day, Flora Bosserry, Eleanor Messinger, Mary Duvier, Mamie Eriksen, Annie and Louise Weigmann, Edith Lacey, Nellie and Margaret Baglin, Daisy and Grace Adams, Bessie Walls, Theresa McGinley, Tina and Della Voehl, Florence Bilyeu, Josie Feiler, Lizzie Herlick, Nellie Apgar, Mamie Ryan, Lena Brenner, Annie Fehring, Anna Thain, Laura Haughter, Mary Tripney, Addie Carney, Kate Carty, Grace and Frances Finch, Bertha Fisher and Mrs. Eugene O'Reilly, Mrs. Erwin Neighbor, Mrs. A. B. Lewis, and Mrs. Frank Manchester; Ray King, Hillaire Blatz, John Kelley, Alfred Lacey, Harry DeMess, John DeMess, Michael Higgins, Frazee Putnam, Alfred VanNuise, Elmer D. Cutting, William Buckley, George Fritts, William Porter, Edward Texier, Arthur Calean, Edward Feiring, Wesley Randolph, Edward Soltier, Hinds Humes, Addis Carney, Professor Finnigan, Arthur Beckman, Ferdinand Dencklau, George Firstbrook, Walter Foster and Harry Shortman.

"Polly Vance" and V. W. Nash, Jr., led the grand march which opened the programme of dance and led the guests a merry pace about the hall. There were seventy-five couples that participated. An impromptu march resulted from the visit of Pawson's Prideville band, aggregating a fife, drum and base-drum, manipulated by Charles Pawson, Nelson Peterson and Fred Winn, just in from the fields. Shortly after midnight, pumpkin pie, dough-nuts and cider were handed round after which the guests sang a few good, old songs, led by the orchestra and a quartette.

It was after 4 o'clock this morning when the "gals" and "fellars," tired, of course, but happy still, wandered homeward by the light of the waning moon to steal a few winks before it was time to be up and at the morning chores. And the weary scribes, proud with the knowledge that their effort had been the most successful event of its kind, gathered round the scene of their labors and gave thanks that they lived in the good, old village of Plainfield, even if it didn't boast of the strenuousness of gay New York. It might be well to add in closing that the committee, which was to blame for this affair, consisted of George E. Firstbrook, Archibald Hacquer and Thomas Muir.

In conducting the dance, the committee was assisted by the master hand of V. W. Nash, Jr., president of the I. C. T. Club, who acted as floor manager.

WATCH-NIGHT SERVICE.

Will be Held at Trinity Reformed Church New Year's Eve.

At the Wednesday evening prayer meeting in Trinity Reformed church, December 31, the Christian Endeavor Society will join in a watch-night service which will commence at 11 o'clock. The lecture room of the church will be opened from the usual hour, 8 o'clock, for a general social time, to which who may desire to attend. Similar meetings have been held in this church for the past two years and they have been very helpful. The service this year will be conducted by some well-known Christian worker, and will no doubt be equally helpful.

No Change in Rates.

Manager E. W. Mills, of the United States Express Company, in reply to an inquiry concerning the increase in express rates, says that there has been no increase over those fixed last summer. On certain kinds of merchandise a rate and a-half is charged owing to increased risk. This includes goods carelessly wrapped and liable to damage in transportation. Aside from that, Mr. Mills says, there has been no change in the rates.

Christmas Entertainment.

The Christmas entertainment at the Seventh-Day Baptist church will be held in the church parlors Monday evening, December 29, under the auspices of the Sunday-school.

Our Friends, the Druggists.

It is a pleasure to testify to the generally high character of druggists. But because of a few exceptions to the rule, it is necessary to caution the public to be on guard against imitations of Perry Davis' Painkiller. See that you get the right article, the household remedy that has been used in your family before you were born. Don't be taken into buying a substitute. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'.

PLUCK OF KING EDWARD.

Has Bravely Endured Much Physical Suffering in Order to Please His People.

"Of all the soldiers the king has decorated within the last three years of the war for bravery in the face of the enemy none deserves the Cross for Valor more than himself, who grimly and silently faced disease and death, unarmed and without a comrade," says Richard Harding Davis, in Collier's Weekly.

"For now that the whole dramatic, pitiful story is out, England learns —now that it is too late—of the days of gnawing pain when her king forced himself to smile and bow at court, to watch a horse race, to review a regiment, to drive through London with an assured and cheerful countenance. It is not pleasant to think of the torture of those days, of the mental anxiety as well as the bodily torment, when the king kept on his feet against the protests of his physicians, when his endurance was tested by hours of unceasing pain—pain so great that it is not decent to disclose it. Nor is it pleasant to contemplate this last drive through the park to Buckingham palace, when the people for some reason failed to cheer him heartily, while all the time he sat erect, pale and with set teeth, holding himself upright only by his will, and that they might be gratified."

THE YOUNGEST PEERESS.

Lady Betty Bligh, Baroness of Clifton, Three Years Old, Has a Coronation Robe.

The youngest peeress of Great Britain who has the right to attend the coronation of King Edward is Lady "Betty" Bligh, now Baroness Clifton, daughter of the late seventh earl of Darnley and Jemima, countess of Darnley. Although the baby countess can be barely three years old, being born in 1900, the same year in which her father died, she is having a coronation robe made for her on the lines of those of the other peeresses, and, owing to her extreme youth, she will without doubt be an object of much interest and attraction in the coronation show at Westminster. The father of Lady "Betty" was the sixteenth Baron Clifton and seventh earl of Darnley. He married Miss Jemima Blackwood, daughter of Sir Stephen Shadwell Blackwood, niece of the present baronet of the name, and a relative of the duke of Manchester. The tiny countess comes of a distinguished lineage. She is seventeenth in succession from the first Baron Clifton. In his history of the family the right of succession has fallen to the women of the house about as many times as to the men.

BELGIANS HONOR MAY DAY.

The Subjects of King Leopold Celebrate the Arrival of the Month of Flowers Each Year.

The month of May is the most highly honored of the whole year by the Belgians. It is known as the virgin's month and consecrated to the Virgin Mary. In the province of Liege young maidens have a quaint way of predicting their love affairs this month. A group of girls arrange to meet in sunrise and start to walk through the fields until they come to a hedge, quite unobserved from the highway, where they generally choose a honeysuckle bush beneath the protecting branches of which to perform their mystic operations.

Each maiden selects three blades of dew-laden grass, the tops of which she cuts to equal lengths, and to each of which she attaches a colored silken thread. Black represents a bachelor, red an unknown lover and green the secret desires of the maiden's heart. Ten days afterward they return to the same spot where they left the blades growing, and that blade of the three shown which has surpassed the others in height reveals the lover the maiden is destined to have.

HOW TO KEEP YOUNG.

A Problem in Which the Gentler Sex Have Long Been Interested.

The problem of how to keep young or how to keep from looking old, has engaged the thoughts of both men and women ever since the world began. Women usually have shown a deep interest in the vexatious matter, for their influence with men has always depended much on physical freshness and beauty. Numerous writers have contributed clever articles which lead to the unnaturally early disappearance of youth in some people. Bad temper and a lack of humor are, in his opinion, the two greatest enemies of youth and the best friends of age. He thinks that with the aid of a sense of humor and good temper a woman can be young and beautiful until 50. After 50 he can offer no advice on the subject.

Mica Veil for Automobilists.

The only successful substitute for the ugly goggles worn by automobilists are said to be a veil of mica invented by a Parisian milliner. It is intended for the use of ladies who object to the disfiguring effect of goggles. A sheet of mica in the form of a visor, set close to the face, is attached to the hat. It is a great improvement over the ordinary devices for protecting the eyes.

LITERARY.

For the thoughtful provider of Christmas gifts a remembrance whose value and interest do not pass with the day is by far the most satisfactory for giver and receiver. A year's subscription to a magazine—such a magazine as The Century, with its wealth of art and literature—costs no more than bon-bons or flowers, gone in a few hours, gives days of profitable pleasure, and keeps warm and bright through twelve months the cheer of a sympathetic friend's gracious thought. Attractive little certificates of subscription are provided to carry with the giver's card the Christmas message.

Father and mother are never at a loss what to give the girls and boys at Christmas-time; but the question is a sadly bothering one to bachelor maids and friends of the family. They are willing to go down into their pockets generously; but they hate the crowds of the shops, dread the patronage of clerks, and gladly end the torture by quickly carrying off a gorgeous toy automobile for the niece who is at the beaux and clothes age, and a big box of colored candies for the little nephew who is never allowed to taste sweets. Good St. Nicholas is the patron saint of just these fiction blundering buyers and the friend of every girl and boy in the land. Good St. Nicholas can promise more jolly times to the lucky girls and boys he visits than all the other saints in the calendar. Three dollars will buy a year's subscription of St. Nicholas Magazine for a year and a handsome big certificate of the subscription to go in the stocking or on the Christmas tree.

The special edition of the Scientific American, devoted to Transportation by Land and Sea, cannot fail to attract widespread interest, both because of the very handsome manner in which it is gotten up and on account of the voluminous amount of information that it contains. It is safe to say that anyone that reads it carefully through will find himself thoroughly posted both as to the magnitude and high quality of our railroads and shipping. The Scientific American has its own characteristic way of presenting what some people might call day statistics in an interesting form, and the present number is no exception to the rule. Both artist and editor have collaborated to certainly very good effect, and we believe the number will meet everywhere with a hearty reception.

CHARMING PLEASURE PLACE.

Such is Lakewood, Which is Now High in Popular Favor.

Few winter resorts have the equal of Lakewood's advantages which are primarily, location, climate and surroundings. At the end of a ninety minute railroad journey you reach Lakewood. The winter home of fashion, culture and society. Fine roads in several directions lead to the hotels and cottages of the latter, of which there are many, and the life of their occupants is as merry as can be.

The climate at Lakewood is at least 10 degrees milder than at New York or Philadelphia, and by its situation in New Jersey's famous pine belt there is an exhilarating healthfulness found no where else on the Atlantic coast. The hotels are metropolitan in every sense and every convenience imaginable is found there including Sun Parlors, Palm Gardens, Artistic Tea and Music Rooms, and a wonderful cuisine unsurpassed. There are innumerable opportunities for outdoor life and sports like pony polo, golf, cross country riding, coaching and automobiling are indulged in.

The only road to Lakewood from New York is the New Jersey Central and its express service is such that many New York business men travel daily between Lakewood and New York. To know about Lakewood write G. M. Burt, G. P. A., New Jersey Central, New York City, for book on New Jersey's pines, etc., free for the asking.

ANOTHER SWITCH.

Jersey Central Considering Establishment of One on South Side, Just West of Park Avenue.

Negotiations are now underway with the Jersey Central Railroad to put in a switch from the main tracks of the railroad to connect with the feed and grain bins of VanZandt & Voorhees, whose grainery adjoins the tracks.

The application has been made by the company through the owners of the property, Boice, Runyon & Company, and the final answer of the railroad company is expected almost every day.

At present the consignments of grain have to be carted from the railroad cars to the grainery entailing a great loss of time and money as by the side track the grain could be shifted in the cars over the bins by means of a tressel and dumped into them without any loss of time. It is probable that if the tressle is built the office of Hoagland's Express Company will have to be moved to another location.

GIRL ASTONISHES SURGEONS.

Performs a Feat Which Men of Science Regarded as Impossible.

It is nothing new for a man's head to be turned by a pretty girl, but the feat accomplished in that line by a nurse at a Philadelphia hospital the other day is probably without a parallel.

According to an exchange of that city Thomas W. Wright and a companion were skylarking and trying to imitate Jeffries and Corbett in front of Wright's home, when suddenly Wright received a blow on the jaw that turned his head half round and over on one side. An instant later a big lump appeared on his neck and he began to suffer greatly. He endeavored to straighten his head to its former shape, but was unable to do so. Try as he would the best he could do was to keep looking over his right shoulder. There was no getting him to "front face."

His friend helped him to the hospital, restraining his rather natural inclination to walk sideways, and there Drs. Lloyd and Merlin told him his neck was dislocated. They sought to reduce the dislocation, but were unsuccessful, and ordered him to bed. "Let me jiggle his head into place."

Surgeons and patient agreed and the young woman took the sufferer's face between her hands and gently worked it first one way and then the other. In a minute or two there was a sound as if something had snapped and the young man was looking at the world once more over his waistcoat, instead of from the starboard side. The swelling in his neck disappeared instantly and there was no pain. He thanked the girl and the doctors praised her.

THE STRAIN OF SOCIETY.

What the Human System Has to Endure in Keeping in the London "Swim."

The enormous strain upon the system during a London season must have either one of two results. It must either break down and destroy the nervous system, or it must educate the brain and body to bear more than ever their ancestors were born to endure; that is, unless it must kill the present generation or breed a new race of men and women. Before this last consummation is reached, and for the sake of the frailer members of society, it is time to consider whether nothing can be done to relieve the intolerable burden of a season, writes the London Globe. Reflection and experience induce the belief that dances, dinners, the theater, the opera, at homes and all the rest of it need not in themselves cause weariness and depression. What does seem to weigh heavily upon the brain is to have one's life "booked" for months ahead, not an hour of a day really free perhaps several weeks. This long-drawn engagement list has a poisoning effect upon the mind; it causes a sense of servitude; it destroys freedom; it closes round one's life like the approach of some deadly disease.

PASSING ON NOVELS.

Young Women Who Read for Philadelphia Library and Reject Objectionable Works.

In a quiet office of one of the public libraries of this city three young women sit reading all day long. Fresh from the presses the various new novels come into their room, and they examine them to see if they are fit for the shelves. Immorality and indecency are the two main grounds for the rejection of books by the library, says the Philadelphia Record. Thus, on the former ground Alphonse Daudet's "Sappho," Guy de Maupassant's "Bel Ami" and Henry Wimes's "Two Magics" were rejected.

The young women read all manner of books, and they make notes of everything objectionable in them. It would surprise Anthony Hope if he could see how many passages are marked questionable, and Mark Twain would not be pleased were he to hear the young women's opinion of some of his humorous remarks. The head of the library glances over the objectionable passages in otherwise good books which his readers underline, and these passages cause him sometimes to reject a volume. But, whether he rejects it or not, he is apt to be censured by somebody, for to pass on the books to be admitted to a library's shelves is a hard, ticklish and thankless job.

Importance of Opium.

More than 33,000 pounds of opium were received at San Francisco in a single recent shipment from China. A distinguished physician in that city remarked some years ago that if he were banished to the moon, compelled to practice medicine there, and permitted to take with him only one drug in the entire list of the pharmacopoeia, he would choose the juice of the poppy. But he was as strongly opposed as anyone could be to the indiscriminate, injudicious use of this powerful medicament, and denounced the sale of it anywhere except upon a doctor's prescription.

The bed of the Black sea and that of the Caspian have been raised by repeated earthquakes, and channels which were formerly navigable are no longer so.

IONA COUNCIL MARKED ITS TENTH BIRTHDAY

And at the Same Time Gave a Reception to the New Great Pocohontas.

WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

GREAT CHIEFS OF DEGREE OF POCOHONTAS AND RED MEN THERE.

Delegates From Many Neighboring Councils and the Local Tribes—Great Pocohontas Mrs. L. Holstein Received a Fine Present.

In an appropriate and pleasing manner the tenth anniversary of Iona Council, Degree of Pocohontas, was observed at Democratic headquarters, last Wednesday, and at the same time a reception was tendered to Great Pocohontas Mrs. Lavinia Holstein, who is a member of Iona Council. There were present representatives from Nenemoosha Council, Elizabeth; Armista Council, Jersey City; Mohawk Council, Perth Amboy, and Bright Eye Council, Carteret, besides members of Miantonomo and Wetumpkah Tribe, Improved Order Red Men, of this city.

In addition to these there were present the following great chiefs of the Degree of Pocohontas: Great Wenonah Mrs. Estella B. Ragan, of Paterson; Great Minnehaha Mrs. Ray Wardell, of Jersey City; Past Great Pocohontas Mrs. VanHouten, of Manasquan; Great Keeper of Records Mrs. Sarah Holcombe, of Trenton. Of the Great Board of Great Chiefs of the Red Men, the following were present: Great Chief of Records Daniel M. Stevens, of Camden; Great Keeper of Wampum W. J. Smyth, of Long Branch; Great Mishinewa F. E. Leonard, of Morristown; and Past Great Sachem William Newcorn, of this city.

Mr. Newcorn was master of ceremonies and he took charge of the programme, which he opened with a pleasant introductory speech in his own happy vein. In recounting the benefits of being a member of the Degree of Pocohontas, as well as the Red Men, he took occasion to refer to the successes of Iona Council, which was organized ten years ago. Today there is a membership of sixty, all very active and working for the growth of the council. During its existence the council has disbursed $2,500 in sick benefits and the membership in the State is 3,000.

Following these remarks, Past Great Pocohontas Mrs. VanHouten, of Manasquan, gave a reading. The Great Pocohontas was then called upon and in a few words congratulated Iona Council and expressed her appreciation for the noble work done in the past and for the honor conferred upon her.

Other features of the programme included a piano duet by Miss Kittie Finger and Miss Tessie Casenove; recitations by Miss Josie Murphy and Miss Ada Westphal, and every one of the Board of Great Chiefs of both the Degree of Pocohontas and Red Men were called upon and made a short address. In which Iona Council and the Great Pocohontas came in for good share of congratulation and well-wishes. Each one of the chiefs of the Degree of Pocohontas was remembered with a handsome bouquet of flowers.

Toward the close of the programme there was a surprise. Mrs. Holstein was escorted to the platform, where Mr. Newcorn, on behalf of the members of Iona Council, presented her with a handsome solid silver tea service. The presentation was made with a few well chosen words and was happily responded to by Mrs. Holstein, who was completely surprised. She thanked one and all for the magnificent gift. Later Mrs. Holstein received a gift of a bureau scarf from the Great Wenonah.

After the programme dancing followed, music for which was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly's orchestra. During the evening refreshments were served under the direction of the following committee: Mrs. Charles Dodwell, chairman; Miss Daisy Snyder, Mrs. Nimrod Horton, Mrs. Anna Fisher and Miss Mamie Clark. This committee arranged the celebration and reception and was accorded much praise for its efforts.

Suing Trolley Company.

The suit of Mrs. Bonnell against the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company will be called at the next term of court at Elizabeth. Mrs. Bonnell is represented by Lawyer R. M. Clark and is suing the company for $5,000 damages for injuries claimed to have been received riding in a car at Elizabeth some time ago.

NEWARK WILL HAVE NEW NORMAL SCHOOL

But a Third is Needed and Plainfield Would Have a Chance for That One.

NEWARK'S ADVANTAGES

BOROUGH SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT WIGHTMAN TALKS OF SITUATION.

He is Chairman of Committee on Normal School Needs of State Teachers' Association—Reasons Why Newark Will Get School.

Superintendent Homer J. Wightman, superintendent of the North Plainfield High School, and who is also chairman of the committee on Normal School needs of State Teachers' Association, said last Thursday, when asked if there was any prospect of the proposed new Normal School locating in Plainfield if the State Board of Education decides to build another State institution of that kind, that it was very improbable that this city would get the school.

Newark, he said, will be the city to get the school because within a radius of ten miles there are no less than fifty large High Schools which graduate large numbers of pupils every year who would take a course in a Normal School if they could be near their homes. In Paterson, Passaic, and other cities not far from Newark the High School graduates who live in those cities could attend the school in Newark and go back and forth from their homes daily. The railroad transportation in and around Newark admits of this far better than the railroad facilities of this city.

Three Normal Schools are needed in this State, said Mr. Wightman, and if Newark gets the Normal School now talked of, Plainfield will in all probability get the third.

Mr. Wightman has sent his report to the State Board of Education and it is said that if the board wanted to have the original report which have been received by Mr. Wightman in reply to his inquiries among instructors and other educational authorities in this State, he could send them to the board. Mr. Wightman intends to see one of the members of the board and present to him the necessity of another Normal School in this State. The committee of the State board is also the committee in the State Legislature and one of these will be seen and the situation will be presented to him in detail. The need of a third State Normal School will be pointed out to him at that time.

MUST REGISTER.

State Board of Pharmacy Started a Fight Against Unregistered Places.

The State Board of Pharmacy has, according to George E. Clymer, its general counsel, begun a campaign against unregistered pharmacists and, it is asserted, a war will be waged against them in the courts in this State. The various associations of pharmacists have been notified to report cases where laws have been violated and as a result actions have been begun in Camden and other cities in this State.

There are about 150 drug stores throughout the State which are conducted without a proper license and it is the intention of the board to bring suits against all of them.

HIGHER ANNUAL DUES.

Cost of Junior Membership in Y. M. C. A. Goes Up Now.

At a recent meeting of the boys' work committee, of the Y. M. C. A., it was decided to increase the price of membership to this department of the Y. M. C. A. to $5 a year, but all those who are now members and wish to renew their membership will be received into membership again for the present price of $3.50. A year's membership into the Y. M. C. A. is an excellent present for a boy for Christmas and parents will do well to bear this fact in mind.

Proceeds of Fair.

The net proceeds of the annual sale, held under the auspices of the women of All Souls church, netted $462.

LIFELESS BODY ON THE TRACKS

Mrs. Susan Gassner Killed by Train, Near Station, During Thursday.

NO ONE KNEW WHEN

Mangled Body Cold and Lifeless, Picked Up by Train Crew Early Friday Morning—Left Home to Get Laundry and Meet Husband—He Returned Alone.

Some time during Thursday Mrs. Susan Gassner, of East Fourth street, met a violent death, probably instantaneously, on the New Jersey Central. Her mangled body was found on the tracks near the Park avenue bridge shortly after 5 o'clock Friday morning, by the train crew of the newspaper train which always backs into the siding used by the United States Express Company. It was then stone cold and the exact time of her being killed cannot be determined. The remains were picked up by the depot attaches and removed to Cole's undertaking parlors. The skull was crushed, both arms were broken and the body was otherwise cut and bruised, showing that the woman had been struck but not run over.

The unfortunate victim was the wife of Walter Gassner and came to this city with her husband from New York, three years ago. They took up their residence with Mrs. Gassner's sister, Mrs. Herbert Chamberlain, of East Fourth street, while the husband has been commuting.

Early last Thursday, Mrs. Gassner left the house stating that she was going to the laundry and that afterward she would proceed to the depot to meet her husband's train. When Mr. Gassner came in at 9 o'clock without her, it was then evident that she had not gone to the station and a search was immediately instituted. It ended fruitlessly and it was only when news of her death was brought to them that the family knew what had become of her.

No one who knew her can account for her getting on the track, except that she became bewildered and attempted to reach Park avenue from the bridge. It is possible that she was struck by a freight train early in the evening and that the body remained in the position where it was found for the rest of the night. The laundry was scattered about the track.

Mrs. Gassner was thirty-four years old and leaves no immediate relatives beyond Mrs. Chamberlain.

An Improvement.

A decided improvement is being made on Park avenue alongside Hotel Rosell, where the sidewalk is being widened. Heretofore the railing and open space was a source of annoyance. The widening of the walk is greatly appreciated.

Granted a Pension.

Letters from Women

Cured by the use of Kodol are received daily. Their troubles nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder. If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices secreted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to transform the nutrient properties of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the amount of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the delicate organs gradually grows weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. That of treating the diseased organ. Your best doctors in the land make this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that pure, rich blood is sent coursing through the veins and arteries of every muscle, tissue and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full strength and vigor is soon restored to each. Kodol relieves indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders.

I have taken Kodol for nearly two months for stomach trouble and it is the only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pains I suffered. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy, I seldom need it, as it has cured me. Mrs. J. W. Cousaison, Milo Center, N. Y.

NERVE STILL REMAINS IF MONEY IS GONE

S. D. Drake Says He Will Settle All His Present Debts and Start Anew.

HE IS NOT DISCOURAGED

HE EXPLAINS THE CAUSE FOR HIS PETITION IN BANKRUPTCY.

Of Liabilities, $24,000 is for Endorsing Company's Notes Which Will be Paid in Full by Company. —The Assets Will Meet Others.

After thirty-eight years of business activity passing through several financial panics, Silas D. Drake has been compelled to file a petition in bankruptcy. While his liabilities are given to the court as $54,000, about $24,000 is charged to him as endorser on companies' notes, that will be paid in full by the company, thus leaving $33,000. Of this amount the creditors hold land free and clear to secure claims for $6,000 and Mr. Drake has turned over other securities to his creditors for $34,000.

Mr. Drake says that since he earned his first dollar driving a canal boat from Trenton to Bordentown he has tried to manage his business affairs so that he could go through a business career with the seven in a hundred who do not fail. But, the action of the stockholders of the Columbia Realty Company, who recently applied to the Court to have their stock appraised, causing the directors of the company to ask for a temporary receiver, precipitated Mr. Drake's capitulation.

Mr. Drake says still further that while he has surrendered all to his creditors he has still retained as a valuable asset, his nerve, and as he has accumulated a vast storehouse of experience, he hopes sooner or later to recover. Among the creditors there are no merchants, laboring men, or material men, and banks only to an amount of $900, and Mr. Drake has dealt with this class of people largely for many years. Mr. Drake says that he has been a public character for many years and he now wants to thank his many friends who have tried to encourage him to continue his misfortune.

IN CAPITAL CITY.

This is Just the Season of the Year to Visit Washington.

The Nation's Capital is a city idolized by every American, and his one thought when arranging for a traveling tour is to visit it. There is no other place in any land which can compare with Washington, it is cosmopolitan yet in a way different from New York, London or Paris. To start with the system by which the city was planned is unique. Its public buildings are in their architectural design grand and imposing. The streets are wide, finely kept thoroughfares, unlike those of any other city. Washington boasts of a park system second to none, and its every environ bespeaks such grandeur as is due the Nation's Capital. The government buildings are wonderful mines of instructive and interesting material and Congress is the mecca for the tourist who delights in watching and listening to the proceedings of the greatest governing body known to the world.

This early winter season is the most delightful time for visiting Washington and an admirable opportunity for such a trip is afforded on December 29, when the New Jersey Central is going to run a low rate excursion to Washington. For further information write W. C. Walsh, Jr., Broad street, Newark, or C. M. Burt, general passenger agent, New Jersey Central, New York.

NEW YEARS AT Y. M. C. A.

New Year's Day Will See the Usual "Open House" There.

Secretary Manning, of the Y. M. C. A., is planning a very attractive programme for the members of the Young Men's Christian Association New Year's Day. In the morning the members of the boys' department will hold open house in the building and in the afternoon the older members of the association will entertain their friends. At night there will be another of the Star Course entertainments in the Association Hall. The programme has been arranged expressly for the young men of this city and they are cordially invited to be present.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 29—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—Our heavenly home and the way—John xiv, 1-6; Rev. xxi, 1-4.

Dying words are always highly prized. This is true of the dying words of great men and of our dear ones and personal friends. President McKinley's last words of sublime resignation to the way and will of God will live long after his most eloquent discussions on political topics will be forgotten. With what an interest, therefore, we come to Christ's last words to His disciples, and with what joy we read that at such a time He spoke to them of His and their and our future heavenly home and the way to it. And what Christ said at the time upon this subject is corroborated by the heavenly vision that John received upon the island of Patmos.

1. Our heavenly home. (1) We have a heavenly home. This is an assured fact. Christ said, "In My Father's house are many mansions." They are not figures of speech. Instead His words undoubtedly referred to an abode in the future. The Bible speaks with absolute assurance of the immortality of the soul and the resurrection of the dead. It declares that we shall live forever in the communion with God and Christ and all redeemed saints. Such an assurance should inspire us to faithfulness to God under all circumstances in life. (2) We shall know each other in our heavenly home. Christ said, "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am there ye may be also." But why be together if they should not know each other and not be able to continue the friendships and fellowship of this life? Such a proposition without recognition in heaven would be absolutely meaningless. We shall know our friends in heaven and perhaps all other heavenly inhabitants, as Peter, James and John recognized Moses and Elijah on the Mount of Transfiguration. (3) Our heavenly home is a home of happiness. What we shall be and do in heaven is not entirely revealed. Perhaps it could not be. But we know that we shall be with God, with Christ, and enjoy supreme happiness. Death, sorrow and crying shall be done away with and all things shall be new. Sin and misery shall be unknown and in their place shall be joy and peace. What a comfort amid the trying experiences of this life!

2. The way to our heavenly home. Christ is the way. "I am the way; I am the door; by Me, if any man enter in, he shall be saved." Nor is there any other way to heaven. Reason and morality are powerless to save the soul. Faith in Christ that leads to repentance and forgiveness of sin is the only open sesame to the soul's future paradise. But all may enter who will believe. No easier terms could be offered, and they should be accepted by all.

Dr. W. W. White, president of Bible Teachers' Training school of New York city, is the conductor of a Bible study class under the auspices of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) local union.

The thought of the Quiet Hour came to Dr. Clark during a long, lonely voyage from India to Africa, in which he had much time for meditation and prayer.

Nuggets.

A thousand matters are left free and flexible in Christian Endeavor. Personal initiative, invention, resource, the constant leading of the spirit of God, are possible.—Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D.

You're an "I'll try" society. When the Lord asks you to do a big thing, count it a compliment.—Rev. Dr. Edward Taylor.

Just as the ore lies in the mountains for hundreds of centuries before it is discovered, so the ore of consecration and pledged service has lain in the lives of young people in all the Christian ages. It was only waiting for the Christian Endeavor society to unearth it and mold it into many beautiful forms for the Master's use.—Rev. W. Knight Chaplin.

MISS MARY FERNALD DRANK FATAL ACID

A Former Plainfield Young Woman Met Death at Her Own Hand Yesterday.

TAUGHT IN WESTFIELD

BROKE DOWN IN HEALTH LAST OCTOBER BY OVER WORK.

Was Daughter of Rev. J. H. Fernald, and Moved Away in Fall of 1893, After Graduation of Her Brother From High School.

Miss Mary G. Fernald, twenty-three years old, of 222 Jewett avenue, Westerleigh, Staten Island, died last evening from the effects of carbolic poisoning. The acid was drunk early in the day. Miss Fernald was the daughter of Rev. James C. Fernald, a retired minister, and a former resident of Arlington avenue, this city, a few years ago.

Miss Fernald was quite well known in Plainfield, having attended the High School, but left here in the fall of 1893, when her brother, Chas. B. Fernald, entered Amherst College, having graduated from the High School in the spring. She also had another brother, Harry.

She was graduated from the Pratt Institute a year and a half ago and went to Cedar Rapids, where she was instructor in art in a school. She returned east and obtained a similar position in Westfield. While there she studied hard for the State examination. In October she broke down and returned to the home of her parents, suffering from nervousness and melancholia.

On Tuesday she was so much better that she visited a school in Hempstead, L. I., accompanied by her mother. They reached home on Wednesday evening. She complained of being tired after the trip, so when she did not arise as usual yesterday morning her parents thought nothing of it. About 11 o'clock her mother called her. The door was locked and there was no response to the rappings. The door was then burst open. Miss Fernald was found unconscious on the bed and beside her lay an unlabelled bottle which still contained some carbolic acid.

THEATRICAL.

Hall Caine might very well have labelled his new drama, "The Eternal City," "Extra dramatic," and had he done so he would have been well within the fact; but instead of resorting to a phrase, the Manxman went farther afield and discovered larger game. In "The Eternal City," which Miss Viola Allen is presenting at the Victoria Theatre, New York, there is such a wealth of novelty, in the way of incident and situation, that Hall Caine was able to rest content, knowing full well that a play built upon so ample a foundation was in no need of a catch-phrase to attract and hold the public's attention. Mr. Caine proved with his "The Christian" that he was fully acquainted with what the public desired in the way of "extra dramatic" fare, and in Miss Viola Allen's extraordinary receipts with his new play "The Eternal City," he again demonstrated his ability to please and satisfy the popular taste.

For Christmas week B. F. Keith provides an all star list of vaudeville features. A feature which will be particularly interesting to the children is Gillett's theatrical dogs. Charles Guyon and Nellie Daly, famous for their acrobatic comedy, and dancing with Matthews and Harris in their mirth provoking farcical absurdity entitled" Adam the Second," are the most conspicuous among those who will furnish the comedy of the bill of fare. The Pantzer Trio, the celebrated European contortionists and pantomimist; Smith and Fuller, in their refined instrumental specialty; Loney Haskell, the monologue man who tells a lot of nonsense most entertainingly; Osaw and Delmore, comedy jugglers; Mr. and Mrs. Dancey, makers of pictures with sand and with smoke; Raymond Teal, the well known black face comedian; Orville and Frank, novelty acrobats, with other famous performers, will make up a programme sure to be enjoyed by everyone.

Kindly take notice that Ely's Liquid Cream Balm is of great benefit to those sufferers from nasal catarrh who cannot inhale freely through the nose, but must treat themselves by spraying. The price, including a spraying tube, is 75 cts. Sold by druggists and mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 29, "Our Heavenly Home and the Way"—Text, John xiv, 1-6; Rev. xxi, 1-4.

"In my Father's house. I go to prepare a place for you. I am the way."

Here we have no continuing place. Houses grow old, decay and disappear. If built more strongly than usual, their very solidity inconveniences us as we need to alter them and make improvements for comfort. The average age of the constructions of men is stated to be not above eighty years, and this estimate recognizes the many buildings which are ages old.

But, however long the houses may last, we do not last long ourselves. Counting all the aged people and the average of human life is stated to be under thirty years. It is slowly lengthening under the influence of peace, more and better food, wiser ways of living and surer cures for disease. But, whatever the length of life, death shall and must find it. There is no other door out, and we cannot stay here. All things considered, it is well for us that we were made. We were not built right to stay on this earth much longer than we now may stay. It is a good world in which to live for a certain length of time, and we can do very well for a while here, but if we are to do well for long we must look for future many would prefer nonexistence. Our contentment with the present is based on our hope of the future. We crave more than this earth has to give. We expect more than it could contain. This will do for our cradle, but not for our home. Wider, higher, richer are our aspirations and ambitions than earth can satisfy.

An old lady who had never been beyond the bounds of the valley in which her English home was situated was one day induced to climb the hill which overlooked it. As the horizon widened her eyes grew big with wonder, and as the broad prospect from the summit opened out around her she cried, "I never knew before that the world was so big."

So we have climbed another year's length up the heights of life, and our horizon line dips lower than it did. Life is larger than it was. Home means more. "My father's house!" What shall it be?

When the toil worn Greeks after their long march caught sight of the shining sea, they cried in their joy: "Thalatta! Thalatta!" The sea to it meant to them the end of all journeying in the home land. They must be near home, for they were in sight of the sea.

However weary our way may be our path shall lead home if we love the Christ and serve Him truly. Never were the sentiments of Bernard of Clunt in his wonderful hymn, "The Celestial Country," more appreciated than at the present time. With increasing fervor we sing his "Jerusalem the Golden." With deeper devotion we rest our souls on Jesus' words, "Let not your hearts be troubled."

The Strength of Christ.

Our efforts in the strength of Christ constantly remind us of our dependence. Especially is this true in the face of the strong enemies which we have to encounter. He who has a proper view of the strength of these enemies and of the absolute necessity of encountering and overcoming them cannot be proud, but in all humility will throw himself upon the arm of Christ. In all his efforts to escape sin in the guilt of it and in enjoying power he will feel the need of divine help. This is that working out of our own salvation to which we are exhorted and which brings us to Christ for the knowledge of the truth and for help in everything that pertains to life and godliness. It is working in everything in subjection to and dependence upon Him who worketh in us "both to will and to do of His own good pleasure."—Christian Instructor.

The Dignity of It.

Consider the dignity of this—to be admitted into so near converse with the highest majesty. Were there nothing to follow, no answer at all, prayer pays for it in the excellency of its nature and the sweetness that the soul finds in it. They who love find much delight in discoursing together, and count all hours short and think the day runs too fast that is so spent, and they who are much in this exercise the Lord doth impart His secrets much to them.—Leighton.

Accept Your Lot.

Do not let us complain over the place in which we are compelled to serve. The Lord hath made us, and the whole plan of our life is so arranged as to bring to their most perfect development the faculties with which we have been endowed. Let us only be content to run not counter to His plans.—Presbyterian.

Words Which Bind Us Together.

Trusting in God and doing our duty, these are the words which bind us together. If you or I can feel that those who know us best can say of us that we are trusting God and doing our duty, it is enough to teach us that this is a ground of communion which neither the difference of external rites nor the difference of sects or sentiments can ever efface.—Dean Stanley.

Entire Sanctification.

I believe that all who truly desire and seek it may be filled with all the heart and soul, mind and strength and their neighbors as themselves. This is entire sanctification.—Bishop Vincent.

A Greater Compliment.

To be trusted is a greater compliment than to be loved.—George Macdonald.

WESTFIELD WON TWO AT CRANFORD CASINO

Another Series of Three Games Rolled in The Press Bowling League Last Thursday.

TWO VERY CLOSE GAMES

CRANFORD ROLLED TWO STRONG GAMES AND CAPTURED ONE OF THEM.

First Game Was a Hot One, and Cranford Won by Fourteen Pins —Westfield Took Second by Four—The Third Was Easy.

Westfield's bowlers won two games in The Daily Press Bowling League last Thursday at the Casino, Cranford, when they rolled against the Cranfords. It was the closest contested series which has been played in the league this season and the enthusiasm along the alleys as the game progressed increased until the ball rang with the cheers of the spectators.

The first game started at 8:20 when Forster led off for the Westfield Club, followed by Sharpe, of Cranford. The Westfields started off in the lead until the third frame when Cranford passed them and took a start. Westfield showed a weakening toward the finish and Cranford continued the lead, winning the first game by a total score of 869 to 855. Forster rolled a total score of 214 which was the highest score made by any of the Westfielders in that game.

Cranford took the lead in the second game and kept it until the sixth frame when Westfield took a spurt and kept that position for two frames when both teams totaled up to 643. The ninth frame was therefore a very exciting one until Messick rolled a low score, giving the Westfielders the game by four pins with a total of 813 to 809.

Westfield led in the first frame on the third game by one pin but Cranford went ahead at the third frame with ten pins but was unable to hold its position and in the fourth frame Westfield again took the lead and gradually increased its strength until at the final score Westfield stood 847 to Cranford's 779 thus giving the visitors the game by sixty-eight pins.

The following scores were made:

CHRISTMAS AT HIGH SCHOOL

Usual Inter-Class Rivalry of Christmastide Prevailed at the City High School.

HELD FRIDAY MORNING

Seniors Succeeded in Placing Their Colors at the Highest Point of Vantage—Gifts Exchanged by Classes—The Juniors' Spread for the Seniors.

The usual class rivalry and Christmas jollity reigned supreme at the City High School, Friday, on the occasion of the closing of school for the holidays. As is customary at such a time, the members of each class strove with might and main to make the best showing and to convince every one that their class was and ever had been the best class in the school. There was considerable good-natured rivalry in regard to the raising of class flags and staunch bands of supporters for each class strove to plant their class colors on the most commanding vantage point of the school property.

From the seniors won out in their struggles for class supremacy and the senior colors, green and white, floated this morning from the two most sought for points of display. This victory was not without opposition, for each class was well represented in the field and the victory was hard won. Aside from this banner rivalry, the lower classes' exchanged slaps and digs as to their rank. As usual, the freshmen were ridiculed in a friendly way by the sophomores who presented each freshman with a toy bed and the following poetic advice:

"Early to bed, and early to rise
Makes the good freshman happy and wise."

The "freshies," not to be outdone by their upper classmen, presented each soph with a piece of fudge, carefully wrapped and to which was tied the following:

"Dear Sophemores, as competent to judge
Of tender Freshmen, starting in to fudge
Four weary years of books and study through,
This signifies our answer sweet to you
To your puff-pated patronage we answer fudge!"

Each of these lower classes tastefully decorated its portion of the study hall with the class colors.

Appropriate Christmas exercises were held in the chapel at 11 o'clock and the following programme was skillfully carried out:

"Milton's Hymn of the Nativity," Miss Margaret Pearce; song, "Bethlehem," school; "Das Krix Kindel," by Miss Mary A. Griggs; song, "Christmas Hymn," school; story, "A Christmas Present for a Lady," read by Miss Marguerite Pierson; song, "Hymn of the Nativity," glee club; recitation "Little John's Christmas," Miss Florence B. Martin; anthem, "Christmas Awake," school.

At the close of the exercises, Michael E. Moynihan, as "Santa Claus," distributed gifts to the members of the faculty and junior class. These gifts, each of which carried with it an appropriate verse, served in a friendly way to give a slap at the person who recieved it and much merriment was rife as their presentation.

At the close of school the juniors tendered a banquet to their upper classmen and all enjoyed a good time.

The decorations throughout the building showed considerable skill of arrangement by the various classes and the chapel, especially presented a gay and festive appearance. The seniors, with their greens and white bunting, had the main part of the chapel decoration and their decorations were elaborately gotten up. Beside the other classes of the school, the Girls' Athletic Association, the cadet battalion, and the classes of 1901 and 1902 also had their share in the decorating.

SPOKEN IN EVERY CAMPAIGN AND DURING ALL THAT TIME J. E. MARTINE NEVER RECEIVED A CENT.

Plainfield's Former Orator Has Spoken on Platforms With Many Distinguished Men.

While reminescencing the other day with a local representative of this paper, James E. Martine was asked how many speeches or addresses he had made to which he replied:

"Oh my," said he, "I have no idea, but it would make a long story if put in one. Suffice to say that I have spoken in every campaign since I was eighteen years old and during that time I have addressed audiences in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Missouri, Colorado and Nebraska. I have spoken from platforms with William Jennings Bryan, David B. Hill, Thomas B. Hendricks, Charles A. Towne, Grover Cleveland, Leon Abbott, and scores of others whose names I do not now recall.

"Do not speakers in large meetings such as the one recently held at Morristown, receive some remuneration for speaking?" ventured the scribe.

"Oh yes, many do," said the Farmer Orator, "but seldom very large sums. As for myself I have never received a farthing. Mayhap because it was not worth paying for, and then politics, to me, is a conviction, a religion. I love to speak my convictions. The world is unfair in its measure of a politician. I hold that there is nothing inconsistent with being a politician and at the same time being a dignified and honorable gentleman."

MAN IN TRAP.

Frank Scheimer, of Liberty Corner, Badly Hurt by Walking into a Trap in the Woods.

A most peculiar and painful accident fell to the lot of Frank Scheimer, whose home is at Liberty Corner but who is well known in the city and borough, Friday morning. He was taking a short cut through through a woods when his left foot was suddenly siezed in a grip that nearly cracked the bone. Looking down he found he had stepped into a strong trap, large enough to hold a bear.

He nearly fainted from pain and loss of blood before his cries brought assistance and he was released. Who put the trap in position or for what purpose is not known.

ONCE OWNED BY MARTINE

HOUSES ON SITE OF PROPOSED RAILWAY TUNNEL TERMINUS.

Daniel Martine Owned Houses in New York, and Once Occupied One of Them.

Even in the sale of the great plot of land in New York which will be used for the new Pennsylvania terminus in that city Plainfield is represented and thus takes its place, as in many of the big doings in New York, by figuring in the recent deal.

At the corner of Thirty-third street and Ninth avenue, directly facing the plot of ground purchased, Daniel Martine, the father of James E. Martine of this city, once owned a large row of houses and lived there for some time with his family. He afterwards moved out and came to this city but rented the houses out to tenants. Some time afterwards he sold the property to a man named White, who is said to have been the owner of the place when it was bought by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

The cottages are still standing on the site today but are now used as stores and their appearance has been altered greatly. The property has increased in value greatly since Mr. Martine's father owned them as at that time there were but few houses in that section of the town which was considered by the inhabitants of New York to be far out in the country.

SOLDIERS' MINSTRELS.

Company K's Show Will be Held at Casino, Wednesday and Thursday, January 21 and 22.

Company K's minstrel troop has so far progressed with its rehearsals that it announces the show will be given in the Casino, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, January 21 and 22. The first part promises to be one of the most elaborate ever given by local talent. Original marches have been composed for it by William E. MacClyment and a professional dramatist is writing parodies and local jokes.

Under the command of Lieutenant Kitchell, a picked squad from the company will give an exhibition drill and miniature military show. The remainder of the afterpart will be first-class vaudeville acts by Metropolitan artists.

ANOTHER EFFORT.

Pad and Pencil Club Plans a Rags and Tatters Social.

Flushed with the success of its maiden effort at entertaining its friends, the Pad and Pencil Club has already conceived the idea of giving another dance at wide variance with the ordinary stereotyped affair. The second attempt will be a "Hobo" or "Rags and Tatters" social when more opportunity will be given for originality in costuming. The men will be typical "Wearie Willies" while the women will be asked to attend gowned in Apple Mary style. Although the date has not yet been determined upon, it will be on or about February 11.

Yardley Brown, of Summit avenue, is detained at home with an attack of pneumonia.

BAILEY SEEKS WIFE.

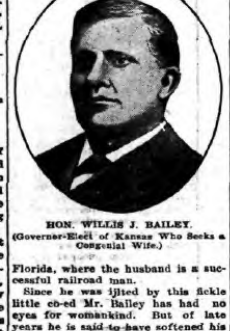
Made a Bet to Marry If Elected Governor of Kansas.

Chicago Friends Recall His Courtship in Illinois Twenty Years Ago —Was Jilted by a Girl He Loved Dearly.

Chicago classmates of Gov.-elect Willis J. Bailey, of Kansas, when he was attending the University of Illinois at Champaign away back in the early '80s, have recalled a college love affair of the first gentleman of Kansas that, in their minds, at least, explains why he has never become a benedict, and makes it fair to presume that when he does seek a wife he will give Illinois a wide berth.

Mr. Bailey, it seems, fell in love during his freshman year with a very pretty girl in his class very charming co-ed, and soon the brawny young Kansan was her devoted slave. All during his college course he was a most attentive Lothario, and the young woman seemed to reciprocate his affection. It is said that before Bailey graduated the two had been plighted. He went back to Kansas to his father's ranch, and the young woman remained at the university to finish her education. All during the vacation after his graduation the two lovers corresponded voluminously.

But when the fall term began a new star dawned upon the vision of the young co-ed. Another young chap, not so handsome as Bailey, but with the advantage of being on the ground, courted her assiduously. She gave her heart to him, and wrote Bailey a letter that made him swear. It is said, never again to trust a woman. An invitation to the wedding of his erstwhile fiancee and his successful rival followed shortly afterward. The couple now live in



HON. WILLIS J. BAILEY.
(Governor-Elect of Kansas Who Seeks a Congenial Wife.)

Florida, where the husband is a successful railroad man.

Since he was jilted by this fickle little co-ed Mr. Bailey has had no eyes for womankind. But of late years he is said to have softened his heart. At any rate, he made an antelection bet that if he was made governor of Kansas he would choose a helpmate. And his Chicago friends and classmates say that he will keep his word, but they fear that he still smarts from the jilting of the co-ed, and will pass Illinois by when he goes wife hunting.

Whether the memory of the sting left by the announcement of the marriage is still fresh in the mind of the western state executive is a question that has presented itself to a number of Chicagoans by the failure of Gov. Bailey to find a wife in Kansas to suit him.

Although the winner of the matrimonial election bet, who originally stipulated that he must marry a Kansas woman, has waived that condition and the governor is free to choose from any state in the union, he still reports that he cannot find a wife to be mistress of the $70,000 executive mansion.

Whether, remembering the past, he really wants to get married is the question.

To this George L. Douglass, a Chicago lawyer with an office in the Association building, who was speaker in the Kansas legislature in 1889 while Mr. Bailey was a representative, makes the following defense of Gov. Bailey:

"If Willis Bailey made a bet that he would marry if elected he will marry—that is all. He is a man of his word and would go through fire and water to keep it. Of course, the story of the bet may all be made out of whole cloth. But I knew him in Kansas and saw him lift himself from stock raising to statesmanship. I never knew him to fail to make good a promise."

Gov. Bailey is known to many Chicagoans. He was the guest of honor at a Kansas reunion at the Union League club when he came to the city as a delegate to the trust conference.

A description of the man who is seeking a wife with an unlimited field to choose from is given as follows by his admirers here:

Height, 5 feet 9 inches; complexion, light; hair, light brown; eyes, blue. Rather "stocky," round-faced, good-natured and genial.

Worsley in Wife Beaters.

The jury in the trial of George Honaker, of Versailles, Ky., on an indictment for striking his wife, Josie Honaker, with intent to kill, and charged with two former convictions for felony, brought in a verdict of guilty and fixed Honaker's punishment at confinement in the penitentiary for life.

NAMED THE BABY FOR A CAT.

Wealthy Woman Had Just Lost Her Pet Maltese by Death and the Child Got Its Name.

"I have christened children every conceivable name," said a clergyman the other day, relates the Baltimore Sun, "but I think the funniest was a boy I named for a cat. My pastorate was a suburb of Boston, and one of my parishioners was a lady of a large estate and a gentlewoman in every sense of the word, generally known in the community as Aunt Esther. She was an eccentric person, who wore silken gowns very long in the train and short in the front and always several old-fashioned brooches at the same time. She visited Washington frequently, always with her pet cat as a traveling companion, and she was one of the few ladies accorded a seat on the floor of the house of congress. On the grounds of her country home was a diminutive cemetery, where her feline pets slept after life's fitful fever.

"During my residence in the parish her special favorite was a large Maltese cat, named Thomas Henry, whose death occurred just before the coming of a new baby at the lodgekeeper's home on Aunt Esther's place. She was to be my mother and name the child, while I was to baptize it. Her recent bitter bereavement still weighed on her soul, and when I asked 'By what name shall this child be known?' Aunt Esther responded, in trembling tones: 'There is no name so sweet to me as Thomas Henry,' and by that title the boy was henceforth known."

KISSES RAISE 'PHONE RATES.

Sweethearts Monopolise the Wires to Such an Extent as Advance Becomes Necessary.

A merchant from Uniontown was lately talking about telephones the other day at the hotel where he was stopping, reports the Philadelphia Record.

"In my town," he said, "the telephone company is going to raise the rates for business 'phones from $25 to $45, and for residence 'phones from $18 to $32. Do you know why? It is to keep sweethearts from monopolizing the wires. It is to make telephones so expensive that the young men and women who love one another won't bill and coo over the wires all day long.

"In Uniontown now it is a wonder that the wires don't blush red, the love words that pass over them. The sound that a kiss makes—that ph, ph sound—is sent many times a day from one receiver to another. And such expressions as darling, and dearey, and honey, and sweetheart drown out altogether the plain business talk about the price of coal, and the boom in steel, and the bills receivable that are due.

"So in Uniontown because the young men and girls have been monopolizing the wires, with their sparking, the telephone rates are to be raised nearly 100 per cent."

BENEFICIAL WALKING TOURS.

Autumn Outings Afoot Which Are the Most Healthful and Enjoyable Forms of Exercise.

Walking is an art almost said to be one of the lost arts, says Country Life in America. It is astonishing how few know how to walk—know how to acquire the measured stride, the springy step, the easy poise of the body and the swing of the arms, which make walking at once one of the most healthful and enjoyable forms of physical exercise. For the real pleasure of walking one must turn to the country. Pavements are but dead, unyielding matter at best. In the turf of the country there is a spring in response to the pressure of the foot which is a delight and an inspiration to walk. The purity of the air sets the blood to racing gloriously.

Good walkers find 20 miles a day a comfortable average, allowing of plenty of time for rest and "loafing." Two weeks thus spent will afford memories to last for all time, and with them a measure of health and strength, a quickening of vital forces, a nervous energy which will find expression in increased power for accomplishment in the world's work.

How the Earth Changes.

How does one generation of men succeed another? The fathers are not swept away in a body to make room for the children, but one by one the old drop off and the young come on, till a day is reached when none of those remain that once were living. Just so with words. How does some form of human speech become extinct? About a hundred years ago an old lady named Dolly Dentreath died in Cornwall. She could speak the Cornish language; after her death there was nobody that could. Thus quietly did the living Cornish language become a dead language; and in a like unobtrusive manner have been wrought most of the new beginnings which have changed and are changing the earth.

Ancient Picture Gallery.

A picture gallery that dates from the stone age has been unearthed in a cavern near Eyzies, France. The pictures, which are all of prehistoric animals, were not only cut in the rock, as is usually the case with such representations, but were painted in several colors, and in some instances with artistic skill. There are 80 pictures, of which 49 represent beasts of various kinds. The pigments used, which are shades of red and brown, have been found, on analysis by Moissan, the eminent French chemist, to be ochres mixed with some animal fatty substance.

I. C. T. CLUB PLANS FINE PLAYING FLOOR

Basket Ball Will be Well Cared for at Club Rooms of New League Member.

TEAMS ARE AT PRACTICE

WM. DILKS HAS WON REPUTATION OF MOST ACCURATE GOAL THROWER.

Veterans of Alis Team Are Gradually Getting Back Into Their Old Form—Next Meeting of Hope and Alis Will be Exciting.

It seems very likely that the entry of the I. C. T. Club into the Plainfield Amateur Basket Ball League will be the means of decidedly advancing the progress of that sport in Plainfield. The great trouble heretofore has been to find a suitable place to play. Changes that are planned for the I. C. T. Club rooms now give promise of furnishing the best playing floor in the city. It will also offer increased facilities for the spectators.

According to plans now under consideration, the I. C. T. rooms will not be divided as was first suggested but the playing will be done in the centre of the floor and the spectators lined up on either side. Boundary lines will be drawn five or six feet from either side, leaving room for two or three rows of chairs. The chief objection to this plan, the posts which pass through the centre of the hall, will be surmounted by heavily padding them. There are several gymnasiums through the State which have posts in the playing floor that interfere but little with the progress of the game. These plans will give a playing space equal or larger to any in the city.

Although there will be no games in the league until after New Year's, the Alis and Hope teams are keeping in practice and the I. C. T. boys will soon be getting into trim. In the games that have been played in the league already, the team play decidedly has not been equal to that of the veteran five which originally played under the colors of the Y. M. C. A. and afterwards as the Fanwood A. C. Three of that combination are now with the Alis A. A. but they have not got their hand in yet. The last game played in the Y. M. C. A. gym, between Alis and Hope, showed the best exhibition of team work despite the fact that Moraller was absent. With an improvement in accuracy in goal throwing the Alis boys will be back in their old form.

Judging from the games already played, the most accurate goal thrower in the league is William Dilks. To his accuracy Hope Y. M. A. owes much. He has scored more points for his team than all the other players combined. Of course, this would not have been possible without their co-operation but it is nevertheless a conceded fact that he is the most accurate man on his team. With a little more practice and training, he ought to equal the work which has been made by George P. Smith, Walter L. Long, Arthur Denton and Walter Cahoone, famous in the past. All of these players have, in past years, won reputations for themselves by their remarkable goal throwing. That they have not done as good work this season is probably due to the fact that they all need practice.

The cramped conditions at the Hope gymnasium have heretofore bothered the visiting teams more or less and the acquaintance of the Hopes with these same conditions has materially assisted that team in winning all the games it has played at home. The team work of the Alis five cannot be worked with much success in such a small space while the Hope boys have developed a short team work that has been very effective. A little experience, however, promises to make future games there very exciting as the Alis boys will not be in entirely strange territory and may be able to adapt their team play to the smaller quarters with better success than before. The next meeting of Alis and Hope in the latter's gymnasium will therefore be watched with special interest.

REPEAT SENIOR PLAY WITH MUCH SUCCESS

Large Audience Well Pleased at Shakespearean Effort of City High School Seniors.

IT WAS VERY CLEVER

SELECTED SCENES TAKEN FROM "A MID-SUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM."

As "Nick Bottom," Robert W. Meeker Made a Decided Hit—All the Members of the Cast Did Well—Informal Dance Followed.

Senior dramatics of the City High School lost nothing in their repetition at the Franklin school hall last Friday. The audience, which crowded the hall, found the scenes from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" highly edifying for the members of the cast gave a really creditable performance and several of them displayed talent that was worthy of all the pleasant things said afterward. The limited stage accommodations and the lack of elaborate setting for the different scenes somewhat handicapped them but there was good material there and the entertainment which the class of 1903 provided was altogether a satisfactory one.

Without doubt, the greatest hit of the play was made by Robert W. Meeker, who took the part of "Nick Bottom," the weaver. The scenes selected were those which included the experiences of "Nick" and his friends, his thrilling encounter with the fairies and the production of that wonderful drama in the palace of the Duke of Athens. Meeker's part was without doubt the most difficult of any and he took it with a spontaniety and freedom of self-consciousness that could not help but please all who saw it.

All of the band of mechanics were good but Norman Hill managed to get a wonderful lot out of a minor part and his continual bypiay was highly entertaining. The fairies were good and "Puck" altogether pleasing. So was the "Duke" and the members of his court. Albert D. Beers, who originally played the part of "Philostrate," was ill and Harold Brown and Michael Moynihan divided the part between them. Mrs. Charles L. Lewis acted as pianist in the quartette which rendered the obligato to the play.

Those who saw the first night's performance declared the second was even more successful and there were only words of the highest commendation for the really clever rendition of Shakespeare's famous comedy. There were also many congratulations for Miss Katherine Ball, who did most of the coaching for the play. The members of the class were well satisfied as the net proceeds of the two performances will amount to $120. An informal dance followed the play to which many of the guests remained.
